PREFACE.

In the beginning of my researches which ultimately led to the production of this volume, I had no thought of attempting to write a general genealogy of the Fairbanks Family. My purpose was to study, in a superficial way, the history of the early families, and, particularly, to trace my own lineage. Proceeding with this end in view, my investigations very soon naturally took a wider range, and were continued, with a constantly increasing interest in the subject, till I had practically laid the foundation of the more ambitious project upon which I finally entered with more courage than foresight.

Of the magnitude of the undertaking I had no adequate conception. It is perhaps fortunate that such was the case, for had I been able to estimate or even imagine the amount of labor it would involve, — that four years of persistent, unremitting and often disheartening toil, would scarcely suffice to bring me within sight of the end, this book might never have been written. If, therefore, the numerous descendants of the immigrant family, can read in these pages their title clear to a time-honored ancestry, they may rejoice that, at the outset, ignorance, and not knowledge, or prescience, allowed temerity rather than halting prudence, to carry the banner.

Two pamphlets on the subject had previously been published, — one of seventy-two pages, in 1892, by Rev. Henry Fairbanks, of St. Johnsbury, Vt., entitled "The Fairbanks Genealogy," a revised edition of one which had been prepared and printed in 1885 by his father, Mr. Thaddeus Fairbanks; the other soon after by Charles H. Fairbanks, of Homer, N. Y., under the title of "The Fairbanks Family Record," containing thirty pages. Both of these publications furnished much valuable information, though they related chiefly to the branch of the original family to which the authors belong. By permission of these gentlemen, to whom thanks are tendered for the favor, a free use has been made of the contents of these pamphlets in the preparation of this volume. Rev. Francis J. Fairbanks of Royalston, Mass., placed in my hands an unpublished manuscript, containing a very valuable collection of statistics relating to all branches of the family, which from time to time for several years he had been gathering. For the use of this collection, which has been of great benefit, and for his continued assistance in many ways, especially in solving some difficult problems, I tender to him my grateful acknowledgments.

To carry on the work thus begun, information was sought from every available source, including town and church records and histories, probate records and registries of deeds, genealogies, magazines and other publications, state archives and reports, and especially from numerous correspondents, representative men and women of the progeny of Jonathan, by whose earnest and highly appreciated co-operation the value of this contribution to the general history of the family has been greatly enhanced.

The results are embodied in this book, which is submitted to all who may be interested, in the hope that they may enjoy a full measure of satisfaction in the perusal of its contents.

It would be idle to claim that the book is perfect, or that it is as complete as it might be made. There are still unexplored fields. Doubtless some families have not been reached at all, while there are known to be omissions which might have been supplied by proper efforts on the part of individuals from whom information was sought. A few who have discourteously refused or neglected to answer circulars and letters addressed to them, have only themselves to blame for the consequences. Others who have earnestly endeavored to find their places in the ranks, but have failed, deserve sympathy, and it is hoped they may yet discover the missing links.

Beside omissions, there are in all probability many errors of more or less consequence, as there must inevitably be in every similar work, since, with the utmost care, it is practically impossible to avoid them. For all faults and mistakes my share of blame will be borne with due humility, while a little self examination by complainants, if there shall be any, may lead them to be charitable towards others who have fallen short of infallibility.

MEMOIR.

The preceding preface was written and in type, on the date mentioned therein ; reprinting these pages gives opportunity to record the sad event of the death of the author and compiler of this Genealogy. He left his office on the afternoon of the 21st of May, for his home, in his usual health ; four hours later he was prostrated by a stroke of apoplexy, and at one o'clock the following morning, he passed from time into eternity.

Fortunately for the work which he had undertaken, the work in which his life seemed centred, fortunately for the great family of which he was a member, and for whom he has performed a work of incalculable importance, he was a man accustomed to conflict with obstacles and overcome them. The entire manuscript upon which he had been engaged for upwards of five years, had been in the hands of the printers for some time, 624 pages had passed under his revision and been printed, and he was looking forward to the completion of the book, during June, with much pleasure, as his labors would be completed, and he be enabled to take a needed rest at the old New Hampshire homestead.

Mr. Fairbanks was a man highly esteemed and respected by all who knew him ; a man of fine abilities, with a pleasing manner, a strong personality, kind and genial, making friends wherever he went. It has been the privilege of the writer to come in personal touch and sympathy with him and his work during the year 1896, and to be of some assistance in collating and arranging the manuscripts, and therefore can bear personal testimony to the worth of the author, and the historian of the Fairbanks family. From all sections of the country, from the numerous correspondents with whom he had pleasant intercourse, come heartfelt words of condolence and sympathy to the stricken household. Rev. Edward T. Fairbanks, D. D., of St. Johnsbury, Vt., writes : " I am much pained to hear of the death of our cousin Lorenzo ; though I had never met him, our correspondence led me to feel a personal regard and interest in him, which I hoped might be some time deepened by better acquaintance ; moreover I could not but admire the style in which he was pushing this genealogical enterprise to its issue. I greatly regret that I have not had the pleasure of meeting him. It is evident that his book will be a lasting monument to his memory, all the more valuable because not built for that."

Rev. Robert MacDonald, pastor of the Warren Ave. Baptist church, said at the funeral services, "It is a great thing, believe me, to so live, that something tangible and efficient will be left when our achievements here are over; this book is not the grandest monument that this brother has left to his friends and to the world, he builded much better than that; every one that bears testimony to it says the same, all his friends speak of him as being an upright man, a good man."

Not now, but in the coming years,
It may be in the better land;
We'll read the meaning of our tears,
And there, sometime, we'll understand.

It was the earnest desire of the daughters of Mr. Fairbanks, as also that of his son-in-law, Mr. Willard E. Dow, that the work thus laid down by their father might be carried to completion, and at their request, the writer has undertaken the task according to the plan as outlined by the author. Mr. Dow was appointed administrator of the estate, and immediately made arrangements with the printers whereby he guaranteed to carry out with them the contract made for the publication of the book. The foregoing preface would doubtless have been rewritten or an introduction added, had the author lived, for among the papers on his desk was an extended preface, wherein he mentions by name many of his correspondents who had "rendered the most conspicuous services, and deserve honorable mention."

Whilst not undervaluing the assistance of the many, the writer of this Memoir thinks that special note should be made of the following, the quotations being from the pen of the author.

"Capt. Henry N. Fairbanks, of Bangor, Me. (546), who voluntarily offered to pay all the expenses of collecting information concerning one Maine branch of the family, has expended quite a large sum, besides ordering several copies of the book for distribution."

"Hiram T. Fairbanks, of Petaluma, Cal. (511), has assisted me to hunt for 'footprints in the sands of time' of his forefathers, whose elusive shadow I had pursued in vain for a long time."

"Prof. Henry Fairbanks, of St. Johnsbury, Vt. (628), and Dr. Edward T. Fairbanks (629), his cousin, furnished a good account of their line back to Jonathan the first, and when my work was well advanced, the former remitted me a check as a cure for shrinking muscles and threatened exhaustion, and later on sent another."

"Nathaniel K. Fairbank, of Chicago (789), early sent a remittance to remind me that some other kinds of business are more profitable than the writing of genealogies and selling them at five dollars per copy when they cost ten, and also promised another remembrance ere the book was completed."

"There were missing tribes in Connecticut, connecting links in a chain from an unknown ancestor to Samuel Fairbanks of Ridgefield; at the solicitation of his sister, Mrs. Jeannie Marks Strange, of Irvington-on-the-Hudson, Henry A. Taylor of New York (211), offered one hundred dollars for their discovery, though as he said, he was only of Fairbanks descent in a female line through generations. The task of unearthing them was undertaken by Hon. John W. Fairbank, and after many days he succeeded; this was one of the most difficult cases."

"Dea. Joseph Fairbank, of Ladoga, Wis. (367), did remarkable work for a man of his age (80 years old), collecting most of the statistics relating to his branch of the family in the line of John of Readsborough (151), down to the present time, paying his own traveling expenses, besides contributing towards my further researches in Massachusetts."

"Ernest Hayward Fairbanks, of Philadelphia (1070), has taken a deep interest in the work, sending his check for several copies of the books, adding quite an amount, as he said, for the general good of the cause, as postage stamps cost money, and town clerks will not work free."

"Hon. Charles W. Fairbanks, of Indianapolis (863), though overburdened with his arduous duties, found time to respond satisfactorily to my request for information, with a hearty good will, ordering five copies of the book, one for each of his children, in order that they might be able to point, with reasonable pride to their distinguished patriotic ancestry, contributing also in other ways financially to the success of the work."

"Dr. Henry C. Fairbank, of Flint, Mich. (720), and Aramel Dean (153), his cousin, brought me a bottle of nerve medicine and a pair of 'seven-league boots,' to spur me on when almost in the last ditch, to continue a long chase after a missing ancestor. The lost one was found to the great joy of his living descendants, and brought into the ranks with flying colors. Both of these gentlemen also aided in other ways, and supplied a considerable amount of genealogical information."

"Rev. Calvin Fairbank, of Angelica, N. Y. (469), that grand old champion of human rights under Divine Law, as against the provisions of the natural constitution and state laws sanctioning human bondage, did valiant service in shaking dry bones in the field of genealogy, and furnishing accounts of his near kith and kin.

Though seriously hampered in many instances, by the lack of vital records, and having to trust largely to his memory, he supplied a good deal of useful information, while his vigorous contentions and disputed questions were decidedly entertaining. May his brave life yet be spared many years, and when he "slips into the shining sea," may his soul, like John Brown's, still go marching on."

"Harold W. Fairbanks, the eminent scientist of Berkeley, Cal. (1154), while pursuing his laborious investigations into the geological character of the Pacific Coast mountain ranges, took time to turn his attention to genealogical studies long enough to consider what he knew or could find out about his ancestors and their progeny. He succeeded in finding a few fossil remains and a fair assortment of living specimens of a kindred race."

"Frank Burr Fairbanks, of Chicago (1102), prepared the tables in his branch of the family, beginning with Nahum, of Athol, Mass., and they were written in such fine style that they required no editing. He had previously gathered some of the materials, but had been unable to discover the antecedents of Nahum. Being put on the track he entered upon his work with enthusiastic zeal."

"Charles M. Fairbanks, of New York (977), and his father, Abel W. Fairbanks, late of Boston (608), deceased, aided by his accomplished wife, rendered valuable assistance, for which I am sincerely grateful."

"Rev. John B. Fairbank, D. D., of Waverly, Ill. (795), and several near relatives living in Jacksonville, Ill., and Oakham, Mass., rendered important services, for which they have very grateful acknowledgment."

Only those who have prepared similar works, can fully realize, not only the time and labor put into the preparation of this book, but also the money expended in gathering together the data, and the impossibility for financial returns to come in from the books sold, to repay these outlays."

There probably is not another person in all our great family who would have undertaken this task; in the evening of life he began it; the burden has been laid down. Strange, indeed, it seems to us, that just as he was about to realize the fulfilment of his desires, he should be taken away, but "his immortality is assured, in the life that he has lived with his friends and associates, in his life in the business world, in his life with his family, his immortal spirit is safe in God's keeping." For the valuable information contained in these pages, as well as for his self-sacrificing life, he will ever be held in honored remembrance by all members of the "Fairbanks Family."

ORTHOGRAPHY OF THE NAME.

The old English orthography of the family surname was Fairebanke or Fairbanke, frequently written in the seventeenth century with two small fs in place of a capital F, as were also other names beginning with the same sound, such as ffoster, ffisher, ffarrington, ffreeman; and, according to a prevailing practice, aye and ay were often written for the modern diphthong ai in the first syllable, the same as in Fayerbrother and Fayerweather.

In their signatures to the Dedham Covenant, Jonathan, senior, John and George wrote their surname Fayerbanke, and Jonathan, junior, wrote it Fayerbank. Jonathan, senior, signed a petition to the selectmen of Dedham, Aug. 30, 1658, this being a fac-simile of his autograph, now preserved in the Massachusetts Archives at the State House, Vol. CXI., page 29.

In 1684 John signed his will John Fairbank, but the surname of his sons, Joseph and Benjamin, mentioned therein, was written, with an occasional variation, Fairbanks, and their descendants have always spelled it that way. The other Dedham families and the descendants of George, with some exceptions, notably in the line of Dr. Jonathan, sooner or later adopted the same style. Some suppose the change originated in copying ancient documents, in which the final e was frequently written like the modern s, and so the name was read Fairbanks, which became the accepted patronymic.

Jonas and his descendants for many generations adhered to the original name, or, rather, dropped the final e, but did not substitute s. But about the beginning of this century some of the families, chiefly among those who emigrated from Lancaster and the vicinity to other parts of the country, changed it to Fairbanks. Gradually others have fallen into line, until at the present day Fairbanks is not uncommon in this branch of the family.

Individuals did not always spell their names the same way, and scribes, town clerks and registrars, who, in the flippant language of a modern reporter, "could n't spell worth a cent," were rather reckless of standards, if they had any. Thus in the body of the will of Jonathan, it was spelled in four different ways,—ffarbanke, ffarebanke, ffarebanks, and Fairebanke; in the Inventory it was written Fairbanke, and a certified copy of the will was indorsed "Will of Jonathan Farbanke," while the attestation was "a true copy of the will of Jonathan Fayerbank, senyore."

The following happy dash at the subject is quoted from a letter received from John B. Fairbank, Esq., a lawyer of Deadwood, So. Dakota.

"I hope you will be able to determine the correct spelling of our name, for I would like to know whether I am singular or plural. In the Dedham records I found the name spelled every way that letters could be combined to make either Fairbank or Fairbanks. Our ancestors were evidently not so illiterate that they could spell their name but one way.

"My father used to tell of a tradition that two brothers, probably sons of the original Jonathan, agreed the one to add a final s, the other to keep it off their respective names, so that their descendants could be distinguished from one another, but they left no record of 'which was which,' and it seems that their descendants did not consider themselves bound by the covenant, for I find both names among the progeny of each.

"I have somewhere read that the final s in many English names, as Adams, Stevens, etc., is a corruption. A friend of my father of the same name from North England, a gentleman of excellent parts, used to insist that the name was written without a final s, and in evidence referred to the origin of the name, and said that still in rural Yorkshire the child is often called the 'bank,' and that a fair baby would be called a Fairbank, as in Scotland it would be called a Fairbairn, or in South England a Fairchild, and the names are of identical origin. I don't suppose a congress of all the Fairbanks living, or who ever have lived, could agree further than to ask 'what's in a name?'"

Fairbanks House, Dedham, Mass. — Built 1636-1654.
East Front.

HISTORY OF THE IMMIGRANT FAMILY.

Jonathan Fairebanke (Fairbank, Fairbanks) came from Sowerby in the West Riding of Yorkshire, England, to Boston, Mass., in the year 1633, and in 1636 settled in Dedham, Mass., where he built the noted "Old Fairbanks House" which is still standing as an ancient landmark, the oldest dwelling house in New England that, for the same period of time, has been continuously owned and occupied by the builder and his lineal descendants. Only a few houses, or parts of houses of the same age remain, and most of these are in ruins. It is, moreover, a remarkable fact, perhaps unparalleled in this country, that during all this time, two and a half centuries, the estate has never had a mortgage incumbrance upon it.

This house is now historically famous, and is an object of great interest to many visitors to the old town of Dedham. On the 20th of June 1895, a new Court House was dedicated in that town and Hon. Frederick D. Ely delivered an historical address on the occasion. Speaking of old landmarks he referred to the old house in the following words :

"In a neighboring street stands a dwelling house, erected early in the last half of the seventeenth century. It is warped and worn by the sunshine and the storms of its nearly 250 years. Winter and summer, frost and heat have done much to undermine its symmetry, and its leaning walls and sloping floors are only held in place by its frame of massive oak. Yet hundreds, I may safely say thousands, of men and women come from far and near to view and examine the old Fairbanks house in every minutest particular, while they scarcely accord a passing glance to the magnificent and costly modern mansion on the opposite side of the street."

It has been claimed that this house was built in 1636. This claim has been the subject of considerable discussion among historians, and is disputed on historical grounds. One, at least, expresses the belief that it was not built till about the year 1654. The chief reason assigned for his belief is that the old house is a framed building of massive oak timber, and that there is no historical evidence that any framed dwelling houses were erected in the town as early as 1636. Against this alleged fact is the tradition that the frame of the main part of the house, together with the bricks and tiles and windows, was imported from England, and remained in Boston for several months before it was carried to Dedham.

The truth is that the house was not built as it stands at one time, or in one year; and it is certain that Jonathan owned a house situated probably on the same lot in 1648. In the valuation of houses, made in that year for the purpose of assessing the "country rate," there were enumerated eighty-one houses, ranging in value from £45, the highest, to £2, the lowest, omitting fractions. The valuation of Jonathan Fairbanke's house was £28, and only eight houses were estimated higher. The highest valuation, £45, was placed upon the house of Rev. John Allin, pastor of the church.

Subsequently, perhaps as late as 1654, a large addition was made to the original building, which was called the new house, which is said to have been built for the occupation of his son John after his marriage. In the Inventory of Jonathan's personal estate taken after his death in 1668, some things are mentioned as contained in certain "rooms in the new house." From these facts and circumstances, particularly the fact that he owned a lot of land prior to May 1637, it is not unreasonable to conclude that he built a house in 1636, or soon after, which is a part of the present building, or in a short time was replaced by a framed structure to which the addition was made some years later.

He had a family consisting of his wife and six children, four sons and two daughters, namely, John, George, Mary, Susan, Jonas and Jonathan, who were all born in England. Of the ages of his children when he arrived here we can judge only by circumstances. The dates of their births, except one, have not been ascertained. Mary was born, according to a descendant of the Metcalf family, Apr. 18, 1622. If she was the third child, we may judge approximately of the ages of the rest; but the places of the daughters, as given in the table, may not be correct. In 1638 John was appointed, with John Rogers, to survey the Charles River, and he was married in 1641. George was married in 1646; Jonas in 1658; and Jonathan, the youngest son, about 1653.

The town of Dedham was established and named by the General Court the "10th of y^e 7 Moneth, 1636," upon a petition signed by twenty-two persons, in connection with a grant of land in addition to a "grante formerly made of a Plantacion above the Falls," with "Immunitie from publike Charges" for three years. Thereupon the "Dedham Covenant" was drawn up and signed by the petitioners and others.

The covenant was in the nature of a mutual compact concerning the future management of the affairs of the town. It was signed by one hundred and twenty-five persons, and among them were Jonathan Fayerbanke, John Fayerbanke, George Fayerbanke and Jonathan Fayerbank, Jun. Not all of this number, however, subscribed in 1636, but some of them from time to time as they were admitted townsmen.

The following record is found in the "Towne Booke":

"Dedham. The 23th of y^e first Month called March 1637. The First Assembly in Dedham, by whose names are underwritten, viz^t, Edward Alleyn, Abraham Shawe, Samuel Morse, Philemon Dalton, Joseph Shawe, Ezechiell Holliman, Lambert Genere, Nicholas Phillips, Raffe Shepheard, John Gay, Francis Austin, Willm Berstowe, John Rogers, Daniell Morse, John Huggens.

Jonathan Fearbanke being p'sented by John Dwite was accepted and subscribed."

John was admitted townsman and signed the covenant as early as 1642; George about 1651, and Jonathan in 1654.

It would appear that the lands were originally granted to individuals in twelve and eight-acre lots, for among the earliest town proceedings it was "Ordered that euery Twelve Acre Lott shall haue foure acres of swampe granted in the first grante there vnto besides what may be granted in any deident of swampe that may afterward be layed out. And that also; in like manner euery Eight Acre Lott shall haue the like grante of three acres of swampe layed out as due there vnto."

It was also

"Ordered that euery man that hath an whole Lott shall haue so many Acres of Meadowe as he hath vpland in his first grante for an house Lott: where of part of such pcells of Meadowe as lyeth adioyneing to his said Lott shall be granted to him in pt and the remainder shall be made vp else where."

Before 1637, Jonathan Fairbanke had been granted at least a twelve-acre lot with four acres of swamp land, for in that year he received as his proportion of a further allotment four acres of "Swampe" land. The additional grant was made because "vpon a good viewe taken of y^e Swampes next y^e Towne they are fownd to be soe greate y^t y^e form^e pportion allotted to men will not be neere sufficient to cleere them." But it was provided that a fourth part of such extra land, if accepted, should be cleared every year, and "whosoever shallbe found defective shall for eu^ry defaulte" forfeit and pay for the benefit of the town the price "of an Ewe kid of Eight weeks old."

In 1638, the 30th of the 3^d month, he was appointed, with several others, "to measure out those pcells of Medowe w^{ch} adioyne to mens Lotts. And to measure out soe much medowe in seu'all pcells as is allotted vnto eu'y man according to their graunts made vnto them."

The 28th of y^e 5th month, 1638, it was "ordered y^t those w^{ch} Inhabit on y^e East side of the litle River shall haue for y^r Medowe next beneth y^e greate pond," each a certain number of acres. Under this order Jonathan Farebancke received six acres, five rods. "But by Reason of some Interruption arising by challenge made of the same medowe to belonge vnto some of the Farmes &c.," there was given to him in 1642, in place thereof, "Sixe acres in y^e medowe neere vnto the South side of Ballpate hill."

MICHAEL POWELL, cl^r

In 1642, there was granted to him "2 acres 2 roodes of vpland ground fit for improuement with the plough."

The 17th of the 3^d month, 1644, a grant was made to him of two acres of land "upon the North end of the wigwam playne."

"The 4 of y^e 12 month 1644," he received a grant of two and one-half acres of woodlands.

In 1656, he was allotted his proportion of "Comon town rights," six and three-fourths acres.

The following unique record appears on the books of the First Church:

"Jonathan Fairebanke notwithstanding he had long stood off fro' y^e church upon some scruples about publike p'fession of faith & y^e covenant yet after diuers loving conferences wth him; he made such a declaration of his faith & conu'sion to god & p'fession of subjection to y^e ordinances of X^t in this X^t y^t he was readily & gladly received by y^e whole church: 14^d 6^m 1646."

By his will, executed June 4, 1668, the year of his death, he bequeathed his "whole mouable Estate whatsoeuer, as well within dores as without," to his wife, Grace. Small bequests were then made to his "second sonne," George, to his "daughter Mary, wife of Christopher Smith," to Jonas, to Jonathan, to Sarah, eldest daughter of his "sonne John," and to Ralph Daye, his "sonne in lawe," (husband of Susan), and to "each of the foure Children of the said Ralph." Finally he bequeathed to John, his eldest son, all his "houses & lands whatsoeur, not being formerly aboue (mentioned?) together with all my common Rightes & towne pruiliges whatsouer, to haue posses & injoy the same (- - -) & his heyers (- - -) to enter vpon all my lands forthwith after my decease; and all my houses and yardes at the end of foure mo'nthes next following the same." And he made him sole Executor of the will.

The father, it would seem, had a good opinion of the English law of primogeniture, and so John, his eldest son, came into possession of the homestead. From that time down to July, 1892, the old house was continuously occupied by him and his descendants, Joseph, Joseph 2d, Ebenezer, Ebenezer 2d, Prudence, Sarah (Sally), Nancy, and Rebecca, the last of the family tenants. In July, 1892, the house was struck by lightning and considerably damaged. Miss Rebecca's pet dog, lying under the bed where she was sleeping, was killed, but she escaped with a severe shock. Shortly after this event, deeming the house no longer a desirable place of abode, she abandoned it, leaving a strange family in charge, and removed to Boston. Thus for the first time in over two hundred and fifty years the old house was occupied by persons not "to the manor born." But after spending several months in Boston she returned to dwell in the time-honored mansion, of which she was then the sole owner, and is still living there (Fall of 1896).

John married Sarah Fiske in 1641. He lived for a time, it is supposed, in a house of his own, but later, after his father had built an addition to his house, he occupied with his family a part of it before his father's death.

Two grants of land were made to him by the town, viz.: in 1640, six acres "at y^e east end of his Fath^{rs} Lott," and, in 1642, two acres seventeen rods "upland fit for improuement with the plough." In 1656 he received, with others, "common rights according to the proportion of his estate," eight and three-fourths acres.

In 1638, at an assembly held the 21th of y^e 7th month, Jn^o Rogers and Jn^o Farebanke were "appoynted to goe vpon y^e discou'y of Charles Riu^r with such men as shall by y^e Courts appoyntm^t call them y^e 2^d day of y^e next weeke."

In 1663 he was sent by the selectmen of Dedham in company with Daniel Fisher to examine the land at Deerfield, then called Pet-umtuck.

His name appears many times in the Town Records, and he held some local offices. He "was received into y^e X 4^d 3^m 1651."

George, the second son of Jonathan, resided in Dedham till about the year 1657, when he removed to Medfield (now Medway). In 1648 he owned some land and a dwelling house in Dedham. In that year he was granted a small parcel of land "as it lye against the side of his own yard for an enlargement and to set a Barne vpon it."

He had acquired some interest in lands in Medfield prior to the death of his father, as appears by an item in the latter's will, which see, page 33.

He established in Medfield, afterward Medway, a homestead which remained in the family for several generations. It was held in whole or in part by four Georges in succession, then by Silas and his son Silas, the last of the name who lived on it, about the year 1820. He was undoubtedly the first to settle within the territory of Medway. His dwelling was the famous stone house near the northern border of Bogestow Pond in the eastern part of the town, which is now included within the limits of the town of Millis, incorporated in 1885. That which has been more recently known as the Fairbanks farm was the southern portion of his large landed estate. The Inventory of his estate mentions three hundred acres adjacent to his homestead, and a small lot lying between that tract and the homestead.

The stone house occupied by him was originally a garrison house, built by the residents of Bogestow farms unitedly as a place of refuge and defence, to which they could flee in times of danger from the attacks of hostile Indians. It was sixty-five or seventy feet long, and two stories high. The walls were built of flat stones laid in clay mortar. It had a double row of port holes on all sides, and was lined with heavy oak plank. The stones have all been carried away, and there is now nothing left to mark the spot where the building stood.

In 1662 George, with thirteen of his neighbors, signed the first petition for the incorporation of Sherborn. Again, in 1674, he and twelve others signed a second petition which was successful, and by an Act of the General Court, the petitioners and twenty more of such as they might consent to receive as inhabitants were constituted a proprietor of lands now comprising Sherborn, Holliston and large districts of Framingham and Ashland. After the formation of the town he seems to have been an active citizen, engaged in public affairs. For four years he was selectman, and was chosen on a committee to engage and settle a minister. His sudden death by drowning in 1682 was a great loss in the new settlement.

His son, Jonathan, appears to have inherited the northern and eastern part of his farm, including the stone house. He too was drowned, in 1719, while attempting to cross the river from Medfield. The farm then fell into the hands of his two sons, Samuel and Jonathan, a part of which was sold to their uncle, George, who occupied the southwestern portion of the original homestead, the place now occupied by Frank E. Cook. See History of Medway, by Rev. E. O. Jameson.

George was a man of sterling character, and a model pioneer. His descendants are found in almost every state of the Union, and in Canada and Nova Scotia. Everywhere they are noted for their high character, morality and intelligence. They are proud to call the "second son" of Jonathan their ancestor, and to know that his successors down to the present time have well and nobly maintained the honor of his name. Like all the original settlers of New England, they were at first mostly farmers. They hewed their way into the primeval forests, established homes, and did their share in laying broad and deep the foundations of a great and prosperous nation. But mechanical ability is a family characteristic, and many of them engaged naturally in the various industrial pursuits. At the same time they have always taken an active interest in the cause of education, and they have had a good representation in the learned professions. Jonathan, a son of George, was the first physician of Sherborn, and his son Jonathan followed the same profession. In later generations we find many instances of successful business careers, while not a few have risen to distinction in broader fields of usefulness.

Jonas, the third son of Jonathan, removed to Lancaster in 1657, and became the progenitor of numerous families scattered through the New England and Western States. He signed the Covenant Mar. 7, 1659. In his family there was good ancestral stock on both sides of the house. He was a strong man, both in his mental and his physical personality. It may be presumed that he had received as fair an education and training as were afforded in the new settlement of Dedham where, as we know, the school and the church went hand in hand with the founding of homes, while his earlier education was no doubt begun in England. In short, he was qualified to be what he was called, "one of the fathers of the town." His wife was a daughter of John Prescott, who, as the historian declares, "was a rare type of man, the ideal pioneer." "Not one," he says, "of the famous frontiersmen, whose figures stand out so prominently in early American history, was better equipped with the many qualities that win hero worship in a new country than was (he) the father of the Nash-away Plantation." The story of his life is indeed interesting, but only this bare glimpse of his character can be given here.

The children of Jonas appear to have been well educated for the times. Jabez, his only son who left any male descendants, shines in history. His military despatches preserved in the records show him to have been a man of marked intellectual ability, and he was certainly a hero of great physical stamina and bravery. His children and their descendants contributed largely to the population of Lancaster and the neighboring towns, especially Sterling and Harvard, originally parts of Lancaster. The name did honor to the towns in those days. The marriages were generally with the foremost families.

Living representatives of this sturdy stock are among the best men and women of the country. They possess in an eminent degree the qualifications due to their ancient inheritance and fortunate successions in after generations. Among them are many fine illustrations of the solid truth that "blood will tell," and their blood is not thin enough to be very "blue." Many of the men are athletes of splendid proportions, and manly vigor and intellectual force are common qualities. They are engaged in all the respectable occupations of life; are well represented in the learned professions, while in the arena of business there are conspicuous examples of successful and honorable careers. Some of them are prominent and active workers in missionary fields abroad, as will be seen by their records hereafter presented. From the earliest times they have been noted for their interest in education, and in the present generations they are in this respect keeping pace with the progress of the age.

Jonas was killed, with his son Joshua, by the Indians in the desperate assault made upon the settlement by King Philip, with fifteen hundred warriors, on the morning of the tenth day of February 1675-6, in which from fifty to fifty five persons, out of about the same number of families, were massacred and twenty or more were carried into captivity. His son Jonathan and one of his children were victims of the massacre of Sept. 22, 1697. Thus, except for the escape of Jabez in the first Indian raid, this branch of the family, in the male lines, would have been exterminated. Jabez lived to rear a large family, and by heroic bravery to avenge the atrocities by which not only his own family, but more than fifty others suffered in those dark days.

Jonathan, the youngest son of Jonathan, senior, remained in Dedham, and some of his descendants have always resided there and in the neighboring towns, though many of them removed in early times to other States, particularly Rhode Island, Connecticut, New Hampshire and Vermont, where, as well as in New York and the Western States, a considerable number of families are now living.

He was a man of vigorous constitution, of good executive ability, and a highly respected citizen. He lived to be nearly eighty years of age; and his wife died only six years earlier. His descendants, wherever found, bear the stamp of their rich inheritance of sterling qualities of character, and among them there have been many remarkable instances of longevity.

The following Petition presented by him is here inserted as an interesting historical document.

According to current traditions the remote ancestors of Jonathan Fairebanke, senior, lived in Scotland, but there is some reason for believing that they were of ancient Norman Stock, for it is said that two Coats of Arms, one claimed as belonging to the Lancashire branch of the family, and the other to the Yorkshire branch, can be traced back to the time of William the Conqueror. The names Ferbanc and Fairbrae have been mentioned in this connection.

Of his immediate English ancestors we have but little knowledge. They were, it is said, mostly small farmers and tradesmen, but people of substantial and worthy character. Jonathan was evidently not of the ignorant lower classes, but had a fair education, and was, says tradition, a man of strong common sense, sound judgment and good executive ability. His name appears frequently in the History of Dedham. He held some minor town offices, but apparently was not prominent in public affairs. He appears rather as a sturdy, industrious, thrifty and independent pioneer, content to live and labor within the sphere in which his lot had been cast.

“ It seems evident,” says an able correspondent, “ that he was a man of strong individuality, and that characteristic, at least, his descendants undoubtedly retain to a large extent, for we find many instances of dogged tenacity of purpose marking the actions of individuals in each generation, by means of which they have raised themselves to high rank in their respective callings, and we are fully entitled to claim that the average position which has been attained by the members of the family in the communities in which they have labored, has been such as to mark it as a family second to none in any respect on this side of the Atlantic.”

There are good grounds for the inference that he possessed more ample means than the average immigrant of those days. He was able to bring his entire family with him and support them in Boston till he found a satisfactory location for a permanent home. Having done that, he very soon erected a dwelling house of more than ordinary pretensions, and of such substantial character that it has withstood the ravages of time and been handed down to his successors through eight generations. A few years later he was engaged in preparing the way for advancing settlements in the wilderness on the west in Medfield, where afterward his son George established his home, buying lands, clearing off the forests, and building roads, an enterprise which required some capital, as well as courage. And he left at his death considerable property.

Nearly all persons in the United States, bearing the name of Fairbanks or Fairbank, except by marriage, are related by direct descent from Jonathan, the first, while there are many others who take a justifiable pride in tracing their lineage back to mothers born to the inheritance. A few bear the name by legal adoption, and in some instances, other names have been changed to Fairbanks. One James Fairbank, who lived near Hull, England, came to this country for his health, and went to Buffalo, N. Y., about 1884, and another of the name, a recent immigrant, is said to be living in Boston. John Fairbanks, born in England, lived in Mississippi, where he was married in 1840, and had a family. He went to Cincinnati in 1846, and left that city to go to California, but was never afterward heard from, and is supposed to have been lost at sea. Other families of the same name are now living in England. Ruth Fairbank of Hipperholme, England, married Robert Field, Nov. 23, 1624, and he was in Newport, R. I., Aug. 1, 1638. And Jonathan left behind him a cousin, George Fairebanke, who made his will in 1650, at "Sowerby in y^e Vickeridge of Halifax & County of York"—"Vera copia, Concordance wth the original," was sent in an envelope handsomely addressed as follows:

George fairebanke his last Will &

Testamt.

ffor his Lovinge Cusen Jonathan

Fayrebanke in new England,

Deliv.

According to a recorded deed, one William Fairbanks owned land in Boston prior to Nov. 28, 1650, and presumably lived there, but no further trace of him has been discovered. See deed of John ffloyd to Edward Porter, dated Nov. 28, 1650, Suffolk Deeds, Lib. 111, Fol. 211. This was a conveyance of a "Dwelling howse" and land, "sajd house wth the appurtenances as aforesajd the sajd John ffloyd purchased of willjam ffairebancks".

Daniel and Christopher Fairbanks, woollen waste dealers, live in Milrowe near Rochdale, or did a few years ago, and their sister, Mrs. Frances Fairbanks Lord, in Elland, three miles from Sowerby. Their father was John Fairbanks, who owned a farm in Bachisland in Halifax, to which place his father, Christopher Fairbanks, moved from Sowerby, four miles away, about a hundred years ago. The father of this Christopher used to speak of his Uncle (great uncle?) Jonathan, who went to America. Others of the name live in Halifax, Bachisland near Coventry Hall, Butterball, Norland and other villages in this hill country on the border of Yorkshire and Lancashire. Old Sowerby is now a small hamlet, four miles from Halifax, and twenty-two from Manchester, while Sowerby Bridge, a railway and manufacturing village, has grown up a mile below.

It is therefore not improbable that other individuals of this name, and perhaps of the same English ancestry, have come to our shores. Yet it may be safely asserted that no ancient line of families can be found here that are not of the posterity of Jonathan of Dedham.

FAIRBANK---FAIRBANKS.

Arms : Silver shield, a fess between three hurts azure, a bezant or crest, three arrows, one in pale, and two in saltire proper. Motto: Finem Respice.

THE COAT OF ARMS.

The foregoing representation of the supposed Fairbanks Coat of Arms, is here inserted for what it is worth, on the strength of prevailing traditions, and in compliance with the wishes of others who believe that these traditions are not without some substantial foundation.

These arms, it is said, have been claimed by the Yorkshire families for centuries, and their origin is believed to antedate the time when coat armor became hereditary in England. It is not, however, in the power of the writer to point to any satisfactory historical evidence on the subject. Some investigations have been made by several interested individuals, but, so far as known, they have failed to make any valuable discoveries. Furthermore, if the name of the original knight could be ascertained, it is far beyond the scope of this work to show the descent of Jonathan Fairbanks from him, no attempt having been made to trace his lineage.

The following extract from "Virginia Cousins" by the late Prof. G. Brown Goode, of the Smithsonian Institution, Washington, D. C., gives an interesting account of the situation with reference to the history of coat armor:

"No record of the original grant of arms appears to be in existence * * * * Coat armor did not become hereditary until the time of Henry III (1216-73) and Edward I (1247-1307).

"In the reign of Richard II. (1377-99) and even later, the nobility exercised the right of conferring arms upon their followers for faithful services in war, and in the fourteenth century, according to Lower, and even as late as the reign of Henry IV., it was the general practice for persons of rank to assume whatever insignia they chose.

"No attempt was made until the sixteenth century to register or control in any way the use of arms, the matter in earlier days having been self regulated, since none but warriors were of sufficient social distinction, or in any way in circumstances which would render their use of arms desirable. When civilians began to assume importance in the community, and the title armiger ceased to indicate military rank, this title was coveted by many whose ancestors had never borne arms in battle, and it became necessary to found the Heralds' College, which was charged with the duty of regulating the use of heraldic insignia, and of granting the privilege of using arms under proper restrictions. One of their earliest steps was to organize the Heralds' Visitations, by sending out officers of the college to visit every family-seat in England, to collect evidence in the shape of pedigrees, to record the arms claimed by each family, and to confirm or disallow questionable claims, in accordance with the evidence. Visitations were made to all the counties in the sixteenth and early part of the seventeenth centuries, and the records of these expeditions, filling thousands of volumes of manuscript, are preserved in the British Museum, the Heralds' College and elsewhere, and in many instances have been printed."

It may be added here that the name Fairbanks may have come, by evolution, from an unknown patronymic, and that the history of the arms and the name of the original knight may lie buried in the archives of the British Museum. The crest of arrows was used by several families, the nearest name to Fairbanks found in modern books accessible in our libraries, being Fourbins. Possibly these arms may be classed, with hundreds of others, as extinct.

INTERPRETATION OF THE ARMS OF FAIRBANKS,

According to the significations attributed to Heraldic emblems and colors by the Heralds of the middle ages :

"Silver, in Heraldry, doth represent white, and so it may be said to be emblematick of Light. According to Colombier, one of the most esteemed of Ancient Heralds, Silver doth signify of virtues and spiritual qualities, Humility, Temperance and Truth; of worthy good qualities, Gentleness; of planets, the Moon; of the elements, Water; of human constitutions, the Flegmatic; of precious stones, the Pearl; of trees, the Palm; of flowers, the Fleur-de-lis; of beasts, the Ermine, whch. is all white without a spot; of the parts of man, his Brain; of the period in man's life, that in which his faculties and his experience are most ripened and compleate.

"It hath been stated by a learned Spanish authority, that he who beareth a Silver shield is obliged to render relief unto Maidens and Orphans in distresse.

"A Fess, or band athwart the middle of a shield doth represent a waste-belt, or military girdle, a bearing whch. has ever been held in high distinction by the brave Warrior, since it was bestowed by the Sovereign upon his most faithful knights. The Hurts, or Globes, represent gun-stones, it is said, and were used by cannoneers before the invention of iron balls. The stone of which they were fashioned was often of a bluish or grey colour. Still, being blue in their tincture, some will have it that these Hurts do signify wounds or contusions of the flesh honourably received in battle, and whch. often turn of that colour. This guess being without any certainty is therefore not worth insisting upon.

"A Bezant was the current coin of Byzantium, now called Constantinople, the seat of the Turkish Emperour, and was introduced into Coat Armour by those who were in the Crusades to the Blessed Holy Land, being still borne by their descendants.

"Arrows are of honourable significance in Heraldry, because that they annoy and gall an unrighteous enemy, and suffer him not to approach to endammage the Archer. They are also the symbols of keen perceptions, since it requireth a quick eye and a skilled hand to put them to effective flight against an enemy.

RICHARD FAIRBANKS.

Richard Fairbanks (Fairebanke, Fairbanke) came to Boston in 1633, with his wife Elizabeth, probably in the "Griffin," the ship which brought Rev. John Cotton to the new world. At least, says Savage (formerly President of the Massachusetts Historical Society, and Editor of Winthrop's History of New England), his union with the church there was on the same day with that of Elder Leverett and wife, Governor Brenton and Edward Hutchinson, in the month after the great teacher's arrival. He was admitted to the first church in Boston, "in ye 8th moneth, 1633," and "in ye 9th moneth, Elizabeth Fairebancke."

It is believed that he was a brother of Jonathan, and probably came to Boston with him. He was made freeman "by ye generall courte" May 14, 1634, and was a man of some distinction, keeper of the village Inn.

He was prominently identified with the public affairs of the new settlement, and from 1635 to 1643 held many town offices. In 1637, in the "great allotments to the then inhabitants," he was allotted "three and twenty acres of land." He was a member of the Artillery Company (Ancient and Honorable). He was probably a man of independent spirit, with a spice of liberalism in his character, for like Jonas, of Lancaster, he tried conclusions with the Blue Laws, and in 1637 was disarmed, with many others, for holding and expressing "opinions" with regard to the creeds and dogmas of the church, which were declared by the clergy and the civil authorities to be "dangerous errors," threatening the safety and peace of the community, in other words, heresies. He and they were followers of Rev. John Wheelwright and Mrs. Anne Hutchinson, his half-sister, leader of the sect of Antinomians, in the memorable religious controversy of the times, which "set all Boston by the ears," and extended to the neighboring towns. Mr. Wheelwright was arraigned before the General Court, tried and found guilty of contempt and sedition. Afterwards, at "A Generall Court, held at Newtowne, the 2th day of the 9th m^o a 1637," he was brought up for sentence, and then "justifying himself and his former practise," he was by the Court disfranchised and banished. Mrs. Hutchinson was "convented for traduceing the mi^{rs} and their ministry in this country and thereupon was banished." See the Records of the Governor and Company of Massachusetts Bay, 1628-1641, Vol. 1, p. 207.

In the same volume, page 211, may be found the sentence imposed on Richard Fairbanks and others, as follows:

"1637, 2d Nov. Whereas the opinions and revelations of Mr. Wheelwright and Mrs. Hutchinson have seduced and led into dangerous errors many of the people heare in Newe England, insomuch as there is just cause of suspicion that they, as others in Germany, in former times, may, vpon some revelation, make some suddaine irruption vpon those that differ from them in judgement, for pvention whereof it is ordered that all those whose names are underwritten shall (vpon warning given or left at their dwelling houses) before the 30th day of this month of November, deliver in at Mr. Canes house, at Boston, all such guns, pistols, swords, powder, shot and match as they shall bee owners of, or have in their custody, vpon paine of ten pound for evry default to bee made thereof, svch armes are to bee kept by M. Cane till this Court shall take further order therein. Also it is ordered, vpon like penalty of Xt, that no man who is to render his armes by this order shall buy or borrow any guns, swords, pistols, powder, shot or match, vntill this Court shall take further order therein."

The names underwritten numbered fifty-eight, and Richrd Fairbanke was among them.

Under like orders men were disarmed in Roxbury, Charlestown, Salem, Ipswich and Newberry, for "heretics" were numerous. But be it said, by far the greater part of the members of the Boston church were in sympathy with them.

Mrs. Ann Hutchinson was the wife of William Hutchinson, of whom an account says: "She was a woman of piety, ready talents and flow of speech. It was the custom for the church members to meet together once a week to repeat, review and debate the Sunday sermons, but by their doctrines the women were not allowed to take part in the discussions. Mrs. Ann thought that the sex might hold similar meetings with much usefulness, and she established one at her own house, and soon gained a numerous auditory, at least from 60 to 80 usually attending, and her house became the intellectual centre of the town. She took the lead in prayer and in repeating Mr. Cotton's sermons; after which she made observations and reflections on their tendencies, and gave as her reason for the practice that I'aul enjoined upon the elder women to teach the younger. These meetings were not objected to until she began to make invidious comparisons between the ministers of the colony, a few of whom she classed as evangelical and under the covenant of grace, and all the rest were under the covenant of works." The career of Mrs. Hutchinson was full of excitement and I should judge she was a terror; she was what would now be called a strong minded woman, always restless and feeling a call to do something to make a sensation.

Rev. John Wilson, was among the clergy whom she had assailed. By the action of this church she was excommunicated, and Mr. Wilson in passing sentence upon her, which he was appointed to deliver, embraced the opportunity to manifest his feelings toward her and her peculiar tenets. The sentence was as follows:

"Then Mr. Wilson rose, and in the hush of the crowded assembly solemnly put the question whether all were of one mind that their sister should be cast out. There was utter silence; and after the custom of that church this be-tokened consent. Then the sentence of excommunication was pronounced, and Ann Hutchinson, no longer a sister, listened to these words rolled out in triumph from the mouth of John Wilson, the pastor. 'Therefore, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, and in the name of the church, I do not only pronounce you worthy to be cast out, but I do cast you out; and in the name of Christ I do deliver you up to Satan, that you may learn no more to blaspheme, to seduce and to lie, and I do account you from this time forth to be a heathen and a publican, and so to be held of all the brethren and sisters of this congregation and others; therefore, I command you, in the name of Christ Jesus and of this church, as a leper, to withdraw yourself out of this congregation.'"

When, in obedience to this mandate, Ann Hutchinson, the outcast, moved through the awe-stricken throng, her devoted friend, Mary Dyer of Rhode Island the Quaker martyr who was hanged on Boston Common for witchcraft, June 1, 1690, rose up and walked by her side, and the two walked out together. What a terrible close of a life-drama was this! Far away into the wilderness of those days marched the outcast with her family—never more to be the associate, but the accused of Christian men and women, and the prey of savages. From Rhode Island to which she was banished, she removed to the Dutch settlements near New Haven, where in 1643 she with all her family and household of sixteen persons, except one daughter of eight years, were killed by the Indians. The daughter was carried into captivity, but was afterwards recovered by the General Court and brought back to Massachusetts.

Richard Fairbanks does not seem to have lost favor with the people on account of his "perversity," for we find him not long afterward promoted to a responsible office. He was the first postmaster of Boston, or for the whole colony. In 1639 the inhabitants petitioned the council that a postmaster be appointed. The petition was granted and he was appointed in that year. The order reads:

"For preventing the miscarriage of letters, and it is ordered that notice be given to Richard Fairbanks, his house in Boston is the place appointed for all letters which are brought from beyond the seas, or are to be sent thither, are to be brought unto; and he is to take care that they be delivered or sent according to their directions; and he is allowed for every such letter a penny, and must answer all miscarriages through his own neglect in this kind, provided that no man shall be compelled to bring his letters thither except he please."

How long he held the office the records do not say, and nothing appears in relation to the subject till 1677, when the merchants of the city petitioned the council for a postmaster, and John Haywood was appointed.

He evidently enjoyed the confidence of his fellow townsmen in a high degree, but it seems that a "dangerous heresy" in religious matters was not the only thing for which he was called to account.

He disregarded an order agreed upon "Att a generall meeting," Nov. 30, 1635,—

"That none shall sell their houses or allotments to any new comers but with the consent and allowance of those that are appointed allotters," and he was fined for the offense according to the following record:—

"The 6th of the 4th moneth, June, 1636. Att a meeting this day before Thomas Ollyver, Thomas Leverett, Willyam Hutchinson, Willyam Coulborne, John Coggeshall, William Aspenall, Richard Tuttell, John Stampford and James Penne.

"Item. Wee finde that Richard Fairebanke hath sold unto twoe straingers the towne houses in Sudbury end that were William Balstones, contrary to a former order, and therefore the sayle to be voyd, and the said Richard Fairebancke to forfeite for his breaking thereof XIs."

A man in those days had to be one "of our set" in order to become a freeholder, for at the same "generall meeting" above mentioned, was this "item" in the proceedings:—

"Imprymis. It is agreed that noe further allotments shall be granted unto any new comers but such as may be likely to be received as members of the Congregation."

There was another item which may be interesting to tradesmen, laborers and labor unions of the present day:—

"Item." (It is agreed) "That Mr. William Hutchinson, Mr. William Colborne, and Mr. William Brenton shall set pryces upon all cattell commodities, victualls and laborers and Workmen's Wages, and that noe other prises or rates shall be given or taken."

And another that must have been rather discouraging to lawyers:—

"Item. That none of the members of this congregation or inhabitants among us shall sue one another at lawe before that Mr. Henry Vane and the twoe elders, Mr. Thomas Ollyver and Thomas Leverett, have had the hearing and desyding of the cause if they cann."

The Book of Possessions in 1645 shows that at that time he owned, "within the limits of Boston," several tracts of land, as follows:

1. One house and garden bounded with Capt. Keayne on the north and on the east; Mr. Oliver on the south, and the high streete (probably High street which once led from Summer street to the top of Fort Hill), on the west.

2. Five acres in the "Fort Field."

3. A garden bounded with William Aspinwall on the south and on the east; Zaccheus Bosworth, John Snyderlaut, Richard Cook, John Lugg and Arthur Perry on the north, and the Common on the west. This lot was in the neighborhood of Bromfield street, one of the boundaries indicating the origin of the name of Bosworth street.

4. Also four acres in the "New Fields," bounded by lands of other persons named and by "the river east." The "New Fields" embraced the locality of the present Allen, Bulfinch, Lynde, Staniford and Chambers streets and extended to the "river."

In 1652 he purchased of Robert Turner six acres more adjoining the Fort Field lot. Several deeds of houses and lands, bought and sold by him in 1652 and 1654, are recorded in Vols. 1 and 2 of the Suffolk Registry of Deeds. And Jan. 29, 1654 he signed with others a marriage contract. Lib 1, Fol. 105.

His place of business and his dwelling house occupied, it is said, the present site of the Advertiser and the Globe Buildings on Washington street.

It is probable that he left no descendants in the male line. He had, so far as appears upon the records, two children only:—

1. Constance, baptized Jan. 10, 1636; married March 30, 1653, Samuel Mattock.
2. Zaccheus, baptized Dec. 8, 1639; died Nov. 10, 1653.

CHILDREN OF SAMUEL AND CONSTANCE (Fairbanks) Mattock

- a. Samuel Mattock, b. 15 Oct. 1650; d. young.
- b. Elizabeth Mattock, b. ———; d. 3 Sept. 1661.
- c. James Mattock, b. 27 Oct. 1662; d. about 1690, unmarried, leaving a large estate.

- e. John Mattock, b. 14 Sept. 1669.
- f. Elizabeth Mattock, b. 18 Aug. 1670; m. William Ambrose, 6 Jan. 1697.
- g. Mehitable Mattock, b. 7 Nov. 1672; m. (1), John Banks, 29 Aug. 1694; m. (2), Thomas Webber.
- h. Mary Mattock, b. 13 Nov. 1673.
- i. Samuel Mattock 2nd, b. Feb. 11, 1676; d. 12 Nov. 1689.
- j. Zaccheus Mattock, living in 1686; d. before Jan. 1, 1706.

The exact date of the death of Richard Fairbanks cannot be ascertained. The statistics of deaths in Boston between 1630 and 1810 are very deficient. The deaths numbered during that period about 60,000, and only about 4700 of them are found registered in existing books, and his name does not appear. But he died before Apr. 15, 1667. See Deed of James Penn et al to Theodor Atkinson, Suffolk Deeds, Lib. V, Fol. 100 That deed was a conveyance of several lots of land, among them a lot "neere ffort hill centeyning suen Ackers and seuen Rods or thereabouts as they (the grantors) heretofore purchast it from the late Richard fairbanks, several years since." The deed was dated Apr. 15, 1667.

If he sold all his real estate before his death his deeds were not all recorded, and there is no record of any will left by him, nor of any administration on his estate. Perhaps a considerable share of it was inherited by his daughter Constance Mattock, for the Mattocks were for many years among the wealthy people of Boston.

METHODS OF RECKONING TIME.

The Roman Calendar is said to have been introduced by Romulus about 738 B. C., and modified by Numa Pompilius about 713 B. C. The year was originally divided into ten periods, or months, known by their numbers in order, beginning with March and ending with December, which means "tenth" period. At an early period in Roman history, two new months were added, January and February; but occasional intercalations had to be made to correct errors.

In 45 B. C., Julius Cæsar, using the calculations of Sisigones, an Alexandrian mathematician and astronomer, reformed the calendar. He provided that the year should consist of 365 days (called a common year), except that one day should be added every fourth year, making what is called a bissextile or leap year of 366 days. He commenced the year also with January 1st, the adjustment producing one "year of confusion," which consisted of 445 days. This is called the Julian Calendar.

This division of time, however, was only approximately correct, for it made the average year too long by 11 minutes, 10.3 seconds, the difference between $365\frac{1}{4}$ days and the solar year, which consists of 365 days, 5 hours and 48.7 seconds. The accumulation of the differences from year to year had, in the 16th century, amounted to 10 days, the Vernal Equinox then falling on the 11th of March.

In 1582, Pope Gregory XIII again undertook a thorough reform of the calendar. To rectify the existing error, he decreed that the 5th day of October, 1582, should be reckoned the 15th, thus annulling 10 days; and, to provide for the future regulation of the calendar, he further ordered that every centurial year whose number is not divisible by 400, as 1700, 1800, 1900, 2100, &c, should contain 365 days, instead of 366 according to the Julian Calendar; in other words, that an extra day should be dropped three times every four hundred years, and that the year should begin March 25th. The Julian Calendar so amended, is called the Gregorian Calendar.

The Gregorian style was at once adopted by all Roman Catholic countries, but Protestants, inflamed against Romanism, were unwilling to accept even a purely scientific improvement from the hands of the Pope. Not until 1751 was the needed reform effected in England by an Act of Parliament. A Bill for that purpose was introduced in 1585, but was defeated.

The English Statute of 1751, which took effect in 1752, established January 1st as the beginning of the year, and also cancelled the overplus of time accumulated by the reckoning under the Julian Calendar, which then amounted to 11 days, by making the 3d day of September, 1752, the 14th.

In England, as early as the 7th and as late as the 13th century, Christmas was reckoned as the first day of the year, but in the 12th century, the Anglican Church ordained that the year should begin Annunciation or Lady Day, March 25th, as in the Gregorian Calendar, established two centuries later.

In England, for a considerable period of time prior to the Parliamentary Act, both the Julian and Gregorian methods were in use, to some extent, among civilians. Hence the Gregorian year was called the Ecclesiastical or Civil year, while the Julian year was called the Historic year.

In this country the historic year had been adopted more than fifty years before. Boston Almanacs made the change from March to January in 1687, and the Boston News Letter in 1717. The change appears in our vital records about 1790.

To avoid confusion in consequence of the change, the practice of double dating became customary, that is, of naming the years in both styles, in giving the dates of events between January 1st and March 25th; thus, Feb. 26, 1693-4, which means Feb. 26, 1693, old style, and Feb. 26, 1694, new style. In the old style February was the 12th month, and in the new, the 2nd. This practice continued till the new style was adopted, in 1752, by the Act of the British Parliament.

To distinguish common and leap years, under the present style, we have the following Rule:

Every year whose number is divisible by 4, except those divisible by 100, and not by 400, consists of 366 days, and all others of 365 days each.

To find the exact period of time between any two dates, one old, and the other new style,—Add 11 days to the earlier date, and subtract the sum from the later date.

EXPLANATORY NOTES ON GENEALOGICAL TABLES.

The families are all numbered consecutively by common figures placed at the head of each, and are referred to by their numbers.

Names of sons who appear as heads of families, or otherwise, in the next generation, are printed in small capitals, and the numbers following them in parentheses are their respective family numbers.

Roman numerals are used after the names of ancestors to designate the generations in which they were born.

After the name and residence of the head of each family, follows his line of ancestors, beginning with his father and running backward. The number in parentheses before the name of the father, is his family number in the preceding generation.

The word "of" before the name of the town or city given as the residence of the father of a family signifies that he lived there, but is deceased. When "of" is not so inserted, the person is either living in the place named, or no information to the contrary is at hand.

Since the ancient name of Fairbanke or Fairbank was, in early times, changed to Fairbanks in most lines of three branches of the original family, that style is herein assumed as the general standard from the beginning in these branches. In the exceptional cases the practice of individuals has been followed.

In the other branch, comprising the descendants of Jonas, Fairbank is taken as the early standard, the changes to Fairbanks appearing from time to time as they have been made.

IMMIGRANT FAMILY.

1. JONATHAN FAIREBANKE (Fairbank, Fairbanks) of Dedham, Mass.

First American Ancestor.

He was born in England, before the year 1600. He came to Boston with his family in 1633, as already stated, and remained there about three years, when he settled in Dedham, being one of the earliest Pioneers. He with others signed the Covenant when the town was established and named. See previous history.

He died in Dedham, Dec. 5, 1668. His wife's name was Grace Lee. She died 28th 10 m°. 1673, or 19: 3: 1676.

THEIR CHILDREN, all born in England, were:

1. JOHN (2), died Nov. 13, 1684.
2. GEORGE (3), died Jan. 10, 1682-3.
3. Mary, born Apr. 18, 1622; died "10: 3: 1676 or 4: 4: 1684." She married Michael Metcalf, "2 of the 2 mo., 1644," who was born in England, Aug. 29, 1620, and died "the 25 of the 1 mo. 1654." She married 2ndly, "the 2 of the 6 mo., 1654," Christopher Smith, who is mentioned as her husband in her father's will.

CHILDREN, first marriage:

- a. Michael Metcalf, b. "21 of the 11 mo., 1644."; m., Sept. 16, 1672, Elizabeth, wid. of John Kingsbury, daughter of Thomas and Hannah (Flower) Fuller.
- b. Mary Metcalf, b. "the 15 of the 6 mo., 1646."

WILL OF JOHN FAIRBANCK.

Suffolk Probate Records, Lib. 6, Fol. 487. Proved 19 Feb. 1684 (O. S.)

The tenth day of novemb. r one Thousand Six hundred Eighty & four.

BEE IT KNOWN that I, John Faierbancks of Dedham do make this my last will and Testament in manner and forme following, being sound in my understanding and of a disposing minde, For which I bless God, and knowing the uncertainty of this life, and being by many awfull intimations minded of my great change, shall therefore, God assisting me, endeavour to set my house in order. And First I comit, bequeath and resigne my Soule unto the hands of Almighty God, my Creator, being hopefully assured, believing that I shall receive the full pardon and free remission of all my Sins and be saved by the precious Death and merits of Jesus Christ, my Redeemer, and my body to the earth from whence it was taken, to be Decently and in Christian manner interred after my Decease, by my Executo^r and Overseers or Supervisors hereafter mentioned, and after my debts and funerall charges be paid, my mind and will as touching such worldly things over which the Lord have me steward, is that they be empowered as followeth, — viz.

IMPRIMIS. I give and bequeath to my eldest son John Fairbanks all my rights within the Town of Wrentham, containing thirteen Cow commons with some Sheep commons, with all that do or shall belong of right to them in any manner or kind whatsoever within the Town of Wrentham or adjoining to that Township, to wit, my rights in that last Indian purchase bought of Philip Sagamore, all which I value at Forty pounds. More I give and bequeath to my eldest son John Fairbanks ten pounds which is to be understood because he is my eldest Son, and therefore my mind and will is that he s^d John Fairbanks shall receive of my Estate or from my Executor ten pounds more than either Joseph Fairbancks, my second son, or Benjamin ffairbancks, my youngest Son: And further my minde and will is that after my debts and Legacies and other charges be paid, that my son John Fairbanks shall receive of my Sons Joseph and Benjamin Fairbanks in currant Country payment to make up that Fourty pounds by me given in Wrentham equal with my other two Sons, namely Joseph & Benjamin Fairbanks, and my mind and will is that Joseph and Benjamin ffairbanks shall pay or cause to be paid to my Son John Fairbanks or his heires in Dedham ten pounds in currant Country payment pr yeare beging the next yeare after my decease and so to continue forth on in y^e insuing yeares to pay untill he s^d John Fairbanks shall have received both his ten pounds above expressed, and to make him equall with his Bretheren as above is expressed, and alike my mind is that if my Sons Joseph & Benjamin ffairbanke can pay their Brother John ffairbanke more than ten pounds pr yeare they shall do well, but my mind in expressing ten pounds pr yeare is that they shall not be driven to more.

Item. I give and bequeath to my daughter Hannah ffaierbanks Sixty pounds, and my mind and will is that she shall have her first choice in the movables of the house to the value of twenty pounds, and then she my said daughter to receive ffourty pounds more of her Brothers (to wit) Joseph and Benjamin ffairbanks within the space of Six yeares after the day of my decease in currant Country payment, my mind is that my daughter Hannah Fairbank do receive Six pounds thirteen Shilling four pence pr yeare in the yeares as above expressed, to be paid by Joseph and Benjamin Fairbanks.

Item. I give and bequeath to my grand daughter Mary Sawyer the Sum of fifteen pounds to be paid by my Sons Joseph and Benjamin Fairbanks in currant Country payment, and my mind is that She my s^d Grand child shall receive the first ffive pounds when she shall attain to the age of one & twenty yeares, and so forth on in the next ensuing years five pounds pr yeare untill she have received her fifteen pounds. And if She my s^d Grand Child shall dye before she attain to the age of twenty and one years then this fifteen pounds to return to my Children surviving to be equally divided.

It. I give and bequeath unto Joseph Fairbanks my second Son and unto Benjamin Fairbanks my youngest Son all my houses barns Orchards Lands meadows common rights goods movables cattell debts and whatsoever is not already given and legally disposed of, they paying all debts & Legacies and charges whatsoever, to be in all honest respects divided equally betwixt them my Sons Joseph and Benjamin Fairbanks. And forasmuch as my Son Joseph Fairbanks have already received one of my dwelling houses and Land to it notwithstanding if he shall see fit to choose the house of which I am now posset of and shall resigne that situation that he is posset of by a deed of gift from me his Father to my Son Benjamin upon equall terms as he shall receive the other house, then my mind is that he have his choice of the houses, and that the whole of my remaining Estate be divided betwixt them s^d Joseph and Benjamin Fairbanks as above s^d.

It. I do hereby make ordein and constitute my loving Son Joseph Fairbanks my sole Executor to do and performe this my last will in all the parts thereof above expressed: I do also desire and choose my trusty and well beloved friends Thomas Medcalfe and James Thorpe Senior my Overseers or Supervisors to assist my Executor by joyning with him to help by counsell and advice that all might be carried on peaceably, and I do hereby declare that my mind is that my Executor and my other Children be ready to be advised by my Overseers.

IN WITNESS that this is my last will I have set to my hand & affixed my Seale the day & year abovewritten.

JOHN FAIRBANCK

THOMAS MEDCALFE

JAMES THORPE

MEM. It is to be understood that the division betwixt Joseph and Benjamin Fairbanks is to be equall.

3. Capt. GEORGE FAIRBANKS, of Dedham and Medway, Mass.

(1), second son of Jonathan I.

Came with his father from England and resided in Dedham until about 1657, when he removed to the southern part of Sherborn (afterward Medway and now Millis.) He was the first settler there, and was an esteemed citizen and one of the selectmen, and a member of the Artillery Company (Ancient and Honorable). He was drowned Jan. 10, 1682. See previous biographical sketch.

He married, "the 26 of the 8 mo., 1646," Mary Adams of Dedham, who died Aug. 11, 1711, in Mendon, Mass., probably at the home of her son-in-law, William Holbrook.

CHILDREN, born in Dedham:

1. Mary, born the 10 of the 9 m^o., 1647; married, 11: 16, 1665, Dea. Joseph Daniels, son of Robert and Elizabeth Daniels. He was accepted as a townsman of Medfield, which at the time of his death was called Medway. He was a well to do man as his will shows. She died 6: 9, 1682. He died June 23, 1715.

CHILDREN:

- c. William Holbrook, b. March 28, 1693.

4. JONAS FAIRBANK, of Dedham and Lancaster, Mass.
(1), third son of Jonathan I.

Born in England; came to Dedham with his parents; removed to Lancaster in 1657; signed the covenant March 7, 1659, and was "one of the fathers of the town." He was a farmer, and, it is believed, also a carpenter.

In 1652 he was fined for wearing great boots before he was worth £200, which was contrary to a sumptuary regulation of the government of Mass. ordered in 1651. He was killed, with his son Joshua, by the Indians Feb. 10, 1676, during a raid upon the settlement. See biographical sketch, ante.

He married, May 28, 1658, Lydia Prescott, daughter of John Prescott, who came from Sowerby, Parish of Halifax, England. She was born in Watertown, Mass., Aug. 15, 1641. After his death she married Elias Barron, of Watertown, afterward of Groton and Lancaster.

CHILDREN:

1. Marie, born 20 : 4 mon., 1659.
2. Joshua, born 6 : 2 mon., 1661 ; killed by the Indians, Feb. 10, 1676.
3. Grace, born 15 : 9 mon., 1663.
4. JONATHAN (12), born 7 : 8 : 1666.
5. Hasadiah, born Feb. 28, 1668 ; married John Moore, of Concord, Jan. 1, 1698.
6. JABEZ (13), born 8 : 11 : 1670 (?).*
7. Jonas, born 6 : 3 : 1673. He was of Watertown in 1695-6, when he sold to his brother Jabez of Lancaster land in Lancaster, formerly of his father, Jonas. He died, probably, Sept. 13, 1697, and was buried in his brother Jonathan's lot in Lancaster. See note under Jonathan (12).

*There is a discrepancy between this date and the inscription on his tombstone, which is "Lieut. Jabez Fairbank, died March, 1758, aged about 84."

5. JONATHAN FAIRBANKS, of Dedham, Mass.

(1), fourth and youngest son of Jonathan I.

Born in England ; admitted townsman in Dedham "ye 1 of ye 11 : 1654," and signed the covenant. Resided in Dedham. He died Jan. 28, 1711-12.

He was a soldier in King Philip's War, serving in the first or Mt. Hope campaign in 1675, also in several subsequent campaigns. His name appears in the list of "Assignment of Wages" to the town of Roxbury, Aug. 26, which leads to the supposition that at that time he resided there, for it was the custom of the times for soldiers to assign their wages to the towns in which they resided in order that their families could be provided for. (See "Soldiers in King Philip's War" by George M. Bodge.)

Married Deborah, daughter of Edward Shepard, of Cambridge, who came from England with her father May 10, 1643. She died Sept. 7, 1705 (?).*

*There is a record (Dedham Book, p. 13), "Rachell daughter of Jonathan and Rachell Fairebanck borne 14 of ye 5 mo., 1673." It does not appear that this

CHILDREN:

- a. Joseph Daniels, b. 7: 23, 1666; m. (1), Rachel Partridge; m. (2), Bethiah Breck. They had eight children. He d. Jan. 14, 1739.

 - c. Samuel Daniels, b. Oct. 30, 1671; m., in 1694, Deborah Ford.
 - d. Mehitabel Daniels, b. 7: 10, 1674; d. 6: 3, 1686.
 - e. Ebenezer Daniels, b. 4: 24, 1677; m. (1), 12: 22, 1701, Elizabeth, daughter of John and Elizabeth (Rockwood) Partridge, who was born in 1679, and died Apr. 25, 1706. They had three children. M. (2), Oct. 31, 1707, Mary Partridge, sister of his first wife. They had six children. She d. Jan. 20, 1725.
 - f. Elizabeth Daniels, b. 3: 9, 1679, m., 11: 7, 1705, Joseph Mason.
 - g. Jeremiah Daniels, b. 3: 17, 1680; d. 6: 16, 1680.
 - h. Eleazer Daniels, b. 3: 9, 1681; m., 7: 28, 1709, Mary, daughter of Samuel and Mary Holbrook of Weymouth. He d. 3: 28, 1772. They had nine children.
2. GEORGE (9), born "the 26 of the 3 mo.," 1650.
 3. Samuel, born "the 28 of the 8 mo.," 1652; died Nov. 20, 1676.
 4. ELIESUR (10), born "the 8 of the 4 mo., 1655."
 5. Jonas, born "the 23 of the 12 mo., 1656"; died Nov. 28, 1676.

Born in Medway:

6. JONATHAN (11), born May 1, 1662; died Dec. 18, 1719.
7. Margaret, born June 27, 1664; married William Holbrook of Mendon. See his will, proved Dec. 16, 1714, Suffolk P. R., Vol. 18, p. 204.

CHILDREN:

- a. Mary Holbrook, b. Dec. 18, 1684; d. Jan. 20, 1685.
- b. Margaret Holbrook, b. July 28, 1687; d. Nov. 28, 1687.
- c. William Holbrook, b. March 28, 1693.

4. JONAS FAIRBANK, of Dedham and Lancaster, Mass. (1), third son of Jonathan I.

Born in England; came to Dedham with his parents; removed to Lancaster in 1657; signed the covenant March 7, 1659, and was "one of the fathers of the town." He was a farmer, and, it is believed, also a carpenter.

In 1652 he was fined for wearing great boots before he was worth £200, which was contrary to a sumptuary regulation of the government of Mass. ordered in 1651. He was killed, with his son Joshua, by the Indians Feb. 10, 1676, during a raid upon the settlement. See biographical sketch, ante.

He married, May 28, 1658, Lydia Prescott, daughter of John Prescott, who came from Sowerby, Parish of Halifax, England. She was born in Watertown, Mass., Aug. 15, 1641. After his death she married Elias Barron, of Watertown, afterward of Groton and Lancaster.

CHILDREN :

1. Marie, born 20 : 4 mon., 1659.
2. Joshua, born 6 : 2 mon., 1661 ; killed by the Indians, Feb. 10, 1676.
3. Grace, born 15 : 9 mon., 1663.
4. JONATHAN (12), born 7 : 8 : 1666.
5. Hasadiah, born Feb. 28, 1668 ; married John Moore, of Concord, Jan. 1, 1698.
6. JABEZ (13), born 8 : 11 : 1670 (?) *.
7. Jonas, born 6 : 3 : 1673. He was of Watertown in 1695-6, when he sold to his brother Jabez of Lancaster land in Lancaster, formerly of his father, Jonas. He died, probably, Sept. 13, 1697, and was buried in his brother Jonathan's lot in Lancaster. See note under Jonathan (12).

*There is a discrepancy between this date and the inscription on his tombstone, which is "Lieut. Jabez Fairbank, died March, 1758, aged about 84."

5. JONATHAN FAIRBANKS, of Dedham, Mass.

(1), fourth and youngest son of Jonathan I.

Born in England ; admitted townsman in Dedham "ye 1 of ye 11 : 1654," and signed the covenant. Resided in Dedham. He died Jan. 28, 1711-12.

He was a soldier in King Philip's War, serving in the first or Mt. Hope campaign in 1675, also in several subsequent campaigns. His name appears in the list of "Assignment of Wages" to the town of Roxbury, Aug. 26, which leads to the supposition that at that time he resided there, for it was the custom of the times for soldiers to assign their wages to the towns in which they resided in order that their families could be provided for. (See "Soldiers in King Philip's War" by George M. Bodge.)

Married Deborah, daughter of Edward Shepard, of Cambridge, who came from England with her father May 10, 1643. She died Sept. 7, 1705 (?) *.

*There is a record (Dedham Book, p. 13), "Rachell daughter of Jonathan and Rachell Fairebanck borne 14 of ye 5 mo., 1673." It does not appear that this Jonathan had any other wife than Deborah, nor was there any other Jonathan than his son who could have married Rachell; but it is supposed that he died a bachelor, so there may be some error.

CHILDREN:

1. Jonathan born ———; died in 1677; lived in Boston, Mass.

See administration of his estate committed to his father, Oct. 24, 1677, Suffolk Probate Records, Vol. 12, fol. 22.

2. Deborah, born the 3 of the 4 mo., 1654.
3. Grace, born the 16 of the 8 mo., 1656; died 28: 10: 1673, or 19: 3., 1676.
4. Sarah, born 22: 10: 1658; married David Thurston.
5. Edward, born 10: 11: 1660.
6. David, born 28: 11: 1662.
7. SAMUEL (14), born June 2, 1665.
8. Mary, born July 24, 1667; married Samuel Whiting.
9. Abigail, born ———; died Jan. 18, 1711-12.
10. Elizabeth, born ———.
11. Rachel, "borne 14 of ye 5 mo., 1673."
12. JEREMIAH (15), born 31 of the 11 mo., 1674.
13. JONATHAN (16), born probably about 1677.

No records of the births of Abigail, Elizabeth, or the second Jonathan have been found, and the order of their births, as above given, may not be correct. Their father's will was dated Dec. 8, 1708, and was probated Feb. 14, 1711-12. His children mentioned in it were Edward, his "eldest son," Jeremiah, Samuel, Jonathan, Deborah, Abigail, Elizabeth, Rachel and Mary. His "son-in-law," Samuel Whiting, and his grandson, David Thurston, were also mentioned. Administration was committed to his son Jonathan and his son-in-law, Samuel Whiting. See Suffolk Probate Records, Vol. 17, fol. 389.

Jonathan being, as assumed here, most likely the youngest son, and named after one who had died, and through whom his father no doubt desired to perpetuate the name, received a large share of the latter's estate, viz., "my house and barn, and my land near home and thirteen acres of land lying at the six-mile tree joining to twenty acres of land which I formerly gave him, and a right to take up three or four acres which remain to be laid out of the same. Dividends in full of all due to him from my estate."

THIRD GENERATION.

6. LIEUT. JOHN FAIRBANKS, of Wrentham, Mass.

(2), John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Dedham, Mass., the 7th of the 12 mo., 1643. Lived there till after 1677, when he removed to Wrentham. Died Sept. 14, 1706. Will dated Aug. 29, 1706; probated Oct. 1, 1706. The will mentions his wife Hannah, sons John, Joshua and Nathaniel, and daughters Hannah, Mary, Sarah and Deborah. See Suffolk Wills, Vol. 16, Fol. 188.

He received by the will of his father, a copy of which appears on page 35, all of his real estate, or rights, within the town of Wrentham, and some money.

He married, "1st of the 1 mo., 1671-72," Hannah Whiting, daughter of Nathaniel and Hannah (Dwight) Whiting. She was born "the 17th of the 12 mo., 1651," and died June 14, 1740, aged 88 yrs., 5 mos., 27 ds.

NOTE. It is erroneously stated in the Dedham Records, Vol. 1, p. 12, that he married Mary Whiting. Mary was Hannah's sister, born 12: 8 mo. 1658. See Hannah Whiting's will, Suffolk Probate Records, Lib. 18, Fol. 396.

CHILDREN, born in Dedham:

1. Hannah, born 24: 10 mo., 1672; married Stephen Ranger, Dec. 23, 1713. She died without issue in 1756. Her will dated Apr. 1755, and probated Oct. 22, 1756, gave all her property to her only sister, Deborah Fairbanks. See Suffolk P. R., Lib 51, Fol. 690.
2. Sarah, born 22: 8 mo., 1674; died young.
3. JOHN (17), born in 1677.
4. Mary, born 19: 8: 1679.

BORN in Wrentham:

5. JOSHUA (18), born Mar. 18, 1682.
6. Abigail, born Aug. 17, 1684.
7. NATHANIEL (19), born May 9, 1687.
8. Sarah, born Mar. 22, 1690; married John Adams, Sept. 14, 1713.

CHILDREN:

- a. John Adams, b. June 18, 1715; m. Rachael Adams.
- b. Mary Adams, b. Mar. 15, 1716; m. Jabez Fisher.
- c. Sarah Adams, b. Feb. 15, 1718; m. Matthew Smith.

- d. Hannah Adams, b. March 25, 1721; m. Michael Metcalf.
- e. Peter Adams, b. Feb. 2, 1722; m. Esther Ward.
- f. Abigail Adams, b. Feb. 14, 1725.
- g. Ann Adams, b. Feb. 7, 1728.
- h. Esther Adams, b. Mar. 8, 1832; d. 1763.
- i. Elizabeth Adams, b. July 14, 1735; m. Henry Wilson.

9. Deborah, born Aug. 1, 1692; died unmarried in 1756; will declared, Sept. 20, 1756 in the presence of three witnesses, Jean Fairbank, Esther Adams and Peter Adams; probated Oct. 29, 1756. Suffolk P. R., Lib. 51, Fol. 699.

NOTE. According to the Wrentham Records, Hannah died Sept 19, 1690, but, as her father mentioned a daughter Hannah in his will, the record is either erroneous or another Hannah was born; or possibly it was Abigail, instead of Hannah, who died in 1690, for she was not mentioned in the will.

7. DEA. JOSEPH FAIRBANKS, of Dedham, Mass.
(2), John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Dedham, "the 10 of the 3 mo. 1656; made freeman in May, 1678; died June 14, 1734, aged 78 yrs., 1 mo., 4 ds.

He came into possession of a part of the Dedham homestead under the will of his father and an agreement between his brother Benjamin and himself. The original of this agreement is still preserved in the old house, among other precious relics, and a copy of it, with the signatures of Joseph and Benjamin photo-engraved, is printed below.

Married in 1683, Dorcas——, who died Jan. 9, 1738.

CHILDREN:

1. Dorcas, born 14: 1: 1686; married (1) Rev. James Humphreys of Wrentham May 20, 1714 He was the son of Hopestill & Elizabeth (Baker) Humphreys, & was born in Dorchester Mar. 8 1680 He died before Nov. 15, 1728, when her father was appointed Administrator of his estate, which was appraised at £476—3s. Suffolk Probate Records, Lib. 26, fol. 512, and Lib. 28, fol. 79. She survived with three small children:

- a. Dorcas Humphreys.
- b. Ruth Humphreys.
- c. Mary Humphreys.

She married (2), July 9, 1735, William Woodward of Dedham.

" " (3), Aug. 7, 1751, Andrew Blake of Wrentham.

2. JOSEPH (20), born Apr. 26, 1687.

8. BENJAMIN FAIRBANKS, of Dedham, Mass. (2), John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Dedham, 17: 12: 1661; died there Dec. 5, 1694. The homestead was divided between his brother Joseph and himself by an amicable agreement, in accordance with the wishes of their father expressed in his will, and he lived in his part of the old house. See Will and Agreement, pages 32 and 43.

The estate was divided between Mary and Benjamin by a decree of the Court of Probate, "Dated in Boston the Thirtyeth day of June In the Tenth year of Her Majties Reign Ansq. Domini, 1711." See Suffolk P. R., Lib. 17, Fol. 273.

He married Mary——, who, after his death, married Samuel Gates, of Mashamughet, in the Colony of Connecticut, whither she went with her children. See assignment of her dower in the estate of Benjamin Fairbanks, Suffolk Probate Records, Lib. 17, fols. 441, 442.

CHILDREN:

1. Mary, born Sept. 12, 1693.
2. BENJAMIN (21), born July 6, 1695.

9. GEORGE FAIRBANKS, of Medway, Mass.
(3), George II, Jonathan I.

Born "the 26 of the 3 mo., 1650," in Medfield, Mass. Inherited the southerly part of his father's farm and lived upon it; died in 1737; will proved May 3, 1737. See Vol. 33, fol. 177, Suffolk Probate Records.

Medway was incorporated Oct. 24, 1713, the town of Medfield being divided, and the part on the west side of Charles River being made into a separate town, and named Medway.

Mr. Fairbanks was one of the founders of the new town, and as "a principal inhabitant" of the said town of Medway was directed and empowered to notify and summon the inhabitants duly qualified for voters to assemble and meet together for the choosing of town officers to stand until the next annual election according to law.

He drew lands in Douglas in 1715; and in 1730, 100 acres.

12. JONATHAN FAIRBANK, of Lancaster, Mass.

(4), Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born in Lancaster 7: 8: 1666, and resided there. He was one of the first four soldiers of Lancaster who went on long expeditions; and shared the hardships and misfortunes of Sir William Phip's ill-fated expedition to Canada in 1690. He was killed by the Indians, with one of his children, in the massacre of Sept. 11, 1697, and his wife was taken captive and carried to Canada, but was afterward rescued or ransomed by the government. She was received at "Cascoe Bay, ye 17 January, 1698-9, aboard the Province Gally," and returned home to her surviving children. She married, II, May 31, 1700, David Whitcomb, of Lancaster. He died Apr. 11, 1730, aged 62. She died Jan. 5, 1733-4, aged 67.

He married Mary Hayward of Concord, Aug. 24, 1688.

THEIR CHILDREN WERE:

1. Hannah, born in 1689 (?); died Dec. 11, 1704.
2. Grace, killed with her father Sept. 11, 1697.

3. Mary, born in 1692, and died June 12, 1745. Married in 1713, Oliver Wilder, son of Nathaniel and Mary (Sawyer) Wilder. He was born in 1694, and died Mar. 8, 1765.

- h. Lois Wilder, b. April 20, 1733.
- i. Moses Wilder, b. May 4, 1736; m. Submit Frost, Nov. 17, 1757. Thirteen children.
- j. Abigail Wilder, b. Dec. 16, 1740.

The Dorchester Canada or township Grant, which was afterward named Ashburnham, was a tract of land six miles square, divided under the original charter into sixty-three shares, sixty of which were distributed among the heirs of soldiers who served in the Canada Expedition, except in the single instance of one of the soldiers, Philip Godding, who was living to receive in person that late reward for service to the colony. Oliver Wilder, of Lancaster, received one share "in the right of Jonathan Fairbank who served under Capt. Champney."

NOTE. Historians have been puzzled over a tombstone standing in the old cemetery in Lancaster, in the lot where Jonathan (12) was buried, bearing the inscription: "Jonas Fairbanks who deceased Sept. 13, 1697." They have assumed that he was a young son of Jonathan, and have stated as a fact that two of the children of Jonathan, meaning Grace and Jonas, were killed in the massacre of Sept. 11, 1697. But there is no record that Jonathan had a son Jonas, and there are good reasons for the belief that Jonas buried in this lot was the brother, instead of the son, of Jonathan, aged about 24 years. See JONAS (4).

13. CAPT. JABEZ FAIRBANK, of Lancaster, Mass. (4), Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born in Lancaster, 8: 11: 1670 (?), and lived there; "died March 2, 1758, aged about 84," according to the inscription on his tombstone, which would make his birth later than 1670.

He was a very efficient soldier and officer in the Indian wars, and was no doubt incited to heroic exploits by the massacre of his father and brother, in 1676, and of his only surviving brother in 1697. During the raid upon the town in 1697, when his brother Jonathan and one of the latter's children were slain, he was the means of saving a garrison and perhaps many lives, including that of his "little son," probably Joseph. In all, outside the garrison, twenty-one persons were killed, two wounded, and six were carried away as captives, of whom five returned. Among the captives returned was the wife of Jonathan.

About 1720, the Indians at the East again began to manifest open hostilities to the whites, which soon assumed the proportions of war. There had been occasional fights previous to 1722, instigated by the French Jesuits, and in August 1723 the General Court met and approved of the proclamation of war which had been issued by Gov. Samuel Shute, July 25, 1722. By the death of Gov. Shute the conduct of the war fell to the lot of Lieut-Gov. William Dummer, acting governor of the colony; hence it is sometimes known as Dummer's War. Expeditions were sent in successive years, with great loss of men and money, until the natives were subdued. The people of Lancaster bore their part of the public burden, and probably volunteered more than their proportion of fighting men. Prominent among these were the Willards, White, Fairbank and Hartwell. See Marvin's History of Lancaster.

"First in the order of time of our military heroes, in these days of trial," says Marvin, "was Lieut. afterwards Capt. Jabez Fairbank. He was a famous scouting officer, and traversed large sections of the country to the north, east and west, in search of prowling Indians. More than sixty parties were engaged in this service. Some of names of the men under his command, between 1721 and 1724, were the following: Edward Hartwell, Ephraim Wheeler, Daniel Osgood, Isaac Farnsworth, Isaac Lacain, John Bennett, Joseph Wheelock, Ezra Sawyer, Moses Willard, John Eams."

Gov. Dummer immediately sought the services of Fairbank to enlist men. He offered him the choice of the office of sergeant, if he remained at home in Lancaster, or that of Lieutenant, if he were willing to serve at Groton or at Turkey Hill. He chose the latter, and at once entered the service. He reported directly to the Governor during the war, and the published correspondence between them furnishes many interesting chapters of history. See Mass. Archives and Marvin's History of Lancaster; also History of Groton.

In the year 1700 he had lands laid out to him "on both sides of danes Brook about Thomas Sawyer's Sawmill." This site became the home of the Fairbanks, and so remained for a hundred years or more."

He was elected as a representative to the General Court in 1714, 1721, 1722 and 1723.

He married I, Mary, daughter of Thomas and Mary (Houghton) Wilder, who died Feb. 21, 1718, "in 43 year of her age."

He married II, Elizabeth Whitcomb, Mar. 25, 1719; she died May 11, 1755, aged 80 yrs., 7 mos.

14. SAMUEL FAIRBANKS, of New London, Conn.

(5) Jonathan II, Jonathan I.

It has been very difficult to trace the career of this man, but circumstances and facts indicate that his lineage was as above given. He was born in Dedham, Mass. June 2, 1665. The first historical account of his presence in Connecticut is found in the Colonial Records 1689-1706., in the proceedings of a Court of Elections held at Hartford, May 8, 1690.

The first settlers of Connecticut went from Massachusetts Bay and Plymouth Colonies, and located at Windsor, Hartford, Wethersfield, Saybrook, New London and other places. The next we hear of Samuel, he was before a meeting of the Governor and Council in New London, May 5, 1714, as a witness in an Indian case. Col. Rec. of Ct. 1706-1716. But he must have gone to New London several years prior to that time, for from the "History of New London," (p 431), we find that on the 22d of Feb. 1720-1, the Commissioners ratified a lease made by him in 1710, as follows: "Fairbanks had a lease from Owaneco in 1710, of one hundred and fifty acres, on condition of making and maintaining 200 rods of fence. The feoffers added a new tenure, — a yearly fat lamb if demanded." A copy of this lease is on Record in the city of New London, Conn. These lands must have been near the Mohegan Reservation, in the present town of Montville, half way between New London and Norwich.

He Married, probably between 1700 and 1705, Christian, daughter of William and Christian Chapell, who were amongst the earliest settlers in Conn. She was born "nigh the end of Feb. 1680-1." No record has been found of their marriage, but after a long search, there was found recorded in the Church Records of the "North Parish" of New London, (now Montville), this item (which the New London Co. historian had overlooked), in the hand of the pastor, as baptized into the Church in April 1723, "Christian Banks, wife of Sam'l Fairbanck."

CHILDREN:

1. Abigail, born about 1705; married Feb. 24, 1725 in the North Parish church Montville, Ct., Mr. Jonathan Church of Colchester, Ct. They settled near the Indian reservation at the present village of Uncasville on part of the land deeded by Owaneco. He must have been a superior man, and she a woman of great moral worth, for several of their descendants are noted in the fields of Jurisprudence. Ex-Justice of the Supreme Court of New York, Hon. Sanford Church, is a descendant. No Clear record can be found of their children. They had several sons, (a) Jonathan, (b) Fairbanks, (c) John, (d) Amos, (e) Peleg. Descendants from Jonathan are still living in Montville.

15. JEREMIAH FAIRBANKS, of Bristol, R. I.

27. DEA. JOSEPH FAIRBANK, of Harvard, Mass.
(13), Jabez III, Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born in Lancaster, Mass., in 1693; died in Harvard, Dec. 6, 1772, in the 79th year of his age. The section of Lancaster in which he lived was made a part of Harvard in 1732.

At a meeting of the first church of Lancaster, held Sept. 9, 1733, "the brethren present by vote Discovered y^r willingness that Joseph Fairbank, Henry Willard, Peter Atherton, and Elijah Whitney, all of Harvard, should joyn with others in said Town in forming of Church there." He was a selectman in Harvard in 1733, '5, 1743, '5, and 1745-52, and was Town Treasurer, 1736-40.

He was in 1740 the choice of his townsmen for their first representative to the Great and General Court, but modestly declined to serve, and Peter Atherton was chosen.

He was prominently identified with the stirring events that preceded the Revolutionary War, as a leading man in all the public meetings. He served on most of the town committees that were appointed to protest against and resist the encroachments of the British Parliament upon the rights and liberties of the colonies.

He was one of the Committee to whom was referred the consideration of the Form of Government sent from the General Court to the several towns and plantations in the state for their approbation.

He was a deacon of the church and one of its strongest supporters. In 1750, after some additions had been made to the seating capacity of the meeting house, it became necessary to reseat the people, and a committee was appointed for this purpose, with instructions to "seat the two foremost seats below, Respecting men for Age as well as Pay, and all other seats and persons to be seated on Dignity according to what they payed to the minister, real and personal estate the three last years passed." The report of the committee named ten persons to occupy the "fore seat below." Dea. Joseph Fairbank was the ninth in order. In March 1766 the people were again reseated by a committee under similar instructions. Thirteen persons were seated in the "Fore Seat Below," Dea. Joseph Fairbank being the first in order. Capt. Joseph Fairbank, Jr., his son, was assigned to the third seat below.

The first Fairbank homestead in Harvard is that now owned and occupied by Andrew Fairbank and his son. The house is very old, though most signs of its age are concealed under modern improvements. It was built, probably about 1720, by Dea. Joseph Fairbank.

He married, Apr. 21, 1718, Mary Brown, who died Nov. 14, 1791, aged 91 yrs., 11 mos., 6 ds.

CHILDREN:

1. PHINEAS (Phinehas) (66), born Apr. 8, 1719.

- i. Mary Priest, b. Feb. 9, 1765.
- j. Relief Priest, b. Nov. 13, 1767.
- k. Sarah Priest, b. Feb. 10, 1771.

MEM.—There is scarcely a doubt that "Philemon Fairbank," of Athol, was Philemon Priest, or Philemon Fairbank Priest, as above. He enlisted in the Revolutionary Army as Philemon Fairbank, and afterward retained that name. He served in the same company and regiment as his cousins John and Nahum of Athol. Their names all appear on the Coat Rolls, which see. He married Sally Smith in Bolton, Mass., June 19, 1779; lived in Athol, and removed to Fitzwilliam, N. H., where some of his descendants now live.

This view is confirmed by Miss Myra White of Haverhill, who is at work on the White Genealogy. Polly (White) Brooks married Joseph Fairbank (384) of Templeton. John Fairbank, Sr., of Athol, married Tabitha White for his second wife.

37. JOHN FAIRBANKS, of Dedham, Mass.
(16), Jonathan III, Jonathan II, Jonathan I.

Born in Dedham, Mar. 7, 1716; he lived there, it is believed, most of his life.

In early manhood he was a strong man, but misfortunes and sickness overtook him, and in his declining years he was dependent upon others for support. But he left a son, supposed to have been his only child, who became one of our country's heroes. The record of his death does not appear in the Dedham Book.

He married Elizabeth ———.

6. Reuben, baptized Jan. 1, 1766.

FIFTH GENERATION.

39. NATHAN FAIRBANKS, of Swanzey, New Hampshire.
(17). John IV, John III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Wrentham, Mass., August 6, 1704. He settled in that part of the Province of New Hampshire which is now Cheshire County. But it is not definitely known when he left Mass. In deeds of land made by him he was described in 1730, as of Wrentham, and in 1750 as of a place called Upper Ashuelot (now Keene), in the Province of New Hampshire. See Suffolk, Mass. Deeds, vol. 46, page 183, and vol. 78, page 139. In 1735 he sold land at Upper Ashuelot to Nathan Blake of Wrentham, and he was then of the same Wrentham.

He was a soldier in the Colonial Wars, serving first, while a resident of Wrentham, in Capt. Samuel Wright's company from June 10, to Oct. 29, 1725. After his removal to Ashuelot he, being on the frontier, served in the companies of Capt. Josiah Willard, Jr., in 1748-50, and in Capt. Elisha Williams' company in the Crown Point expedition of 1755. In one instance his name is spelled "Nathl." in the war rolls. See Colonial War Rolls.

In 1752, he was living in Upper Ashuelot, and four years later in Hinsdale, N. H. He bought land in Swanzey, of Abner Osgood, in 1763, and was then described as of Winchester. He sold this land in 1766.

He died Jan. 14, 1777, in Swanzey, and Samuel Wires of Walpole, N. H., was appointed to administer upon his estate, Dec. 31, 1777. Mr. Wires' wife was a sister of John Burt, who married Susan Fairbanks, daughter of Nathan. After the death of Samuel Wires, Nathan Fairbanks, Jr., was appointed guardian of his five small children. Petition filed in Cheshire, N. H. Probate Court, Jan. 19, 1802.

From the records of deeds made in 1766, we learn that his wife's name was Mary, but no record has been found of their marriage.

In the records of the First Church in Westmoreland is the following record, which probably refers to her: "Mrs. Fairbanks died Aug. 31, 1807." It seems probable that she was living with her son Nathan, as there is no record of any other Mrs. Fairbanks being in Westmoreland at that time.

CHILDREN:

1. NATHAN (97), born about 1760.

2. Susan, born in 1761 ; married John Burt of Northfield, Mass.
Died in 1789, aged 28 years.

3. Eunice, born ——— ; married in Westmoreland, Archelaus Temple, April 6, 1791.

They had, perhaps, other children of whom no account has been obtained. There is an obscure tradition that there were three sons.

44. JOSEPH FAIRBANKS, of Winthrop, Me. (20), Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Dedham, Mass., May 21, 1717; lived there in the famous old house, and in Wrentham. March 9, 1770, he and his wife sold their estate in Wrentham to Elisha Farrington (Suffolk Deeds, Lib. 116, fol. 169), and at a later period removed to Winthrop, where some of their sons had already preceded them.

The first mention we find of him as a resident of Maine, appears in the records of the March meeting of Winthrop in 1775, when the town voted to remit the tax on his son's poll.

He settled on lot No. 82, now known as the Haskell farm, but then an unbroken wilderness, and with his accustomed energy, and the aid of his sons, undertook to subdue its fertile acres and fit them for cultivation. Upon this farm he remained until the last years of his life, which were spent at the home of his son Joseph, about a mile distant. His widow survived him twelve years, dying at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Rial Stanley.

The following entry on the Winthrop Records shows the dates of their deaths:

"Mr. Joseph Fairbanks, of Winthrop, son of Mr. Joseph Fairbanks and Abigail, his wife, of Dedham, died at Winthrop on the 27th day of November, A. D. 1794." "The widow Frances Fairbanks, wife of the late Joseph Fairbanks of Winthrop, who died in Winthrop Nov. 10, A. D. 1806, in the ninety-second year of her age."

No sketch of the life of Joseph Fairbanks, however brief, should fail to speak of the remarkable mechanical gift of his descendants. They seem to have been born mechanics, needing only the training of the muscles, in the handling of tools, to become skilled. In the early days iron was scarce, while wood was plenty, and they naturally took to the working of wood. If their neighbors or townsmen wanted a water pail or an ox yoke, cart wheels or a cider mill, a water wheel or a dwelling house, anything to be made of wood, a Fairbanks could always be found to do the work, and to do it in a neat and substantial manner. Their services were always in demand and of great value to the early settlers.

He was married to Frances, daughter of Joseph and Experience (Bennet) Estey of Stoughton, Mass., April, 1744, by Rev. Samuel Dunbar.

The following appears upon the records of Canton : "Intention of marriage between Joseph Fairbanks of Dedham and Frances Estie of Stoughton ent. March ye 24, 1743-4."

The births of the following children are recorded in Dedham :

1. Experience (Temperance), born Feb. 21, 1744-5 ; died April 29, 1769.
2. BENJAMIN (102), born Nov. 20, 1746.
3. Sarah, born Sept. 4, 1749 ; married Capt. William Pullen, son of James and Lydia (Woodcock) Pullen, who was born in Attleborough, Mass., Aug. 5, 1753, and died in Waterville, Me., Aug. 16, 1821. She died in Waterville, Mar. 4, 1835.

Five children, born in Winthrop :

NOTE. Miss M. B. Fairbanks, of Farmington, Me., has collected all the statistics, and prepared the histories of Joseph and his descendants, under the patronage of Capt. Henry N. Fairbanks, of Bangor, who generously paid all the expenses. Her work well attests her skill, perseverance and faithfulness.

45. JOHN FAIRBANKS, of Dedham, Mass. (20), Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Dedham, in the "Old Fairbanks House," Dec. 9, 1718; died Oct. 25, 1794, aged 75 yrs., 10 mos., 6 ds. He was by trade a cooper, and also a farmer.

He and his brothers, Israel and Samuel, conveyed their interest in the homestead to their brother Ebenezer (48), by a deed, dated the "15th day of February, 1764, and in the fourth year of His Majesty's Reign," said interest being described as follows :

"All the Right, Title, Interest and Estate which we have of in or to the following Tracts of land, viz. : the Northerly half part of the homestead, divided as it now is, and bounded with Stakes and stones, containing Twenty-six acres more or less, with one half of the Buildings on the same, viz : the Westerly lower room, and Westerly end of the Lentow, as far as the fourth joist (from the Westerly end) with the chamber over the same, the Northwesterly bed room with the chamber over the same, together with the entry way leading to said bed room, the Easterly chamber and garret and half the Cellar, with liberty of the well, and passing to the same, with yard room for wood, &c. on the South side the house, thirty feet square, measuring from the Southwesterly corner of the house, the Westerly half of the barn, the Northwesterly half of the corn barn and Easterly half of the old house, with liberty of passing from the house to the barn and liberty of carting hay over the above said Samuel Fairbanks' land as hath been usual, and also the lot number eight in Purgatory Swamp so called, as now staked out." Suffolk Deeds, vol. 104, fol. 72.

They received their title from their brother Joseph, by deed. See Suffolk Deeds, Lib. 92, fol. 89.

He married Mrs. Mary Lewis, (Int. Nov. 30, 1753), widow of Isaac Lewis, and daughter of Nathaniel and Joanna (Ellis) Whiting of Dedham. She was a descendant in the fourth generation of Nathaniel and Hannah Whiting, who were among the original settlers of Dedham. She was born Feb. 22, 1713-14; died Nov. 31, 1798, aged 84 yrs., 8 mos., 29 ds.

Her first husband, who died in 1749, left a handsome property for those times. It was inventoried at £1303-12-9. The Inventory mentions house lot of 98 acres with buildings, £612-10, meadow 22 acres, £192-10, woodland 60 acres, £120. Widow's thirds set off, June 30, 1758, to Mary Fairbanks. See Dedham Historical Register, October 1893, pp. 151-2.

Dec. 21, 1753, John Fairbanks and Joseph Whiting Jr. became sureties for Isaac Whiting, as guardian of Abigail, John and Mary Lewis, children of Isaac Lewis, deceased.

59. MOSES FAIRBANKS, of Shutesbury, Mass.
(25), Jonathan IV, Jonathan III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Sherborn, Mass., March 1, 1722. He was a pioneer in that part of Franklin County which was incorporated as Shutesbury, June 30, 1761. Almost nothing is known of his history, but judging from his parentage and the character of his descendants, he was, presumably, a man of superior physical endowment and good natural abilities. In this branch of the family there have been many instances of remarkable strength. The date of his marriage has not been ascertained, nor the date of his death. He had five sons, and perhaps other children, but no further records have been found. He was a soldier in the Colonial Wars. See Colonial War Rolls, Appendix.

He married Hannah——.

CHILDREN, born in Shutesbury :

1. MOSES (143), born Aug. 9, 1768.
2. DANIEL (144), born June 1, 1770.
3. JONATHAN (145), April 3, 1772.
4. ASA (146), born May 1, 1774.
5. Joshua, born Oct. 17, 1775.

60. DANIEL FAIRBANK, of Holliston, Mass.

(25), Jonathan IV, Jonathan III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Sherborn, Mass., Nov. 5, 1723. Settled in Holliston; died there about 1771; Inventory of his estate filed May 13, 1771. See Middlesex Probate Records.

He was a soldier in the Colonial Wars. See Colonial War Records, Appendix.

He married Submit Fairbanks, daughter of George and Rachel, (24), born Sept. 18, 1729, who survived him, and married James Dix of Sudbury, Mar. 19, 1771, in Mendon.

CHILDREN :

1. Rachel, born May 13, 1748; married Jethro Peters of Northborough, Mass., (Intentions declared Oct. 8, 1769), and had six children. He was town Clerk of Medfield in 1801-3. Was a worker in leather.
2. Comfort, born July 4, 1750; married Joseph Seaver of Northboro, (Intentions declared June 1, 1771), and had six children.
3. George, born July 30, 1752; died July 18, 1759.
4. JONATHAN (147), born Mar. 29, 1755.
5. DRURY (148), born Aug. 6, 1757.
6. Submit, born Nov. 5, 1759; married William Parmenter, in Northborough, May 25, 1780.

61. LIEUT. JOSHUA FAIRBANK, of Douglas, Mass.
(25), Jonathan IV, Jonathan III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Sherborn, Mass., Apr. 5, 1727. He settled in Douglas, and died there in 1781.

He served in the Revolutionary War. His name appears with rank of Lieutenant on the Lexington Alarm Roll of Capt. Caleb Whiting's Co., which marched, on the alarm of Apr. 19, 1775, from Douglas. Time of service, 10 days. See War rolls.

His name also appears in a List of Officers of the Massachusetts Militia, as First Lieutenant in the 8th Co. of the 3d Worcester County Regiment, commissioned July 9, 1776. Mass. Archives, Vol. 28, p. 119.

His father, Dr. Jonathan, of Sherborn, conveyed lands to his "beloved son," Joshua of Douglas, Feb. 11, 1753. Worcester Deeds, Lib. 44, fol. 5.

His will, dated July 2, 1781, was probated in Worcester Aug. 7, 1781. His wife, Lydia, and his "eldest son Amos" were nominated as Executors. Besides these, the will mentions his eldest daughter, Lydia Boynton, second daughter, Hannah Whiting, third son, Joshua, two sons, John and Ellis, and his two youngest daughters, Dorcas and Rosanna.

The Douglas Records are very incomplete, and the order of the births of his children, as given below, is, perhaps, not correct.

He married Lydia Ellis.

CHILDREN:

1. AMOS (149), born in 1754.
2. Joseph, born——; joined the Community of Shakers in Enfield, Conn., and became a prominent man in the Community. He died in 1831.

9. Rosanna, born May 16, 1774. She married, (1), Joel Chapin of Milford, Mass., and had one son, Joel Chapin, born June 5, 1805, who died in his 15th year, in 1819; (2), in 1810, Abijah Fisher of Wrentham; (3), in 1823, Capt. Aaron Thayer of Bellingham, Mass. She died in 1858, aged 84 years.

CHILDREN, second marriage:

- a. Sarah Prince Fisher, b. Mar. 17, 1812; d. May 11, 1852; m. John Bates, Jr., of Bellingham, Oct. 18, 1830. He died in 1886. They had three children,—(a), Sarah Josephine, who m. Samuel P. Bates of Mendon, and removed to Meadville, Pa.; (b), Davis Herbert, of Milford, Mass., and (c), John Irving, deceased.
- b. Lydia Ellis Fisher, b. July 27, 1814; m. William Thompson, June 4, 1835; died Apr. 8, 1882. Children: Mary Isabella, deceased, Harriet Frances, James Ellis, and Sarah Fisher.

SAMUEL P. BATES, LL. D., above named, of Meadville, Pa., is a graduate of Brown University, class of 1851. He taught languages for several years after his graduation, and was Department Supt. of Public Instruction six years. He was appointed Military Historian of the State of Pennsylvania by Gov. Curtin, and the State published the five large octavo volumes of his works,—“History of Pennsylvania Volunteers.” He has also written and published “Gettysburg” and “Chancellorsville,” “Martial Deeds of Pennsylvania,” “Lives of Governors of Pennsylvania,” and several other works. He is now engaged on a “History of Crawford County,” which is to be finely illustrated and published by a Chicago house.

Mrs. Bates is a lady of literary tastes and culture; has travelled extensively in this country and Europe; belongs to a Woman's Literary Club, has been a member of a Shakespeare Club for twenty years, and is also a member of the Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

They have had seven children: Edward Thayer, Arthur Laban, Gertrude, Josephine, Alfred John, Walter Irving, and Florence. Their two eldest sons were graduated at Allegheny College, in the class of 1880. Edward T. died in 1889. Arthur L. studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1882, and is now serving his fourth term as City Solicitor. He has been president of Columbia Republican Club three years.

62. JOHN FAIRBANK, of Sherborn, Mass.
(25), Jonathan IV, Jonathan III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Sherborn, Aug. 12, 1729. His estate was divided May 31, 1777, between his widow Hannah, who was then the wife of Caleb Hill, and Martha, wife of Jonathan Bryant, Hannah, wife of Isaac Russell, Elizabeth and John. Levi was not mentioned in the distribution.

He married Hannah, daughter of John and Abigail (Leland) Fisk, in 1754. She married (2), Caleb Hill, Mar. 17, 1762, and had eight children by her second husband.

CHILDREN:

64. CAPT. SAMUEL FAIRBANKS, of Chesterfield, N. H.
(26), Samuel IV, Jonathan III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Sherborn, Mass., July 21, 1720 ; removed when a young man to Dudley, Mass., where he lived for a number of years, and then moved to Killingly, Conn., where he was interested in large land speculations, and became identified with the affairs of the county. During the trying years of the French and Indian wars, he took an active part in the military service. In the Colonial Records of Connecticut, we find that "in 1757 he was appointed Lieutenant of the 18th Co., or train band in the 11th regiment." Miss Ellen M. Larned, in her excellent history of Windham County, Conn., says, "through these gloomy years," speaking of the French and Indian wars of 1754-60, "Windham Co. bore her part with unshaken courage and fidelity; the names of many sons of the leading families appear among the officers and soldiers." Samuel Fairbanks, of Killingly, was one of the captains. Returning to Dudley, he joined the Congregational Church, Oct. 28, 1764, and was chorister of the church for several years. His sons Levi, Zenas and Ebenezer were all baptized on Nov. 4, 1764.

Some time after 1770, he removed to Chesterfield, and in 1776 signed the "Association Test." He was one of the Town Committee of Safety, and appears to have been one of the most zealous patriots of the town. In 1777 he was a selectman. He was a scythe manufacturer.

He died Apr. 14, 1790, aged 69 yrs. 8 mos. 23 ds. His will was made Aug. 9, 1787, and proved June 16, 1790. He bequeathed all his property to his wife Lucy, "for to enable her to support the children she had by me," and named his son Zenas as sole executor of the will.

MEM. A petition for Letters of Administration, by Richard Hopkins, upon the estate of Lucy Fairbanks, widow of Samuel, Sen., filed Oct. 24, 1802, states that he married the oldest daughter of said Lucy, and that he desired the appointment of his brother-in-law, Capt. Zenas Fairbanks, as administrator.

He married I, Hannah Corbin, in Dudley, Jan. 8, 1745-6. She died——.

He married II, Lucy Smith, of Chesterfield, who died Sept. 20, 1802.

CHILDREN, first marriage:

1. JONAS (153), baptized Oct. 25, 1747.
2. ZENAS (154), born Nov. 23, 1752.
3. LEVI (155), born in 1759.
4. Ebenezer, baptized Nov. 4, 1764.
5. URI (156), baptized Mar. 23, 1766.
6. Iri, baptized Aug. 28, 1768.

Second marriage:

7. Lucy, born 1774; married Richard Hopkins in 1790; died Oct. 25, 1856, aged 82 years.
8. BENJAMIN (157), born about 1777.
9. Mary, born about 1780; married Reuben Thornton; no children.
10. Susannah, born May 22, 1783; married (1), Daniel Hildreth; (2), Nov. 13, 1821, Daniel Thayer, his second wife, who was born in Orange, Mass. She died July 17, 1870. He died in Littleton, N. H., May 18, 1880.

CHILDREN, second marriage:

- c.* Eliva Anna Thayer, b. July 29, 1826; residence, New York City; is President of the Order of Melchizadek.
- d.* Lucy Orlena Thayer, b. Aug. 31, 1828; m. William Harriman of Littleton, N. H., Jan. 1, 1860, their present residence.

11. SAMUEL (158), born July 1788; died Sept. 1863.

65. BENJAMIN FAIRBANKS, of Woodstock, Ct., and Sharon, Vt.

(26), Samuel IV, Jonathan III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Sherborn, Mass., Sept. 10, 1726; removed to Dudley, thence to Woodstock, or New Boston, Ct., after 1755. He served in the Colonial wars at various times from 1748 to 1753. See Colonial War Records. The first of his land transactions in Conn., was recorded July 1, 1776. From this and subsequent deeds, we may presume he was a man of considerable property. He responded to the Lexington Alarm. Re-enlisted Apr. 19, 1777, in Capt. Childs' Company of 5th Ct. Reg't, and served 8 mos. Was engaged in the battle of Germantown, Oct., 1777. See Conn. War Rolls. In 1799 he leased his house and land in Woodstock for a year, and subsequently re-leased it until Jan. 15, 1803. Removed to Sharon, Vt., in 1803, at which time he disposed of all his property in Woodstock.

Under date of Jan. 31, 1803, there is on record in Thompson, Conn., a deed of Zenas Fairbanks, of Chesterfield, N. H., Executor of the will of Samuel Fairbanks, of Chesterfield, gentleman, which quit-claimed, in consideration of $10, to Benjamin Fairbanks of Sharon, Vt., and his heirs, forever, all lands that said Benjamin possessed, in Thompson, under Samuel Fairbanks.

He married, I, Dorcas, daughter of John and Martha (Hosmer) Corbin, of Dudley, Mar. 5, 1749.

He married II, Mary Trumbull of Dudley, June 23, 1755.

CHILD, first marriage:

He had but two grand children:

- b.* William Harris Palmer, b. Jan., 1831; enlisted in the 15th Reg't Mass. Vols.; killed in the battle of the Wilderness.
- c.* Mary E. Palmer, b. June, 1832; m. Charles B. Pomeroy of Willimantic. Their oldest child, Mrs. Lizzie Pomeroy Litchfield, is Regent of the Willimantic Chapter, D. A. R., and a member of the New England Mayflower Society. Mrs. Minnie P. Cooley, her sister, is Registrar of the same Chapter, D. A. R.

66. DEA. PHINEAS FAIRBANK, of Harvard, Mass.
(27), Joseph IV, Jabez III, Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born in Lancaster, Mass., April 8, 1719; resided in Harvard, where he died Aug. 22, 1800, aged 81 yrs., 4 mos., 14 ds.

He lived upon a farm adjoining his father's on the north, his house being the first built upon the cul de sac road.

In 1757 he served with the rank of Ensign in a Foot Company commanded by Israel Taylor of Harvard, out of Col. Oliver Wilder's Regt. that marched on the alarm for the relief of Fort William Henry, as far as Springfield. (Service Aug. 13 to Aug. 26, 1757.) See Colonial War Records, Appendix.

He afterward became captain in the militia service, and held nearly all the offices in the gift of his fellow-townsmen. He was elected as a representative to the Legislature in 1776 and 1777, and he was chairman of the Town Committee to whom was referred the consideration of the Constitution and form of Government sent from the General Court of this state to the several towns and plantations within the same for their approbation. He was selectman in 1757, '61, '62, '65, '73-'76 and '79; Town Clerk 1766-1779, Town Treasurer in 1778, and for several years one of the Board of Assessors. In 1778 he was chosen one of the Committee of Correspondence and Safety.

He was chosen Deacon in the church, May 8, 1766, and was thereafter often called "Deacon" in the public records, though the title of Captain was also frequently given.

"Rare qualities were required for the making of a standard deacon, though an air of calm benignity, which nothing could ruffle, was sometimes allowed to atone for mental disqualifications. It was a common adage that there was 'good deacon timber' always to be found in the Fairbank and Whitney families, and there never has been any lack of these in Harvard." History of Harvard.

He married, June 11, 1740, Sarah Stone, who died July 1, 1809, aged 87 years.

CHILDREN:

1. Cyrus, born March 22, 1741; died Oct. 5, 1746.

67. CAPT. JOSEPH FAIRBANK, of Harvard, Mass.

(27), Joseph IV, Jabez III, Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born Nov. 4, 1722, in that part of Lancaster which ten years later became a part of Harvard. He died in 1802, aged 80 years. His will, dated in 1801, was filed in Worcester in 1802. He stated therein that he married Mary Willard (his third wife), late in life, and, in another clause, that he married her in his 79th year. He mentioned his living children, and his grandson Joseph.

He was a Captain in a Provincial Regiment of Foot of Alarm men under command of Col. Asa Whitcomb that marched to Cambridge, April 19, 1775. See War Rolls, and History of Harvard, page 318.

Harvard had two companies, attached to the Second Worcester Regiment, in the Militia organization of the state at the close of the war. He was captain of the first company.

At the annual meeting in March, 1770, he was chosen one of a committee of Correspondence and Safety.

He was one of the promoters of the Social Library, organized Mar. 3, 1798, and signed the call for their first meeting.

He was Assessor in 1752, '3, '6, '7, '8, 1771, '2, '5, '6; Town Treasurer, 1767-9; Selectman, 1769, '72 and '77.

11. THOMAS, 2nd, (164), born May 7, 1764.

A son, Benjamin, was also mentioned in the will.

NOTE. Some historians have erroneously called Joseph, Jabez and Anna, above, the children of Dea. Joseph, father of Capt. Joseph, Jr. The error arose from the fact that the records do not discriminate. Their names are entered simply as the children of Joseph and Mary, while the names of the parents were the same in both cases.

85. CALVIN FAIRBANK, of Barnard, Vt.
(32), Joshua IV, Jabez III, Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born in Lancaster, Mass.; baptized Feb. 11, 1753. He lived a few years in Hardwick, Mass., and then removed, about 1780, to Swanzev, N. H., where he remained till about 1792, when he settled in Barnard, Vt. His first purchase of land there was a tract of 100 acres, Mar. 12, 1792; consideration £140. He was a Revolutionary Soldier. His name appears, on the Coat Rolls, which see. He died Nov. 1, 1836.

He married I, in Hardwick, Jenny Ayers, June 24, 1776. She died in Barnard, Sept. 20, 1803, aged 48 years.

Married II, Elizabeth Holton, of Pittsfield, Vt., Apr. 22, 1804.

There are no town records in Swanzev relating to this family, but, on the books of the Congregational Church, we find at the top of a page the word Baptisms, and below the following:—

July 15, Polly, Daughter of Calvin & Jennet Fairbank.

1784.

May 23, Ebenezer, Son of Calvin & Jennet Fairbank.

1788, Wilder & } Sons of { Calvin and } August 24, Nathan } Jennet } Fairbank.

The History of Swanzev has, besides these, "Calvin Fairbank and his wife Jennette had: Nathan, d. Jan. 14, 1777; Nathan, 2nd, bapt. Aug. 24, 1778." These are both errors. The Nathan who died in Swanzev, Jan. 14, 1777, was a man 73 years old. See Nathan (39). With respect to Nathan, 2nd, the date of his baptism was made Aug. 24, 1778, by a mistake in copying the records.

10. David, born 1790; baptized Oct. 8, 1895. He was in active service in the war of 1812; killed an Indian in single combat. He removed to Central New York with the family of his cousin Joshua (201), who came from Parsonfield, Me., to Genesee, N. Y., and afterwards lived in Deerfield. He married Betsey, daughter of Joshua (201). No record has been obtained of any children.
11. Jesse, baptized Apr. 11, 1799.

86. CAPT. LUTHER FAIRBANK, of Pittsfield, Vt.
(32), Joshua IV, Jabez III, Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born in Lancaster, Mass.; baptized July 15, 1755. Resided in Lancaster, Northfield and Swanzey, N. H., till about 1782, when he removed to Barnard, Vt. Afterward he resided in Pittsfield.

He died in Barnard, at the house of his son Calvin, Dec. 8, 1836, of typhoid fever, aged 81 years. Being sick, he sent for his brother, Luther, to come and see him. He came, took the disease and died Nov. 8, 1836. Luther's son Calvin also took the disease, and died the same day, Nov. 8.

He was by occupation a farmer and blacksmith, and while residing in Northfield, Franklin County, Mass., he, on the alarm caused by British troops marching to Concord, volunteered, and arriving at Cambridge, he enlisted for the siege of Boston, as sergeant.

In September 1775, he had permission to volunteer as sergeant under Capt. Jonas Hubbard, to join the expedition under Col. Benedict Arnold against Quebec, which sailed for Kennebec river to march through the untrodden wilderness of Maine during the inclement weather of the months of November and December. He participated, Dec. 31, 1775, in the unsuccessful assault on Quebec, under Gen. Montgomery, and while in the act of scaling the fortification, he was taken prisoner, confined in the jail until September 1776, when he was transported by water to New York City, where he was paroled and soon exchanged.

He was in the severe battles at Stillwater, September 19 and October 7, 1777, which preceded the surrender, Oct. 19, 1777, of the army under Gen. Burgoyne, after which he accompanied that portion of the army that was ordered to Chestnut Hill, probably near Philadelphia, but on his regiment arriving at Albany, N. Y., he was detached to be appointed Wagon Conductor General in the Quarter Master's Department, to the Brigade commanded by Gen. Patterson of Massachusetts, in which duty he continued, after passing the winter of 1777-8 in the historic camp at Valley Forge, until July 1778, when he was discharged by order of Gen. Nathaniel Greene, Quarter Master General. He applied for a pension in Apr. 1818, and was ranked as Captain, according to the amount of pension claimed and allowed.

The above information is official from the Commissioner of Pensions, Washington, D. C., Jan. 10, 1894. His report also embodies the additional facts found stated in the War Rolls, in the Appendix.

He married I, Thankful Wheelock in Lancaster, Mar. 5, 1777. She was born in 1757, and died in Pittsfield June 21, 1820.

He married II, Anna ———, who died in Castleton, Vt., June 22, 1842.

102. BENJAMIN FAIRBANKS, of Winthrop, Me.

(44), Joseph V, Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Dedham, Mass., Nov. 20, 1746. Died in Winthrop, Me., May 28, 1828.

When twenty years of age, in company with other young men, he visited that part of the Plymouth Grant now included in the town of Winthrop, with a view to settlement. A line of spotted trees was their only guide from Kennebec River through the dense forest. They found a region well adapted for agricultural purposes, and the attractiveness of the country, with its beautiful lakes, its well wooded slopes, and its productive soil, led them to seek a settlement at once. Mr. Fairbanks, or "Capt. Ben," as he was familiarly called, received lot No. 6, in the southeastern part of the town, which was granted to him, April 6, 1769. Here on a fertile spot, overlooking Cobbosseconte Lake, he built a house, in 1777, which is still standing and in good preservation.

His farming prospered, and in 1800 he was paying a tax on two hundred acres of land, including the largest orchard in town, and had money at interest. Besides being a good farmer, he was a man of much mechanical skill.

In 1778 he was one of the Committee of Correspondence, Inspection, and Safety, and, in 1782-83-84, selectman. He was treasurer for four years, and also rendered other public service to the town. Upright in character, benevolent and helpful to all in need or in trouble, he lived a long and useful life.

In a quiet country graveyard, upon land once a part of his farm, is erected a simple stone tablet, upon which are inscribed these words :

"In memory of Mr. Benjamin Fairbanks who died May 28, 1828, aged 81 yrs. and 6 mos. He came into the town, now Winthrop, in May 1766, and was the fourth settler, and resided on the same farm he first took up until his death, being 62 years. As a man he was a kind husband, tender parent, and uncommonly benevolent to the poor."

He married I, on Martha's Vineyard, Oct. 29, 1772, Keturah, daughter of Joseph and Deborah Luce ; she was born June 25, 1749, and died Apr. 7, 1807. He married II, May 17, 1808, Lydia White, who died June 15, 1820. He married III, Feb. 8, 1821, Sally Blue, who was born in Deerfield, N. H., Jan. 4, 1775. She afterward married Benjamin Ayer.

103. JOSEPH FAIRBANKS, of Winthrop, Me.
 (44), Joseph V, Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Dedham, Mass., Aug. 4, 1751.

He went, like the other members of his family, to the District of Maine, but the date of his removal is uncertain. Before 1779, however, he was living with his father, on lot No. 82, in the western part of the town of Winthrop, and, under date of August 22, 1780, he purchased of Jeremiah Hall one half of lot No. 83, with dwelling house thereon. Lincoln Co. Deeds, Lib. 15, fol. 45. From the description of a road laid out in the spring of 1783, near his farm, it is evident that he had then settled on what is now known as the Moore farm, a mile or more distant, where his life was spent.

By the exercise of marked industry and thrift, he became a successful husbandman, with a farm under good cultivation and well-stocked; but during the early days his family suffered many of the privations and hardships incident to pioneer life.

In 1782 Mr. Fairbanks was chosen surveyor of the highway; in 1790, school committee, and in 1791, tything man. He was the first warden of the town and a deacon of the Baptist church in Wayne,—a man of stern faith and a strict disciplinarian. In his youth he was apprenticed to a hard taskmaster, and the treatment and influences he was then subjected to, affected his whole life.

He married, Oct. 16, 1776, Sibbil (Sybil), daughter of Phineas and Joanna (Lane) Grover, of Norton, Mass. She was born Sept. 30, 1756, and died May 11, 1807. He died July 4, 1807.

104. COL. NATHANIEL FAIRBANKS, of Winthrop, Me.
(44), Joseph V, Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Dedham, Mass., July 15, 1754.

He was closely identified with the town of Winthrop from its beginning. A zealous and far-seeing guardian of its interests, his influence was felt in promoting its growth and in shaping its future.

In a letter of historical value, written in 1830, he says his first visit was made to Pondtown in 1767, "When there was no road, only a spotted line between the settlement and Kennebec river." In another visit, the following year, he notes the advance made, and adds: "In the spring of 1769, I went to the Westward, and did not return until November 1774. I then found the place incorporated by the name of Winthrop, with a large population."

He settled in what has been since known as the "Metcalf neighborhood," then and for many years after, the political, religious, and business center of the town. In 1778 he built a dwelling house which is now standing, in good preservation, and here entertained Talleyrand, the French diplomatist, and the Duke of Orleans,— afterwards Louis Phillippe,— as they journeyed through the country in 1794. The same year he put in operation a tannery, the first, it is claimed, in what is now Kennebec County, which he conducted with profit until his removal to the village, in 1800.

Upon the news of the fight at Lexington, "Nathaniel Fairbanks and eighteen other young men repaired to the headquarters of the Provincial Army at Cambridge, to defend their beloved country." He enlisted in Capt. Samuel McCobb's company, Col. John Nixon's regiment, (See War Rolls), and was afterwards a member of Benedict Arnold's famous expedition up the Kennebec to Quebec.

Upon the return of Col. Enos' command to which he belonged, young Fairbanks took part in the siege of Boston, and at the request of his officers, served six weeks after his term had expired. His name appears on the Coat Rolls, which see. He received a Captain's commission from Gov. Hancock in 1788, and was the first man in Winthrop to be commissioned Colonel of a regiment. He held many positions of trust and responsibility, and received almost every office within the gift of the town. He was for nine years a Representative to the General Court, and was a delegate to the Portland convention in 1794.

Engaging in manner, commanding in mien, he could entertain in private conversation, or preside over a public meeting, with ease and grace. History was his favorite reading, but he ever took an interest in politics and the events of the day. His grandchildren were aware of his talent for story telling, and delighted to listen to the thrilling tales of his early hunting exploits, for in the pioneer days he was a hunter of no small repute.

In 1814 Col. Fairbanks removed to Wayne, where he was also active in public affairs. His sound judgment, his executive ability, and withal his charming yet dignified personality, served to make him one of the most important characters of his time and place. See History of Winthrop.

He married I, Oct. 21, 1778, Susanna, daughter of Dr. Joseph and Hannah (Haven) Metcalf, of Wrentham, Mass. She was born May 27, 1759, and died in Franklin, Mass., Sept. 24, 1791. He married II, Jan. 1, 1793, Lydia, daughter of Jacob and Anna (Waterman) Chipman, and a lineal descendant of the Pilgrim John Howland. She was born in Halifax, Mass., Jan. 11, 1767, and died in Wayne, Me., Aug. 23, 1855.

105. ELIJAH FAIRBANKS, of Winthrop, Me.
(44), Joseph V, Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

He was born in Wrentham, Mass., Sept. 16, 1756, and at the age of eighteen migrated, like his brothers, to Winthrop. In the winter of 1777, he entered the Revolutionary army, and served three months, as a private, in Capt. Dennis Getchell's Co., Col. Joseph North's Regt. June 28, 1779, he enlisted in Capt. John Blunt's Co., Col. Samuel McCobb's Regt., and took part in the Bagaduce expedition. In 1787, the town voted him £1, "for boarding himself at Cambridge," and later he received a pension from the United States.

He was a farmer, and, as early as 1779, purchased and made improvements on the two hundred acre lot, south of, and adjoining his father's, but subsequently settled in the southeastern part of the town, on the farm bought of Timothy Foster, Jr., where he erected buildings and made his home. He owned a large estate, and as his five sons grew to manhood, he was enabled to give each a tract of land for a farm. He served the town as selectman and assessor, in 1802 and 1811.

He married, in 1781, Elizabeth, daughter of Peter and Elizabeth (?) Hopkins, who was born May 14, 1761, and died July 27, 1838. He died in Winthrop, May 1, 1836.

6. Jason, born Sept. 17, 1796.

107. ABNER FAIRBANKS, of Dedham, Mass.

(45), John V, Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Dedham, Oct. 21, 1758. He resided in Dedham, South Parish; was mostly engaged in farming; died Aug. 23, 1803, aged 44 yrs. 10 mos. 2 ds.

His will, dated Aug. 4, 1803, was probated Sept. 6, 1803. The Inventory of his estate amounted to $5,581.62. See Norfolk Probate Records, No. 6422.

Like all of his ancestors, from Jonathan I, down, he was in comparatively independent circumstances, and he was a man of strict probity and a worthy citizen.

He was a soldier in the Revolutionary War. Enlisted, first, for service at Castle Island, Dec. 11, 1776, in Capt. Ebenezer Battle's Co., Col. William McIntosh's Regiment; served under command of Lieut. Col. Weld; was discharged Dec. 30, 1776; time of service, 19 days.

He next enlisted Apr. 2, 1778, for three months, for Guard Service in and about Boston, in Capt. Nathaniel Heath's Co., Col. Jonathan Reed's Regiment (First Reg. Guards). See Muster Roll, dated at Boston, May 14, 1778; time of service at that date, 1 month, 12 days. See War Rolls.

He enlisted, again, for service in Rhode Island, on an alarm, Aug. 1, 1778, in Capt. Ebenezer Everett's Co., Col. McIntosh's Regiment, and was discharged Sept. 14, 1778; time of service 15 days.

He married, Sept. 30, 1795, Becca Felch, of Walpole, Mass., daughter of Stephen and Hannah Felch. She was born in Walpole, "5 h. o'clock, 23 m., A. M.," Aug. 3, 1771, and died Sept. 1, 1858, aged 87 yrs. 28 ds., having survived her husband fifty-five years. She continued to live on the homestead till her death.

CHILDREN:

1. ABNER (262), born Mar. 6, 1796.
2. JOEL (263), born Aug. 15, 1797.
3. JESSE (264), born Oct. 21, 1800.
4. Warren, born Aug. 21, 1802; died, unmarried, May 3, 1884, aged 81 yrs. 8 mos. 12 ds. He was an industrious man, but somewhat eccentric.

He lived in the old house alone after the death of his mother, till a few months before he died, when, sick and weak in body and mind by reason of age, he applied to the town officers to take care of him, saying he had some money in bank and some buried in the cellar. They provided a comfortable home for him in the family of a neighbor; the money (several hundred dollars) which he had secreted, and which was found, being more than sufficient to support him during the remainder of his life. Administration was granted upon his estate soon after his death.

108. ISRAEL FAIRBANKS, of Dedham, Mass.

(46), Israel V, Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born Jan. 10, 1755; died Sept. 16, 1818.

128. RUFUS FAIRBANKS, of Halifax, Nova Scotia.
 (54), Eleazer V, Eleasur IV, Eliesur III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Killingly, Conn., October 20, 1759 ; died in Halifax, July 7, 1842, aged 83 years. He was graduated at Dartmouth College in 1784, and then joined his uncle Joseph Fairbanks in Halifax, Nova Scotia. A man of much ability and force of character, he was a useful and public spirited citizen of the young city by the sea, and a prominent magistrate. He inherited a large property from his uncle, on which he erected several buildings. He gave his numerous family every advantage in the way of education that was within his reach, and left his children the heritage of an upright and honorable name.

He married, Nov. 17, 1785, Ann Prescott, who was born in Halifax, 12 October, 1766, and died September 1, 1850, aged 85 years. She was a daughter of Jonathan Prescott, who was born in Littleton, Mass., May 24, 1725. Her mother was Ann Blackden. The Prescotts and Blackdens were families of high standing.

129. ASA FAIRBANKS, of Dublin, N. H.
(55), Ebenezer V, Eleasur IV, Eliesur III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Sherborn, Mass. (now Medway), Mar. 4, 1762; removed to Dublin in 1784, and settled on Lot 3, Range 2, which was purchased by his father. He died there July 26, 1819, aged 57 yrs. 4 mos. 22 ds. He enlisted in the service of his country at the age of fourteen, and performed guard duty around military stores in Sherborn during one summer season. At the age of sixteen he enlisted again, and joined the army in Rhode Island. He was there employed, a portion of the time, as a ferryman between Tiverton and Greenwich, transporting soldiers, horses, provisions, ammunition, etc. On one occasion he was ordered to take a load of soldiers across the river by night, in company with six other boats. During the passage a severe tempest arose. It was stormy and dark. They lost their pilot and lights, and in this condition they were tossed about by the waves, not knowing where they were or whither they were going. In the course of the night they were drifted upon an island where they found another boat load in the same condition. Only one boat of the seven found its way that night across the river. When morning came, they discovered they were near the enemy. As boats crossed and recrossed the river they made signals of distress, but were not relieved till they had passed two days and two nights without food, or the means of making a fire to dry themselves. They were supposed by their officers to be lost.

In the year 1780 he re-enlisted for six months, and served a part of the time at West Point. He was there when Arnold attempted to give it into the hands of the British. See War Rolls.

He married, Apr. 28, 1784, Hepzibah Adams, daughter of Capt. Moses Adams. She was born in Sherborn, Dec. 8, 1761. Soon after their marriage they settled in Dublin, and lived at first in a log cabin, without chimney or doors. They cooked their food for two or three months by the side of a log in the open air.

130. JOSEPH FAIRBANKS, of Brimfield, Mass.
(56), Ebenezer V, Eleasur IV, Eliesur III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Sherborn, where his father and many others of the name had made an honorable record. When he was twenty years old, his uncle Joseph, who had received a lot of land in Halifax, N. S., in recognition of his services under the Government of Massachusetts, in reducing the Island of Cape Breton, sent for him to go and live with him. The vessel in which he took passage from Boston, was forced to go back for repairs, and the winter coming on he went home. The next spring his father moved to Brimfield, and he gave up the opportunity at Halifax to his cousin Rufus. After assisting his father in the new home, he also bought a farm in Brimfield. He was not only a farmer, but, like most of the family, naturally a mechanic, and buying a set of carpenter's tools, found profitable employment in building. Having Mr. and Mrs. Paddock, his wife's parents, in the family, through many years of expensive illness, he had slow work in paying for his farm, but it was well stocked, so that, when in 1815 he decided to move to Vermont, where his brother-in-law, Judge Paddock, and his son Erastus were already established, the farm sold for $1,800, and with the avails of his furniture and stock he had enough to purchase a small water-power, and timber with which he and his son built a dam, a saw mill, a grist mill, and wagon shop. The family endured the hardships of pioneer life, together with the special discomfort of snow storms and frosts every month of the first year. The growing prosperity of the following years was due to his ability as well as to that of his sons. He was a manly man, of the best New England type, much respected, and of great influence. He died suddenly, Sept. 27, 1846. His wife, to whom not less than to himself the sons owed their strength of character, died at the advanced age of ninety-three.

He married, Oct. 21, 1790, Phebe, daughter of James and Ann Paddock, of Holland, Mass., whose ancestor came to this country with Gov. Carver. She was born Sept. 6, 1760, and died May 5, 1853. The Paddock family gave many honored citizens to Vermont.

137. DANIEL FAIRBANK, of Fillmore, Ill.

(57), Jabez V, George IV, Jonathan III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Framingham, Mass., March 21, 1765. Lived with his parents on the Brinley farm in Framingham until his marriage, when he removed to Townsend, Mass., afterwards removing to Rindge, N. H., Putney, Vt. and later to Gilsum, N. H. He lived on the Randall place in Gilsum, in the edge of Keene. His family record appears, with some errors, in the History of Gilsum, N. H.

In the summer of 1838 he, with all his family, and grandchildren consisting of five families of twenty persons, emigrated to Fillmore, Ill. The journey proved too much for the aged mother and the youngest daughter, Emily, they both dying soon after their arrival in their new home. The father survived them but one year, and died after 75 years of a life of privation and toil. Both parents were members of the Methodist church, the father being an exhorter and an authority in the councils of the church. All of the sons became preachers in the church of that denomination.

Married Zerviah (Brown) Fairbank, widow of Luke Fairbank (315) July 3, 1809. She died in Fillmore, July, 1838. He died August 1839.

CHILDREN :

CHILDREN:

- a. Lucinda B. Robertson, b. Sept. 19, 1840; m. Edward Smith Waite. Resides in Rockton, Ill.
- b. Timothy M. Robertson, b. Aug. 25, 1842. Resides in Rockton, Ill.
- c. Hannah Z. Robertson, b. July 11, 1845; m. Philip Gleasman; resides in Latham, Ill.
- d. Emily A. Robertson, b. Oct. 5, 1848; m. Dwight Talcott; resides in Talcott, So. Dakota.
- e. Ellen M. Robertson, b. Apr. 13, 1851; d. Feb. 7, 1882.
- f. Adelia P. Robertson, b. March 30, 1854; m. Adoniram Judson Burtch; residence, Osage, Iowa. He is a prosperous farmer, and Deacon in the Baptist Church. Three children, — Mary, Judson Glen, Charles Robertson.

4. Daniel, born Dec. 2, 1816. The following is from an obituary notice found in the General Minutes of Methodist General Conference for 1855. He was at the time of his death a member of the Illinois Conference.

"Rev. Daniel Fairbank was born in Townsend, Mass., Dec. 2, 1816. He was converted and joined the Methodist Episcopal Church in 1830, under the ministry of Rev. N. B. Spalding. He emigrated to the State of Illinois in 1838, was licensed to exhort in 1848, and was employed by Rev. C. Holliday to travel the Carlinville Circuit the last quarter of that year. At the ensuing session of the Illinois Conference he was admitted on trial, and appointed to Upper Alton; after which he traveled Carlyle, Staunton, Jonesboro', Metropolis, Fairfield, Shawneetown, Edwardsville, Lebanon, Sparta, Golconda, Chili, and Hardin Circuits. In the Fall of 1853 his health was so far impaired that he found it necessary to ask for a superannuated relation. For a few months his friends were encouraged to hope that rest would improve his wasted strength, and that he would again be able to do effective service in the regular work of the ministry; but these hopes were soon blighted. His disease returned again with renewed force about the 1st of October, 1854, and continued until the 9th, when it terminated his earthly existence.

"Brother Fairbank was a good and faithful minister of the Lord Jesus. He died in 'great peace,' and in full hope of a glorious immortality."

He died, unmarried, Oct. 9, 1854, at the house of his sister, Mrs. Robertson, Hillsborough, Ill.

5. Emily, born in Rindge, N. H. in 1820; died in Fillmore, in 1838.

 (58), Drury V, George IV, Jonathan III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Holliston, Mar. 4, 1764; about 1783 settled upon a farm at Wardsboro, Vt., adjoining his brother Perley's farm. It is said that both farms were bought and given to them by their father, though in the deed to Perley, the consideration of £80 is stated. A few years thereafter his wife died, and he returned to Holliston, with his infant daughter, where he died in 1791. Will dated Dec. 16, 1790; probated in Brattleboro, Vt., Apr. 19, 1791, and in Cambridge, Mass., May 4, 1791; mentions Joseph and Mary, his children.

153. CAPT. JONAS FAIRBANKS, of Walpole, N. H., and Morrisville, N. Y.

(64), Samuel V, Samuel IV, Jonathan III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Dudley, Mass.; baptized Oct. 25, 1747.

He was married in Dudley, and lived there afterwards for several years. He removed to Chesterfield, N. H., Apr. 8, 1777. Ebenezer Cooper, of Chesterfield, conveyed to him a tract of land in Chesterfield, part of Lot 5, in the 9th Range, consideration £200. In the deed he was described as of Dudley, Mass. According to other deeds made to and by him he was of Chesterfield, in 1778, 1779, and 1782; of Alstead in 1783; of Walpole in 1790. In 1782 he was one of the board of selectmen in Chesterfield. He owned from time to time large tracts of land. He was a revolutionary soldier; a minute man on the Lexington Alarm. See War Rolls. He afterward enlisted in New Hampshire, and served as a private in Francis Towne's Company in Col. David Gilman's Regt., which regiment was raised by the State of New Hampshire, in Dec. 1776, to reinforce the Continental Army in the State of New York, at Fort George and Ticonderoga, from December 1776 to March 1777. Official Report.

After, or during the war, he was called Captain, but how he gained the title has not been ascertained,—perhaps in the militia service. His descendants speak of him as Capt. Jonas “of revolutionary fame.”

He settled in Walpole, in 1783 or 1784, and there all the children of his second marriage were born. He was engaged in the lumber business, and in buying and selling real estate, and was successful, but later lost a large share of his property by becoming surety for other persons.

He took an active interest in public affairs; was a selectman in 1796 and 1801; served as Moderator in 1791–2–3–4–5 and 6.

In 1808 or 1809 his son Ebenezer, and his sons-in-law Mr. Lee, Samuel Scott, and Joshua Dean emigrated to Eaton, Madison county, N. Y. One or two years later he followed them with the rest of his family, and settled in the same township. He died in Morrisville, N. Y., May 5, 1825, aged 78 yrs.

He married I, in Dudley, Mass., Mary Carter, Dec. 5, 1768, who died about 1779.

154. LEVI FAIRBANKS, of Athens, Vt.
(64), Samuel V, Samuel IV, Jonathan III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Dudley, Mass., 1759. Resided in Walpole, N. H., from about 1787 to 1810, and then removed to Grafton, Vt. There he settled on a farm and lived in a small log house. Less than half an acre of land was cleared, and perhaps an acre more of forest cut down. There was no road through the wilderness, only a foot path, and until he could raise corn and rye (there was no wheat), he had to back what he needed eleven or twelve miles.

After the death of his first wife, he continued to live on the farm, with his son, Cornelius, till Sept. 7, 1828, when he married Mrs. Phippen, and moved on to her place, in Athens. He remained there until the spring of 1840, when, desiring to live with his son, Cornelius, who was the mainstay of the family, the latter built a small house for them near his own place, in Grafton. In getting the lumber from the mill for the new house he fell, receiving injuries from which he never recovered, dying Sept. 28, 1840. Levi and his wife moved into the new house about the first of June, 1840. After living there about a year, they went back to Athens, where they spent the remainder of their lives. He died Nov. 29, 1846, aged 87 years, and his wife died a few months later.

He married I, Prudence ———, who died July 11, 1822, aged 60 yrs.

He married II, Sept. 7, 1828, Mrs. Mary Phippen, widow of Paul Phippen, of Athens, Vt. She died Mar. 31, 1847; aged 93 years.

Born in Chesterfield, N. H., about 1777. His father lived in Dudley, Mass., and afterward removed to Chesterfield, N. H., where he remained till his death.

Benjamin removed from some Massachusetts town, perhaps Worcester, to Waterville, Maine. He learned the trade of ship carpentering, but according to one report became a Universalist preacher, having, it is said, studied for the ministry with Hosea Ballou. A more specific report from a grand daughter says that he practiced medicine in Vassalboro, Canaan and Winslow, Maine, till about 1848, soon after which his sons removed to Florida. He died a few years later; date and place of his death not ascertained.

The names of himself, wife Ruth, and two sons were entered on the records of the town of Canaan, Apr. 17, 1817.

He married in Maine, Ruth Rhines. She went to Florida in 1850, with her son Harrison, and died their suddenly of paralysis of the heart, and was buried at Lake Bradford.

159. JOSEPH FAIRBANK, of Templeton, Mass.
(67), Joseph V, Joseph IV, Jabez III, Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born Dec. 5, 1743; died May 12, 1784.

He was a soldier of the Revolution, and one of the minute men who answered the Lexington Alarm in 1775, and the Bennington Alarm in 1777. See War Rolls.

His will, which was presented for probate May 18, 1784, mentions wife Asenath, and daughters, Thankful, Polly, Abigail, Asenath, Susa and only son Joseph. In 1791 the estate was finally settled, and a guardian appointed for the three younger children. He was a carpenter by occupation. While putting the finishing touches on a church steeple, the scaffold gave way, and he fell to the ground and was killed.

In his will he calls himself Joseph Jr. of Harvard; in a deed of the heirs of Jonathan Osgood, of Lancaster, (Worcester Deeds vol. 59 fol. 355), he is described as of Templeton. These facts are stated because there was another Joseph Jr. of Harvard, and the records fail to make any distinction between the two.

His wife was Asenath, daughter of Jonathan and Asenath (Sawyer) Osgood, of Lancaster. She was born Dec. 24, 1744, and married after Mar. 7, 1766, when she signed a petition for the probate of her father's will.

Mar. 11, 1768, she deeded, with her husband and several others, land in Lancaster to Aaron Sawyer. She married (2), Capt. — Wilder, a Revolutionary Soldier. She survived him.

D., who went, the same year, to Washington Territory, as a Missionary to the Spokane Indians, under the auspices of the A. B. C. F. M. They were one year in making the journey across the continent, most of the way on horseback, through perils of all kinds, a wonderful wedding journey. They lived among these Indians from 1838 to 1848; then in Salem, Or., 1848-9; in Forest Grove, Or., 1849 to 1851; in Hillsboro, Or., 1851 to 1857; in Forest Grove, 1857 to 1862; in Walla Walla, Wash. 1862 to 1872; and in Skokomish, Wash., 1872 to 1878. She died in Skokomish Aug. 9, 1878, aged 73 years. She was, heart and soul, in the great work of her husband, and was, in all respects, a remarkable woman. In Nov. 1847, occurred the Massacre at the Whitman Mission, when Dr. and Mrs. Marcus Whitman and nearly all the adults were massacred. Dr. and Mrs. Eells were amongst the few adults who managed to escape. Dr. Eells was graduated from Williams College in 1834; from East Windsor Theological Institute in 1837; was ordained in Blandford, Mass., Oct. 25, 1837. His biography, entitled, "Father Eells, or the results of forty-five years of Missionary Labors in Washington and Oregon, by his son Rev. Myron Eells, D. D.," was published by the Congregational Sunday School and Publishing Society, Boston and Chicago, in 1895. He died Feb. 16, 1893, on his 83d birth-day.

207. CHESTER FAIRBANK, of Eagle, N. Y.
(85), Calvin V, Joshua IV, Jabez III, Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born in Swanzey, N. H., Nov. 11, 1788. Went in his childhood, with the family, to Barnard, Vt., where they settled. In the war of 1812 he enlisted in the army, and served for three years; fought with Gen. Jacob Brown, under Col. Ripley; was at the capture of Yorktown. In 1815 he removed to Pike, then Allegany, but now Wyoming County, and bought a farm in the West part of the town, which, about 1820, was set off as a separate township, and called Eagle.

He was an extraordinary man, renowned for his great physical strength, as well as for his rare intellectual gifts and courage. His strength was proverbial;—"as strong as Chet. Fairbank," was a common saying among his acquaintances, and he was the oracle of the neighborhood, an arbiter of disputes, and a certain source of help in emergencies.

In 1849 an effort was in progress to secure the pardon of his son, Rev. Calvin Fairbank, who was serving a sentence of imprisonment for a term of fifteen years, in Kentucky, for freeing slaves in violation of law. While he was there, awaiting the expected favorable action of Gov. Crittenden, on a petition for pardon, he died of cholera, on the night of July 7, 1849.

He married, Jan. 1, 1810, in Stockbridge, Vt., Betsey Abbott, who was born in Stafford, Conn., Feb. 13, 1787, daughter of Jacob Abbott, whose father settled on Martha's Vineyard in 1750. She was a noble, christian woman, of indomitable courage and remarkable executive ability. She led in the effort, and was chiefly instrumental in bringing the christian people together, calling the first minister, and forming the first branch of the M. E. Church in Eagle and that vicinity. She died Dec. 18, 1882, at the age of 95 yrs. 10 mos. 5 ds.

242. COL. JOSEPH FAIRBANKS, of Farmington, Me.
 (102), Benjamin VI, Joseph V, Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Winthrop, Me., July 24, 1774.

Leaving home while young he was attracted toward the beautiful and fertile region of the Sandy River, which was then open to settlers, and thither he went in 1792. The outlook was promising, and two years later, upon the incorporation of the town, he had cleared land, erected buildings, and planted the first orchard in the settlement. In 1808 he built the mills located at the little village of Fairbanks, which was named in his honor. In addition to farming and milling, he carried on mercantile pursuits, and also dealt largely in buying and selling livestock.

Col. Fairbanks was a man of energy and enterprise and much employed in public affairs. He was active in religious and educational movements, and his name appears on the original subscription list, in aid of the Farmington Academy ; in 1821 he was appointed trustee. He held various military and town offices and commanded the First Regiment (Me.) in the War of 1812. In 1819 he represented the town in the General Court of Massachusetts and afterwards served as state senator.

" His death was caused by falling from his wagon, Sept. 12, 1831, while driving from Augusta to Farmington with a load of merchandise."

He married, Mar. 15, 1796, Martha, daughter of Jacob and Elizabeth (Thorne) Eaton, who was born in Bristol, Me., Apr. 11, 1770, and died in Farmington, Sept. 17, 1842.

244. CAPT. DENNIS FAIRBANKS, of Winthrop, and Presque Isle, Me.

(102), Benjamin VI, Joseph V, Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born Apr. 16, 1790. Early in life he engaged in business in Hallowell and Boston. He was a millwright by trade, also a merchant and lumberman. He was a soldier in the War of 1812, and acted as spy in the American Army. Later he organized the Monmouth Light Artillery.

In 1829 he made an exploring tour through the wilderness of Aroostook County, and the following year sent his men with three bateaux of supplies up the Penobscot river, and across the "carry," to the Aroostook river, his objective point being what is now the town of Presque Isle. He was the first settler there, and began at once to clear land, erect buildings, and lay out plans for a village. Preparations for lumbering were commenced, mills built, stores opened, and a flourishing settlement was soon springing up out of the forest. He was for many years one of the prominent men of upper Aroostook, and possessed great business talent, but his energy sometimes led him beyond that prudence and sagacity so essential to long-continued prosperity.

He was a representative in the State Legislature in 1843.

During the time that Gov. Enoch Lincoln's body lay in state at Augusta, in 1829, he commanded the Guard of Honor which did military duty. He died, in New Brunswick, Nov. 3, 1867.

246. LEVI FAIRBANKS, of Winthrop, and Monmouth, Me.
(108), Joseph VI, Joseph V, Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

He was born August 12, 1778, and was reared on his father's farm in Winthrop. The length of his residence there, however, is uncertain; in 1799, he was first taxed in Monmouth, but as he afterwards inherited the paternal estate, he probably lived there until his permanent removal to Monmouth.

In the War of 1812 he enlisted as sergeant. In 1826-27 he was selectman of Winthrop, and in 1829 he built the mill now known as the Annabesscook mill. This created a new industry which proved of great benefit to the town. Mr. Fairbanks was a man of position and influence in the community. He was selectman of Monmouth, and Justice of the Peace in 1840. He had fine business qualifications, and possessed in a remarkable degree the common family characteristic, — mechanical skill.

He married, August 30, 1798, Joanna (Hannah) York, who died in Grand Rapids, Mich., Sept. 12, 1859. She was the daughter of Joseph and Susanna (Howe) York. His death occurred in Grand Rapids, Dec. 15, 1844.

The births of two children are shown on the Winthrop town records.

1. HENRY (535), born Mar. 20, 1804.
2. Levi, born Dec. 5, 1813; married, Apr. 24, 1839, Mary Jane, daughter of David and Joanna (Fairbanks) Moody (103), who died May 13, 1841. He died November 1847.

247. ELIAS FAIRBANKS, of Gardiner, Maine.
(108), Joseph VI, Joseph V, Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born December 19, 1783. He was an early settler in Gardiner, where he cleared land, erected buildings and made a home for his family. Although a farmer, he yet possessed the mechanical skill common to his kindred. In 1843 he removed to that part of Hallowell, now Manchester, where he died February 5, 1860. He was an original member of the Baptist Church in Gardiner, and one of its deacons.

He married, March 2, 1809, Rhoda Phillips, daughter of Joseph and Sally (Johnson) Neal, who was born July 7, 1791, and died February 25, 1860.

248. JOSEPH FAIRBANKS, of North Monmouth, Me.
(108), Joseph VI, Joseph V, Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Winthrop, Me., Dec. 17, 1790. Bereft of both father and mother before the age of seventeen, he was rendered homeless, and obliged to make his own way in the world. His educational advantages were limited, but his natural adaptation to mechanics served him in good stead. He became a manufacturer of shovel handles, and of axes which were popular for their "good temper." He was also a blacksmith and millwright, and was interested in the invention and manufacture of the Pitts' Horse Power and Separator. He removed from Winthrop to Brunswick, July 17, 1833, and from thence to North Monmouth, Dec. 18, 1834, which became his permanent residence.

He invented and constructed the first turn tables used on the Androscoggin and Kennebec Railroad.

The element of religious devotion was active in his character. He was helpful and generous in all the relations of life.

Married, Feb. 17, 1814, Polly, daughter of Nathan and Mary (Streeter) Richmond, who was born in Winthrop, May 7, 1792, and died Jan. 25, 1879. He died May 2, 1862.

249. JOEL FAIRBANKS, of North Monmouth, Me.
(103), Joseph VI, Joseph V, Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Winthrop, Sept. 24, 1792. Died Sept. 7, 1879. When a young man of twenty he went to Turner, where he learned the trade of reed maker, and where he married. About 1836 he removed to the town of North Monmouth, which became his home. He followed the trade of millwright, and also cultivated land to some extent.

Possessing a remarkable memory and a fondness for historical reminiscences, and being, moreover, a good story teller, he drew from the rich stores of the past many a tale of interest for the delectation of those who sought his company.

He was a pensioner of the war of 1812.

He married I, Nov. 13, 1814, Judith, daughter of Jesse and Judith (Weston) Bradford, of Turner, Me., who was born June 13, 1793, and died Aug. 31, 1858. He married II, Feb. 14, 1860, Mrs. Achsa (Pratt) Ramsdell, of Leeds, Me., who was born Jan. 27, 1808, and died Jan. 18, 1878.

251. COLUMBUS FAIRBANKS, of Winthrop, Me.
(104), Nathaniel VI, Joseph V, Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Winthrop, Nov. 7, 1793. He grew up, as it were, with the town for which he ever cherished a warm attachment, watching its growth and progress for more than four score years, and being at the time of his death its oldest native born citizen. By occupation he was a farmer, and relates that his first money was earned when he was nine years old, by driving oxen for one cent a day and his dinner.

In the war of 1812 he bore a part with the other brave men of Winthrop.

While he never was an aspirant for political honors, he realized the importance attached to the affairs of state, and never failed to vote at each presidential election. In 1820, he and his wife united with the Congregational church in Winthrop. The chief characteristics of the man were his industry and integrity; and his record was one of honest labor and duties conscientiously performed. He was well versed in the traditions of his family history, and proud of his race and lineage.

He married (I), Sept. 17, 1816, Lydia Wood, daughter of Major Seth and Catherine (Woodman) Tinkham of Wiscasset Me., where she was born May 22, 1797. She died, in Winthrop, May 10, 1859.

He married (II), Nov. 8, 1860, Mrs. Lydia T. Wing, widow of Isaac D. Wing, and daughter of Joshua and Abigail (Lambert) Trufant, of Winthrop. She was born Dec. 1, 1803, and died June 8, 1895. Mr. Fairbanks died Sept. 7, 1882.

252. FRANKLIN FAIRBANKS, of Winthrop, Me.
(104), Nathaniel VI, Joseph V, Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Winthrop June 18, 1795. Resided with his parents until their removal to Wayne, in 1814, where he engaged in farming. About 1822 he returned to Winthrop and remained there until his wife's death. Subsequently he went to Maryland, and was instantly killed, while driving a coach between Frederic and Hagerstown, July 26, 1832. The following record of the sad event appears in his brother's diary, under date of Aug. 3, 1832 :

" Heard the death of Franklin ; killed by being thrown from the stage, and its wheels ran over and crushed him in a moment. Just so uncertain is human life."

In the War of 1812 he enlisted as a private.

He possessed rare personal attractions and great musical ability, having a fine baritone voice.

He married, Sept. 26, 1819, Hannah Sewall, daughter of Martin and Hannah (Sewall) Cushing, who was born in Bath, Me., Feb. 25, 1798, and died in Winthrop, Sept. 23, 1826.

253. GEORGE W. FAIRBANKS, of Wayne, Me.
(104), Nathaniel VI, Joseph V, Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Winthrop, Me. Aug. 5, 1803. While yet a lad his father removed with his family to Wayne, and settled on a farm in the southeastern part of the town. As he grew to manhood he followed the occupation of a farmer, and also taught school. He was commissioned Justice of the Peace, Oct. 27, 1830, and was Chairman of the Board of Selectmen of Wayne in 1870-71-72. He was a worthy citizen—disliking wrong and honoring virtue.

He married, Apr. 1, 1828, Lucy Lovejoy, a woman of evenly balanced mind, of literary and artistic taste and possessed of a distinctive charm of manner. Their home, the center of hospitality, content, and good cheer, was a good example of New England domestic life. Not the least among its attractions was the influence of music which pervaded the home circle, for both Mr. and Mrs. Fairbanks were leading musical characters in their day, and long stood at the head of the church choir; while he was a famous teacher of singing schools.

After a singularly happy and devoted married life of half a century, their golden wedding was celebrated, Apr. 1, 1878, at the old homestead, "Prospect Farm," and was an occasion long to be remembered by all who were present.

He died in Oakland, Me., Oct. 13, 1888.

His wife, who was the daughter of Collins and Sally (Billington) Lovejoy, was born in Wayne, Nov. 29, 1805, and died in Oakland, Nov. 27, 1883.

CHILDREN, born in Wayne:

1. Lucy Frances, born Feb. 8, 1829; died Sept. 13, 1831.
2. Lucilla Eliza, born Apr. 16, 1830; married, Jan. 1, 1853, Arthur Hall Johnson, son of John and Mehitable (Darcy) Johnson, who was born in Wilton Me., Nov. 27, 1826, and died in Oakland, July 27, 1891. He was one of the town's best citizens, and widely known among scythe makers, having been engaged in the business forty-five years.

CHILDREN:

- a. George Henry Johnson, b. June 19, 1855; d. Nov. 9, 1862.
- b. Albert Arthur Johnson, b. Apr. 16, 1864; m., Oct. 5, 1890, Maggie E. Conley. 3 children. Resides in Oakland.

Abner Ralph Small, son of Abner and Mary A. (Randall) Small, who was born in Gardiner, Me., May 1, 1836.

A gallant soldier of the late war, he participated in all the battles in which his regiment—the 16th Me.—was engaged, until taken and held a prisoner for six months at Libby Prison. While there, he was commissioned major, having previously distinguished himself at the battle of Fredericksburg. His military skill, his patriotism, and his devotion to the welfare of his regiment, gave him an honorable record.

His wife died in Oakland, Feb. 28, 1885.

254. ELIJAH FAIRBANKS, of Winthrop, Me.
(106), Elijah VI, Joseph V, Joseph IV, John II, Jonathan I.

Born Dec. 18, 1782, died May 8, 1850.

Throughout life he resided in his native town, upon a portion of the homestead farm. His occupation was that of a farmer, but he was also a good mechanic and a worker in wood. He was an honest and respected citizen.

He married in 1806, Lucinda, daughter of Daniel and Sarah (Delano) Allen; she was born Dec. 3, 1785, and died February 18, 1869.

259. DAVID FAIRBANKS, of New York, N. Y.
(106), David VI, John V, Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in South Dedham, Mass., Oct. 20, 1782. He was married in Sharon, Mass., and removed to Medfield, Mass., in 1809, and bought the Wheelock estate, where the town hall now stands, including a house and store. The house he enlarged, and kept a tavern there for several years. About 1816 he built the house opposite the head of South street, and a new store at the corner of North street, moving away the old one.

He was the business man of the town,— kept a large assortment of goods, carried on the manufacture of straw bonnets, and kept a boarding house for his help. He also traded in real estate to a considerable extent. He was on the board of selectmen for two years.

He afterward removed to New York City, where he spent most of the remainder of his life.— Medfield History. He died in Mechanicsville, Saratoga Co., N. Y. Aug. 15, 1853.

262. CAPT. ABNER FAIRBANKS, of Foxborough, Mass.
 (107), Abner VI, John V, Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Dedham, Mass. Mar. 6, 1796; died in Foxborough, Dec.

3, 1880, aged 84 yrs. 8 mos. 26 ds. Had lived in Foxborough since Apr. 7, 1849. Served in the war of 1812 in a New Hampshire Regiment, Capt. Oliver Warren's company, from Sept. 20, 1814, three months as a private. He afterward, it is said, held the rank of Captain; was a pensioner. He was a citizen of excellent repute, and held his head above most, if not all of his neighbors, being 6 ft. 2 in. in height. Was a farmer.

Married Deborah Reynolds Belcher, May 31, 1819. She was born Apr. 14, 1796, and died Jan. 14, 1875, aged 78 yrs. 9 mos.

Their children were:

1. Lewis Tucker, born Sept. 21, 1820; married I, Sept. 21, 1846 Joanna E., daughter of James B. and Persis (Richardson) Puffer. She died Apr. 6, 1884. No children. Married II, July 20, 1893, Emily F. - c. Jennie Reynolds Carpenter, born Feb. 5, 1867.

263. JOEL FAIRBANKS, of New Boston, N. H.
(107), Abner VI, John V, Joseph IV, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Dedham, Mass., Aug. 15, 1797. Removed to Pepperell, Mass., about the time of his marriage, and about May, 1825, settled permanently in New Boston; died there, Sept. 10, 1862, aged 65 yrs. 25 ds.

He was a cabinet maker; learned his trade under the old system of apprenticeship, and became a very skillful workman. In middle life he engaged somewhat extensively in the manufacture of wooden clock cases and fancy boxes, in connection with his regular trade. At one time he also manufactured doors, window sashes and blinds.

He was a man of even temperament, a kind and peaceable neighbor, and a citizen of unblemished character. Never aggressive, he would yield a point rather than provoke a quarrel, or give offence, and yet he had sufficient of that "amiable stubbornness" which is characteristic of his race, to resent and resist any wrongful acts on the part of others towards himself, and on all occasions to firmly maintain his rights against unjust encroachments.

He was very industrious; reared a large family, on a moderate income; never contracted a debt he could not or did not pay; lived as well, if not better than the average of his neighbors, and died leaving his real estate unencumbered, and money in the bank. He owned, at the time of his decease, in addition to the original home place, seven acres of farming land, and seven acres of wood land.

The lesson of his life was constantly impressed upon the minds of his sons, who were early taught that they must fight the battle of life for themselves. They were naturally directed into the channels of mechanical trades, but, strange to say, not one of them followed permanently the trade he had learned.

All the sons had a good common school education; but one aimed higher, and succeeded, by his own efforts, in fighting his way through college, and was graduated with all the honors of his class.

Although not fortified by the "faith which was once delivered unto the saints," he possessed the true spirit of Christianity, without any public professions. The Golden Rule he accepted as an ample rule of conduct, and lived up to it. In advance of his time, with thoughtful and liberal views, he was exceedingly tolerant of opinions and beliefs which differed from his own. He was no propagandist, and almost invariably abstained from taking part in religious discussions. Silence was his forte. Fine-spun distinctions between the "Covenant of grace" and the "Covenant of works," never troubled him, but he believed in the Covenant of works.

His character was well exemplified upon his dying bed. In anticipation of his death within a few days, he made his will, and talked over his affairs, with as much serenity and composure as he would have manifested in the prime of life, in the transaction of any ordinary business.

Married I, Apr. 9, 1822 (Intentions entered, in Pepperell, Mar. 2, 1822), Abigail Tufts, of Roxbury, N. H., daughter of Ebenezer and Betsey Tufts. She was born Sept. 24, 1803, and died Mar. 26, 1846. She was an active member of the Presbyterian church, of strict, puritanical ideas; a woman of highly sensitive organization, and of an intellectual cast of mind. Her energy and marked executive ability were proverbial.

He married II, Rebecca G. Clarke, of New Boston, who died Mar. 9, 1886, in Manchester, N. H.

CHILDREN:

1. Alfred Tufts, born, in Pepperell, Jan. 11, 1824; died in Boston, Mass., Sept. 15, 1849.
2. LORENZO SAYLES (560), born, in Pepperell, Mar. 16, 1825.
3. John, born in New Boston, Dec. 27, 1826; learned the blacksmith's trade, but, after a few years engaged in other occupations. Now resides in Brockton, Mass.

He married I, Lucy Ann Bentley, of New Boston, Dec. 30, 1851, who died there, Mar. 2, 1854. Married II, Sarah F. Knapp, of Maine, Oct. 1, 1860. They had one child,— Charles R., born Feb. 9, 1862, in Albany, N. Y.; died the same day.

4. GEORGE WASHINGTON (561), born Mar. 28, 1828.

5. Franklin, born Sept. 2, 1829; died in Perrysburg, O., where he had lived for over thirty years, Jan. 11, 1892.

He was by trade a wheelwright, and a master workman. Was an eccentric character; lived the life of a recluse, and was never married. He owned in Perrysburg, two or more houses, and lived alone in one of them. He was very fond of old books, pictures and relics of every kind, of which he had cartloads when he died. The walls of his house were hung with forty-five antique guns and pistols, and he had an immense store of curiosities, specimens of minerals, &c. Only a short time before his death, he conveyed his real estate to a family living in one of his houses, in consideration of their contract to take care of him during the remainder of his life, and then made a will, giving them all his personal property. After his death money was found buried in his cellar. One newspaper report, believed to be exaggerated, says that, "A stone was lifted up, and the recess beneath was found to be filled with loose coin and quart cans brimful of gold, silver and copper money."

6. Ferdinand, born Nov. 7, 1830.

He learned the machinist's trade in Lowell and Boston. Was a genius of remarkable skill. Went to California, and afterward to Peru, S. A., where he lived many years. Was engaged there in "installing" sugar mill "plants," being agent of a Boston firm. For one or two years he was superintendent of the machinery department of the Mint in Lima.

He has not been heard from since about the year 1870, and is supposed to be dead. Was reported murdered; and again there was a report that he died in a hospital. Neither report has been confirmed. He was known to have considerable money, and may have been the victim of foul play. What became of him or his money, is an unsolved mystery.

He was a man of superior physique; weight 180 lbs., height 5 ft. 11½ in., athletic, brave and fearless, even to a fault. He was very daring, and often met mounted bands of Spanish robbers on the plains, sometimes having encounters with them. He would stand his ground against odds, or, by strategy and Parthian shots, escape on his fleet pacer. He was always peaceably inclined, but had a thorough contempt for the treacherous little Spaniards, and, with a fair show, was a good match for half a dozen of them. Perhaps, at last, he was overcome, robbed and killed.

7. Sumner, born Dec. 13, 1834; died Feb. 15, 1836.

264. JESSE FAIRBANKS, of West Dedham, Mass.
(107), Abner VI, John V, Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Dedham, South Parish, Oct. 21, 1800; died May 20, 1881, aged 80 yrs. 6 mos. 29 ds.

He was a brass founder, and manufacturer of tinware. He built a house in West Dedham soon after his marriage, and occupied it till he passed the four score mark of a useful life. As a citizen he was honored and respected by the entire community for his unquestioned integrity. He was a consistent member of the church from his early manhood.

Married I, Borridill Mason, of Dedham, daughter of William and Lucy Mason, May 8, 1825. She died Sept. 16, 1859, aged 58 years.

265. COL. GERRY FAIRBANKS, of Boston, Mass.
(108), Israel VI, Israel V, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Dedham, Mass., Jan. 9, 1782; lived in Boston; died Nov. 14, 1829; was a saddler and harness maker.

He was prominent in business and military circles, and was a man of considerable literary attainments, and an able public speaker. He delivered an oration in Faneuil Hall, July 4, 1821, at the request of the Republicans of the town of Boston, in commemoration of the Anniversary of our National Independence. It was a fine production and was published in pamphlet form by the Committee, Jonathan Simonds, Isaac Waters, and Charles M. Dennett. A copy is still preserved by the family of the late Hon. A. G. Fairbanks, Manchester, N. H.

He married Mary, daughter of Samuel and Elizabeth (Williams) Sumner, May 17, 1806, who was born Aug. 1, 1786, and died Mar. 27, 1870, aged 83 yrs. 7 mos. 27 ds.

266. HON. STEPHEN FAIRBANKS, of Boston, Mass.
(108), Israel VI, Israel V, Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Dedham Feb. 5, 1784 ; died in Boston, Sept. 10, 1866. When about fifteen years of age, his father removed to Francestown, N. H., at which time Stephen came to Boston and was apprenticed to the trade of Saddler and Harness Maker. On coming of age he engaged in this business for himself. The same year he was admitted a member of the Massachusetts Charitable Mechanics Association. Thirty-one years thereafter he was chosen President of the same, and held that honorable position for several years.

He early relinquished the saddlery and harness business, and engaged in the hardware trade, which he pursued until 1846, when he became connected with the Western Railway Corporation (now Boston & Albany) ; was chosen Director in 1846, and in 1848 was made the Treasurer, which office he held till 1866. He served on the School Committee ; was a member of the Massachusetts House of Representatives, and of the Senate for several terms. Was President of Mass. Temperance Society ; Trustee of the Asylum for the blind ; Treasurer of the Society for Propagating the Gospel among the Indians and others in North America ; and was an active member of many of the Philanthropic Societies and Institutions in Boston. He not only gave freely of his time to the public, but of his money. He was a useful man in the community. He was a believer in the Christian faith, and lived as he believed.

Married, Nov. 27, 1807, Abby Parker, daughter of Capt. Thomas Parker, a Naval Officer.

CHILDREN:

1. HENRY PARKER (562), born Sept. 7, 1808; died Feb. 14, 1854.

269. JASAN FAIRBANKS, of Watertown, N. Y.
(110), Samuel VI, Samuel V, Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Mendon, Sept. 5, 1785; died at Watertown, N. Y., Jan. 10, 1875, aged 89 yrs. 4 mos. 5 ds.

He was a man of decidedly strong individuality; stern and inflexible to do and require what he deemed right; uncompromising toward injustice and wrong. He was "noted for his force of will, his sterling honesty of purpose, his enterprise, his kindness to the poor, his care and protection of the homeless and friendless, his active public spirit, and his genial, kindly ways."

He fought his way in the world from the time he was thirteen years of age, beginning in Boston. He learned the trade of saddler and harness maker, in Thompson, Conn. In 1802 he removed to Newport, N. Y., and finally settled in Watertown, N. Y., about the year 1808. Here he built up a business of great magnitude. "He was a saddle and harness maker, leather maker, boot and shoe manufacturer, wagon maker, farmer, dealer in real estate, builder, and store keeper, carrying on an extensive trade in the staples of the country. It is certainly a rare record that, in the prosecution of his mechanical operations, he employed more than 500 apprentices; that for more than 30 years he kept over 100 men employed, and for 44 years fed and clothed as many as 200 persons."

He was a life member of the Jefferson County Agricultural Society. In 1812 he was appointed Deputy U. S. Marshal, and continued to hold the office about 28 yrs. In 1821 he was appointed Sheriff of the County, and then was elected for one term, under the new Constitution, which closed in 1825. He was County Treasurer from 1828 to 1838.

Having suffered from the lack of scholastic education, he took good care that his children should have the early advantages denied to him. They were as well educated as any family ever brought up in Northern New York.

His connection with the "Whittlesey Affair," soon after the close of the war of 1812, gave him wide notoriety. He was one of the bondsmen of Whittlesey, as brigade paymaster of the militia. Whittlesey had received $35,000 for the purpose of paying off the N. Y. State Militia. He pretended that he had been robbed of $8,700, and, under evil influences, when he found himself watched, and feared detection, he was induced to attempt to take the balance of the money and flee to some distant country. Fairbanks, with the aid of Purley Keyes, the other bondsman, by stratagem and force, compelled him to confess and give up the money. They took him to a lonely place where there was a pit filled with water, threw him in, and threatened to drown him, if he did not confess and inform them where the money was, which they more than suspected was hid in or about his house. He stoutly protested his innocence. They proceeded to plunge him in a second time, and held him there until, to their amazement, he was apparently dead. They, however, succeeded in restoring him to consciousness. Still persisting in his innocence, they made him believe that a third plunge would be a final one, and then he succumbed, confessed, and led them to the place where the money was concealed, and allowed them to take it.

He married, Dec. 7, 1815, Mary Massey, daughter of Hart Massey, one of the very earliest pioneers in the Black River Country. She was born in Plymouth, Vt., Sept. 29, 1796, and died in Watertown, Sept. 29, 1882.

4. ANDREW J. (567), born Mar. 21, 1826.
5. Jason M., born Sept. 19, 1829. He was educated at Montreal College (French), and at Geneva College (now Hobart), graduating in 1851; received the degree of A. M., in course, from Hobart College in 1885; practiced Civil Engineering and Surveying for many years; retraced the Western boundary of Arkansas from Fort Smith to Red River, and ran the 98th Meridian from Red River to the Canadian River, also the parallel of 36 deg. 8 min. from the Cimarron River to the 100th Meridian, this parallel being now the North boundary of Oklahoma Territory. He also ran the line between the Seminole and the Creek Nations. While making the survey between the Seminoles and Creeks, in the new country to which these tribes were transferred, the surveyors were constantly menaced by the Comanches, and the survey was at last temporarily abandoned, the surveyors rendezvousing at Fort Arbuckle, glad to escape with their lives. He was an assistant engineer in the public works of the State of New York, under W. J. McAlpine, State Engineer. He studied law and was admitted to practice as attorney and counsellor of the Supreme Court of New York. He died in Watertown, Jan. 22, 1894, in his 65th year.

298. HON. CHARLES RUFUS FAIRBANKS, of Halifax, N. S.
(128), Rufus VI, Eleazer V, Eleasur IV, Eliesur III, George II, Jonathan I.

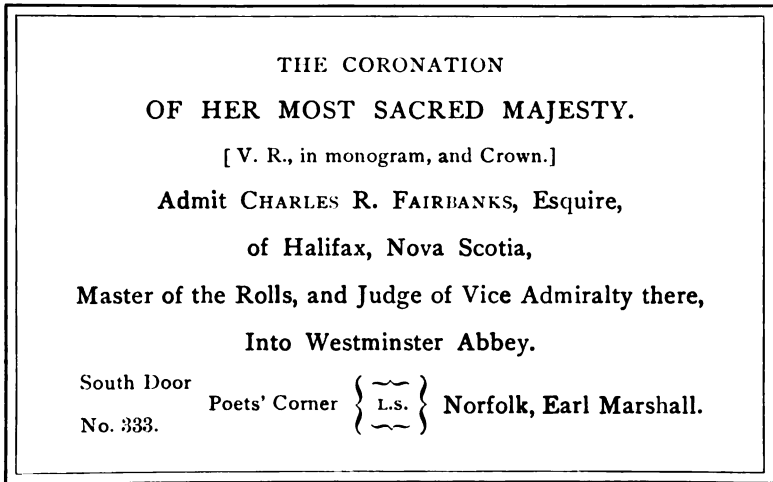

Born in Halifax, Mar. 25, 1790; died Apr. 15, 1841. At an early age he was sent to the Academy in Windsor, at that time under the management of Rev. Dr. Cochran, who afterward became Vice President of the College. At the early age of fourteen he was declared fully qualified for admission to the College. The statutes in force at that period, however, restricted the entry of students to the age of sixteen. Excluded by a positive rule, and being too young to commence his studies for the legal profession, he was sent by his parents to a Seminary in Quebec, where he remained some time, during which he acquired a knowledge of the French language, which he spoke fluently on his return to Nova Scotia. He possessed a remarkable talent for the acquisition of the modern languages, and, although he did not speak others with the same fluency as French, he was at a subsequent period of his life frequently engaged in translating documents used as evidence in the Admiralty Courts, as well as for other purposes.

After his return from Quebec he commenced the study of law in the office of the late Simon Robie, one of the most distinguished barristers of that period. He was admitted to the bar in 1811, and, until 1834, enjoyed a large and lucrative practice. He was first Solicitor General for the Province of N. S. in 1832. In 1834 he was appointed Judge of the Court of Vice Admiralty, and Master of the Rolls, the duties of which he discharged till his death, in 1841. In the performance of his judicial duties he was painstaking and faithful. His judgments were carefully prepared, and the causes disposed of with as little delay as possible.

In the year 1824 he was elected one of the representatives to the Legislature for the City of Halifax. He was an active and laborious member, and took a prominent part in the discussion and furtherance of all measures of importance. His speeches bear evidence of the care with which he studied every public question, and the extent of his general knowledge. He served as a representative continuously from 1824 to 1834. Extract from Campbell's History of Nova Scotia.

Mr. Fairbanks was the chief promoter of the Inland Navigation Company, which constructed the Shubenacadie Canal, or water communication from the harbor of Halifax, through the Province, to the Basin of Minas. To secure capital for this great enterprise he spent considerable time in England, and was successful. While in London, he attended the Coronation of Queen Victoria. The following is a copy of his card of admission to Westminster Abbey :

301. WILLIAM BLAGDEN FAIRBANKS, of Halifax, N. S. (128), Rufus VI, Eleazer V, Eleasur IV, Eliesur III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Halifax, Apr. 19, 1796. He died in Briar Cottage, Halifax, May 30, 1873. At an early age he entered into mercantile pursuits which resulted eventually in the formation of the firm of Fairbanks & Allison. The early career of this firm was singularly successful, and almost from its formation it became the largest commercial house in the British provinces, and their private signal, the blue burgee, became known in every part of the world. Their first vessel, the Indus, a brig, paid for herself the first voyage. At one time they had a fleet of from thirty to forty vessels trading with the West Indies, South America, the Mauritius, Russia, and various other countries. Mr. Fairbanks retired from business at a comparatively early age, and identified himself with the Chamber of Commerce, Insurance companies, and other institutions in his native place. He entertained liberally, and his hospitality was noted in military, naval, and civic social circles. He was held in the highest respect and esteem by his fellow citizens.

His wife was Letitia Collins, the 20th child of Hallet and Patty (Freeman) Collins, of Liverpool, N. S. Their union extended over nearly fifty years. She was born in Liverpool, N. S., in 1803, and lived to be 81 years of age. The longevity of the Fairbanks family and their wives, in Nova Scotia, is one of the most remarkable points connected with its history. With the exception of those who died in infancy, nearly all attained to old age. A remarkable instance exists in the case of Rufus, the founder, who was born in 1759, and whose daughter, Mary Ann (Allison) died in April 1896, at the age of 96, a period of one hundred and thirty-seven years between the date of birth of the father and death of the child.

CHILDREN:

1. Sophia Collins, born June 29, 1824 ; died Dec. 19, 1824.
2. Emily, born Jan. 19, 1826 ; married, Sept. 11, 1844, James Mitchell, a merchant, of Montreal. He was at one time one of the foremost merchants of that city, and had been identified with its interests for a great number of years. They recently celebrated their golden wedding. Twelve children.
3. Letitia, born Sept. 5, 1828 ; married John Peter Kohl, of Bremen, Germany, brother of a well known German writer. They lived in the West Indies, and later in Brooklyn, N. Y. He was a merchant and acquired a considerable fortune during our civil war, but died a few years later. They had six children, and she (Letitia) is now living with her son, the Manager of Molson's Bank, in Brockville, Ont.
4. William, born Sept. 5, 1830 ; married Annie Benton. Resides in Lowell, Mass. No children. He is an American citizen (the only one of the family).
5. Sophia Augusta, born June 19, 1832 ; married, May 30, 1852, Andrew Mitchell, of Halifax, a West India merchant. Her husband has been dead many years. She still lives in Halifax. Three children.

307. HON. ERASTUS FAIRBANKS, of St. Johnsbury, Vt.

(130), Joseph VI, Ebenezer V, Eleazar IV, Eliesur III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Brimfield, Oct. 28, 1792, in the little red house near the Sturbridge line. He died Nov. 20, 1864.

He came to St. Johnsbury, alone, in 1812, and for ten years thereafter, in that and neighboring towns had severe training in the school of difficulties and reverses. He acquired early maturity of character and purpose; habits of frugality, industry, persistence; knowledge of men and various business. Following the invention of the platform scale by his brother Thaddeus, he became head of the firm of E. and T. Fairbanks & Co., a position which he held for thirty years, during which time under his energetic and skilful management the business grew to large proportions and well established fame.

In 1836 he was sent to the State Legislature, where from the first he was a leader, especially active in the interests of education and temperance. He was a presidential elector of the Whig party in 1844, and again in 1848. About this time he was actively pushing the construction of the Passumpsic Railroad, of which he was President, from White River to St. Johnsbury, at which terminus he greeted the first engine in Nov. 1850. Two years later he was elected Governor of Vermont, and among other important legislative acts he had the satisfaction of affixing his signature to the Prohibitory Liquor Law, which with some modifications has ever since remained in force. In 1860 he was a second time called to the chief magistracy, this time to be known as "the War Governor" of Vermont. The situation was at first exceedingly embarrassing, but the people had such confidence in his wisdom and integrity that "the extra session of Legislature which met eight days after the firing upon Sumter, had the good sense to place at his entire disposal a million of dollars, putting no check upon the use of it only as his judgment might deem prudent and best. To those acquainted with his good judgment, strict integrity, his high sense of impartial right, his systematic business habits so early and continuously trained to grasp business matters on a large scale, the result was no surprise." In acknowledgment of his delicate, laborious and successful official acts, joint resolutions, most complimentary, were passed by the Senate and House. On his retirement from office, it was found that "the salary to which he was entitled was never touched, and it remains in the treasury of the State, another evidence of his generous love for Vermont, whose interests were dearer to him than his own, and an honor to both people and Executive."

From earliest manhood Gov. Fairbanks was a devoted, active, public-spirited, christian man. He was for fifty years a pillar in the home church, Congregational; and in later life a member and officer of many benevolent boards, which he supported by liberal contributions of money, time and personal service. "In christian efficiency he stood in the front rank of our most devoted lay-membership." "He could not brook low aims and poor performances. He was a positive quantity and power. Just where God placed him he stood. Calmly he listened to the voice of duty. Resolutely he handled the simple and obvious elements of his destiny. He was both strenuous and patient, frank and reserved, sincere and wary." "His candor, zeal, judgment, his promptness and recollection in the midst of most absorbing civil occupations, were too conspicuous for commendation, and blended gently with precious friendships and fine liberality of spirit." His death at the age of 72 removed from the community a man of great original force, and long and varied usefulness.

Married, May 30, 1815, Lois, daughter of Samuel and Lois (Chamberlain) Crossman.

She was born Nov. 13, 1792; died May 15, 1866.

CHILDREN:

1. Jane, born Dec. 3, 1816; married Ephraim Jewett, Jan. 26, 1837. She died Mar. 29, 1852. He died Nov. 19, 1865.

CHILDREN:

- a. Edward A. Jewett, b. July 18, 1838.
- b. Hibbard Jewett, b. July 19, 1840; d. Apr. 16, 1844.
- c. Henry E. Jewett, b. Apr. 9, 1842; m. May 31, 1876. Four children. He is a clergyman, Vacaville, Cal.
2. George, born Jan. 21, 1819; died Apr. 20, 1843.
3. HORACE (625), born Mar. 21, 1820.
4. CHARLES (626), born Dec. 8, 1821.
5. Julia, born June 9, 1824; married Feb. 11, 1857, John H. Paddock. She died June 10, 1884. No children.
6. FRANKLIN (627), born June 18, 1828.
7. Sarah, born June 30, 1831; married May 4, 1858, Charles M. Stone, of Lyndon, Vt.

CHILDREN:

- a. Mary E. Stone, b. Mar. 16, 1859.
- b. Arthur F. Stone, b. Mar. 1, 1870; m., Jan. 1, 1890, Helen Lincoln. They have three children.
- c. Philip H. Stone, b. May 2, 1872; m., Jan. 8, 1896, Adeline M. Anderson.
- d. Emily Louise Stone, b. Nov. 16, 1873; d. Aug. 1, 1895.
8. Emily, born Mar. 4, 1833; married, May 5, 1859, Rev. Constans L. Goodell D. D., son of Aaron and Elvira (Bancroft) Goodell. He was born in Calais, Vt., Mar. 16, 1830. His early years were passed at home, excepting when completing his preparation for college at Bakersfield Academy. He graduated at the University of Vermont, in 1855, and at Andover Theological Seminary, in 1858. He was ordained and installed pastor of the South Church, New Britain, Ct. Feb. 2, 1859, remaining there fourteen years. He commenced work in the Pilgrim Congregational Church St. Louis, Mo., in Nov. 1872, and was pastor for fourteen years more, until his death, Feb. 1, 1886. The membership increased meanwhile from 118 to 900. He also helped organize several of the churches in St. Louis. Five times during his ministry he went abroad, twice extending the trips to Egypt, and the Holy Land. During his last trip he was detained several months, being ill with the Syrian fever. His winning manners drew around him a large circle of friends. His mind was enriched by reading and travel, and in private conversation, as well as public address, he was entertaining and instructive. He was eminently successful as a pastor, his influence being felt far and near. He was one of the most prominent of Congregational clergymen; a leader in educational and mission work, and in the National Council.

CHILDREN :

a. Oliver Fairbanks Goodell, b. Apr. 20, 1865.

b. Laura Goodell, b. Apr. 1869; m. Frank H. Heald.

9. Ellen, born July 27, 1836; died May 28, 1843.

308. THADDEUS FAIRBANKS (Sir Thaddeus), of St. Johnsbury, Vt.

(130), Joseph VI, Ebenezer V, Eleasur IV, Eliesur III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Brimfield, Mass., Jan. 17, 1796; died in St. Johnsbury, Vt., Apr. 12, 1886.

As a child he was slender, delicate in health, nervous and painfully diffident, and, indeed, in all his long life was never really well. The society of his refined mother was more congenial to him than that of the rough boys of his own age, and home study partly made up for the lack of school privileges, which, in those years of failing crops, could not be given him. He learned to use tools, as by intuition, exemplifying the mechanical bent of the family. Moving to Vermont with his father in 1815, after building their mills, he first made wagons, then, in 1823, established a small iron foundry, doing much of the work with his own hands, and, being joined by his brother Erastus, went on under the name of E. & T. Fairbanks. His parlor stove and his patented cooking stove sold well, where only the open fire had been used before, and he invented and introduced the plow with cast-iron mould board, now universally used, its novelty being attested by the patent which he obtained.

In 1829 he built hemp dressing machines, and, as manager of the hemp mills, needed to weigh what he bought. Such a necessity for such a man must prove the mother of invention. To suspend a cart by chains from one end of a long timber overhead, and balance it by weights hung from the other end, was too clumsy a method. He first, in 1830, planned to balance a platform on the middle pivots of an A-shaped lever, the apex of which hung from a steel yard beam, when it occurred to him that by using two such levers, or four straight ones, he could support the four corners of a platform upon knife edges which would all stand in the same relation of leverage to the indicating beam, and correctly weigh a load upon any part of this platform. This was the first platform scale.

Mr. Fairbanks at once saw that the same principle of construction could be applied to scales of all sizes, and set about the immense work of making plans and patterns, having to consider all the problems of correctness, strength, lightness, symmetry and beauty, and succeeded so well that all American scales now, after sixty years, follow his designs. He made new modifications to meet various wants, and at the time of his death the price list of E. & T. Fairbanks & Co. showed some six hundred varieties, from the prescription scale, weighing the fraction of a grain, to the huge machines weighing a canal boat or a train of cars. He also built many very ingenious machines for facilitating the manufacture. To see an end to be desirable was to devise a machine to accomplish it.

He obtained thirty-two United States Patents for scales, and also patents for a hemp machine, stoves, a cast-iron plough, a device for creating draught, a steam heater, a feed water heater, patented on his ninetieth birthday, and a refrigerator. This last patent he gave away, not having means to develop it, and it proved to be worth more than a million dollars. This improvement consisted in placing the ice high up, for condensing the tainted vapors, and directing the cold dry air down upon the articles to be cooled, the arrangement now universally used for fruit storage and meat packing houses, as well as for refrigerators. This, the cast-iron plough, and the scale were revolutionary inventions.

The introduction of the scale has so entirely changed the methods of doing business that it is an essential factor in our civilization, everywhere the arbiter between buyer and seller, by its accuracy teaching exactness in business methods, and enforcing strict integrity in business transactions. Almost nothing now is measured or counted, we hear no more of chaldrons of coal; the bushel of grain is no longer a measure, while cattle, sheep and swine are always weighed.

The Fairbanks scales have won for themselves and their inventor the honor accorded to genius. World's Fairs in London, Paris, Vienna, Philadelphia and Chicago gave them the highest awards, and at Vienna the Emperor "most graciously conferred upon Mr. Thaddeus Fairbanks, Mechanical Constructor, the Knightly Cross of the Imperial Order of Francis Joseph," the King of Siam gave him "Pusamala," the golden medal of Siam, and the Bey of Tunis the decoration of "Commander of the Order of Iftikar."

Mr. Fairbanks thought upon a great variety of subjects, as shown not only by the range of his various patents, but also by his early courses of lectures upon Astronomy and upon Heat; and, having to design so many buildings, he displayed no mean ability as an Architect.

His lack of early educational advantages was keenly felt by him, and he did what he could for others, aiding scores of students to go through college, and, in 1842, with his brothers establishing the St. Johnsbury Academy, of which for twenty years he alone assumed the support, and then contributed largely to its endowment, devoting some $200,000 to this institution alone. He also gave a Professorship to Middlebury College, and his contributions to missionary objects, and to many western colleges, amounted to many thousands every year.

Active to the last, his was a beautiful old age. Children loved him and clung to him. A little child, taken to church for the first time, saw him come in, and in an awed whisper asked, "Mamma, is that Jesus?" He died after a painful illness from the indirect effect of a fall. On the day of his funeral all business was suspended in St. Johnsbury, and churches and public buildings were draped in mourning.

Mr. Fairbanks reflected his Puritan ancestry in his character and tastes; pure, upright and conscientious, and, though exceedingly taciturn, an attractive, impressive man. A man of Christian faith, of spiritual insight and force, and of fine native gifts, he was successful above most men in his chosen lines of work, and was useful wherever he was successful.

He married, Jan. 17, 1820, Lucy Peck Barker, a native of St. Johnsbury, whose father, Barnabas, came with his father, John, and the first settlers of the town, and in 1791 brought his bride, Ruth Peck, from Rehoboth, Mass., on a pillion behind him. Both John and Barnabas Barker were revolutionary soldiers, and in the battle of Bunker Hill.

Mrs. Fairbanks was a woman of marked ability, taking her full share in the care of the family, and widely loved for her kindly deeds.

She was born Apr. 29, 1799, and died in St. Johnsbury, Dec. 29, 1866.

CHILDREN:

1. HENRY (628), born in St. Johnsbury, May 6, 1830.

 - d. Lucy Webber, b. in St. Johnsbury, June 26, 1867; m. William Northrup McMillan, May 12, 1894, and resides in St. Louis, Mo.

309. JOSEPH PADDOCK FAIRBANKS, of St. Johnsbury, Vt. (130), Joseph VI, Ebenezer V, Eleasur IV, Eliesur III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Brimfield, Mass., Nov. 26, 1806. Died, in St. Johnsbury, May 15, 1855.

He began active life with the practice of law, subsequently joined his brothers in the scale-manufacturing partnership which he served till his death, 22 years after. His business abilities were of the very first order; much of the early success of the enterprise was due to his sagacity, minute attention to details and facility in dealing with men and problems. His mind was strong, capacious, alert, and remarkably well balanced. He took broad views of everything, was deeply religious, and unsparing in his efforts for the good of men. He was intelligently familiar with law, theology, science, history, literature. He had singular capacity for absorbing ideas, collating facts, transacting all sorts of business, influencing men.

He was averse to public life, while in more ways than men ever knew he was influencing public opinion and pushing needed reforms. He was influential in the legislature, especially in securing the Vermont prohibitory law, also the enactments for improvement of common schools, to all of which he gave years of effort with voice, pen and money. He sent out hundreds of pages of letters and press articles on almost every theme of current importance, such as agriculture, practical science, meteorology, home life, books and reading, religious and political issues, the Sabbath, slavery, temperance, education, missions, benevolence; a good while before the issue of Irving's Life of Washington he had urged that author to write a History of the United States; in the columns of one of the Boston journals he advocated the establishment of a City public library, two years before the corner stone of that institution was laid; he was a leader in the founding of St. Johnsbury Academy.

Mr. Fairbanks was a man of strong individuality, stoutly maintaining personal convictions without ever alienating the love and confidence of those who differed from him. He was abundantly and modestly benevolent, distributing multitudes of gifts anonymously and with a fine sense of adaptation ; his purse was open freely to every worthy cause ; the larger part of his property was bequeathed to benevolent objects, religious and educational. He crowded a long life into a few years, and died, as a consequence, prematurely, at the age of forty-eight.

Married, in Derry, N. H., June 11, 1835, Almira, daughter of James and Persis (Hemphill) Taylor. She was born Oct. 12, 1811. She married (2), Sept. 4, 1857, Rev. W. W. Thayer of St. Johnsbury, and died at St. Johnsbury, Jan. 20, 1883.

Born in Brimfield, Mass., Feb. 2, 1813 ; removed to Terre Haute, Ind., in 1835, where he spent the remainder of his life. He was one of the early and most prominent settlers of Vigo County. While he only rated himself as a farmer, and was as unassuming as any cultivator of the soil on the Wabash, yet, by sheer force of intellect and integrity, he became a strong factor in the political and general development of that part of the State. His judgment and advice were sought by many, and his influence became widely extended. Though never an office seeker, the partiality of friends at times forced him to not only lead, but to occupy political places of honor. In this way he was elected to fill the office of Mayor of Terre Haute, and was also elected and served a term as County Treasurer. He died during his term of office as Mayor, Apr. 8, 1878.

(142), Drury VI, Drury V, George IV, Jonathan III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Plymouth, N. H., July 19, 1801; died, in Coventry, Dec. 4, 1869.

He went to Holliston, Mass., in the spring of 1823. He remained there about a year; lived about a year in Portland, Me., and, in 1825, settled in Coventry. At that time this portion of the country was a vast wilderness, almost uninhabited save by wild beasts. His residence was fifty miles from any bank and almost as far from any money. The traffic was barter trade, in grain, sugar, and ashes. The collector of School taxes was wont to call on his few scattered fellow citizens with a grain bag and measure in hand, soliciting from them a half bushel, a peck, or two quarts of grain, as the case might be. School teachers were paid in store goods. The minister even came under the barter system. The salary usually paid him was $400 per annum, one half money, and the other half meat, stock and grain.

He was a sterling common sense man, of strong religious convictions, and enjoyed the confidence and esteem of the community.

349. DR. DEXTER FAIRBANK, of New York, N. Y. and Elizabeth, N. J.

(147), Jonathan VI, Daniel V, Jonathan IV, Jonathan III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Sudbury, Mass., July 19, 1799 ; died Aug. 11, 1879, aged 80 yrs. 23 ds.

He resided in Cambridgeport, Mass., after his marriage, up to 1839 ; then in New York City until 1868, when he removed to Elizabeth, N. J. where he died. He spent the greater part of his life in the interests of the insane, and for that reason was called Doctor, although he was not a physician, or graduated as such. He removed to New York for the express purpose of giving the imbecile son of John Jacob Astor, John Jacob, Jr., his exclusive care and treatment, and had charge of him for over thirty years.

He was a self made man, and rose from the humble walks of life by his indomitable will and sterling integrity. He was a man of marked character and great determination,—a strong friend and a bitter foe,—never happier than when battling for the right in Church or State.

The following abstract from an obituary notice written by an intimate friend, may justly be reproduced here:—

I became acquainted with Dr. Fairbank at the outbreak of the late war, when I found him with the harness on fighting the battles of freedom for the black man, for he was all his life a consistent and determined Abolitionist, which I deem to be a crown of all civic virtues in this world of iniquity. He was one of the Old Guard, as the Abolitionists were rightly called, and did as much in his own place and station as Garrison ever did. But higher than all this was his claim to Christian excellence. He was a member of the 3rd Presbyterian Church, and his pastor, Mr. Ray, and his fellow members, can bear ample testimony to his bright Christian character * * * * *.

The name of Dexter Fairbank is known to hundreds of the sable children whom he helped out of slavery in the dark days of the Republic, when it was a crime to be their friend, and many an eye among the escaped ones will drop a tear over the memory of their faithful friend, as this news comes to them. Nor will there be less regret in the circle of the eminent Abolitionists still surviving, whose friendship he enjoyed. "And the memory of their works shall never pass away from among men." This may truly be said of the deceased.

W. G. SNETHEN.

ELIZABETH, August 11, 1879.

He and most of his family were buried in Mt. Auburn, where a beautiful monument marks their resting place.

395. DEA. JONATHAN FAIRBANK, of Harvard, Mass.
(163), Jonathan VI, Joseph V, Joseph IV, Jabez III, Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born in Harvard, Dec. 29, 1788, in the old Fairbank mansion, in the south part of the town, called "Bear hill." He received a good common school education, and was regarded as an excellent scholar.

Upon attaining his majority, he commenced business, as a carpenter, and later was a cabinet maker. Being very ingenious, he never served an apprenticeship at either trade, but the many traces of his skill which may still be found in the homes of his kindred, bear evidence that he was a master workman.

After his first marriage he still made his home under the paternal roof, occasionally assisting his father at farming. In the spring of 1821, he purchased the large and well known "Gates farm" adjoining his father's. During the following summer he built the large mansion house on the main road. This was his happy home for nearly sixty years. In the business of farming he was admirably sustained by his most estimable wife, whose energy and good judgment were equal to any emergency. Not many houses were better furnished, or more homelike than theirs.

He was educated under the most rigid form of Orthodox faith. He was tendered the best pew in the new Meeting House, was elected Deacon, which office he held for fifty-eight years. He was strictly temperate, of a cheerful disposition, and regular habits. He was a very industrious man, working until a few days before his death. He left the record of a noble life and character. He died Oct. 3, 1881, after an illness of but three days, at the advanced age of 92 years, 10 months, 4 days.

Born in Northborough, Mass., Apr. 26, 1794; died Mar. 8, 1878, aged 83 yrs. 10 mos. 12 ds.

He was a well known, zealous and successful teacher for many years. He enjoyed the advantages of the Westford Academy, an institution of high standing, and at the age of about sixteen years was called to take the charge of a winter school. His success in this, and one or two others of the same class, induced him to make teaching the occupation of his life.

Having been employed in Weymouth, and Milton, as a teacher of winter schools for some years, he was appointed master of the only annual school in Milton. Here he remained several years, and, after having charge of one of the Dorchester schools a short time, was called to the Grammar Department of the Girls' School in Charlestown, in July, 1826. In this school he was eminently successful, especially as a teacher of reading.

From Charlestown he was appointed to the writing department of the old Adams School in Mason street, Boston, where he remained until 1845, when he left the service of the city, and opened a private school in Milton, which he continued for several years.

Soon after he became a resident of Milton, he united with the Congregational Church, of which Rev. Dr. Gile was pastor, and was a beloved and revered member of the same at the time of his death. He was ever an active friend of Sabbath schools.

Taught in the common schools very successfully and in time became Principal of an Academy in Stamford, Conn. There he met and married the one with whom he lived, in an exceptionally happy home, until his death, in 1873, two years after the celebration of their Golden Wedding.

Removing from Stamford back to Mass., he engaged in the manufacture of palm-leaf hats, straw bonnets and other straw goods, which business he followed in Mass., and finally in New York City, for some twelve years.

In 1837 he removed to Morgan Co., Ill., settling on a farm near Jacksonville, afterward removing to a farm in Concord, ten miles away, in the same County, where he resided during the remainder of his life.

He was a man of fine presence, of commanding abilities and of rare moral characteristics; a genuine Puritan in faith and practice; a typical Deacon of the Congregational Church; a generous giver and efficient worker in the Master's vineyard; a worthy Christian gentleman of the old school, held in honor while he lived, and in honored remembrance ever.

John B. Fairbank

He married, in New York City, Nov. 6, 1821, Hannah M. Crissy.

CHILDREN:

426. JAMES CHANDLER FAIRBANK, of Oakham, Mass.
(176), Ephraim VI, Josiah V, Jonas IV, Jabez III, Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born in New Ipswich, N. H., May 24, 1801; died in Oakham, where he had removed in early manhood, Mar. 31, 1877, aged 75 yrs., 10 mos. and 7 ds.

The following words are quoted from an old letter, written by a friend of the family soon after his decease.

"I was but a girl when the Fairbanks came from New Ipswich to Oakham, but I remember them well,—a family of brothers, all enterprising and influential. They put new life into the town, and new ideas into the minds of many,—ideas of good will, kindness and helpfulness, and from that hour, till one by one they passed from mortal sight, they all fulfilled the rich promise of their youth. The world is better for them, and will be in ages yet to come, inasmuch as good deeds are immortal."

Another wrote of his life as being one of "Rare beauty and cheerfulness, not lived to himself, but for others," and added, "The dear Fairbank family of that old time generation, are now all gathered in the world beyond. They were a genial race, naturally loving to do good, as they had opportunity, and giving a world of cheer and brightness to others."

This estimate of his character, as well as that of his brothers, is of special significance, with respect to the law of heredity, when it is found that their descendants, as a rule, have been, and are, people of high standing, whether in the higher or humbler walks of life.

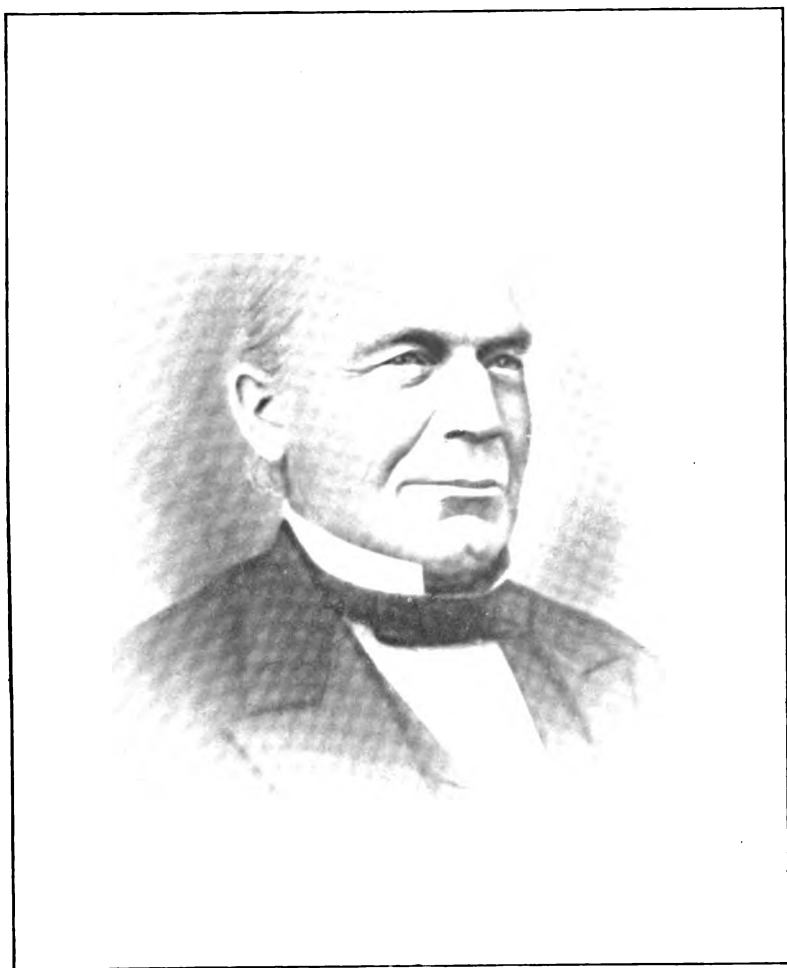

He married, June 9, 1825, Lurana, daughter of John and Susannah (Fay) Robinson, who was born Oct. 29, 1803, and died June 21, 1878. She was a descendant of Rev. John Robinson, the Pilgrim Pastor of the Mayflower.

 6. Alonzo Miner, born in Broadalbin, N. Y., Sept. 19, 1834; married, in Arkansas, Aug., 1870, Frances Richards. He died in Hockers, Ark., Sept., 1891; no children.

At the beginning of the civil war he was a resident of Memphis, Tenn., where he had resided for several years, and where his property was located. His sympathy with the North was well known, and, on his refusing to join the Confederate army, he was about to be pressed into that service, when he was taken sick with a fever. This gave him a short respite, and, as soon as he had sufficiently recovered, he escaped from the city, in company with two other Northern men, in Oct., 1861. They made their way down the Mississippi river, and, having a place of concealment, they remained in the marshes, living on fish and game, until the following May. During this time they had seen no one, and supposing that the war must be over, they returned to Memphis. Here they were arrested and placed on board a Confederate gunboat going down the river. One night, soon after leaving Memphis, the boat was obliged to seek shelter, from a storm, behind an island. During the flashes of lightning Mr. Fairbanks recognized the island, and, having communicated this to his friends, the three managed when unobserved, to slip over the side of the boat and escape to the land. Unfortunately the owner, and only inhabitant of the island, was a rebel. He was acquainted with Mr. Fairbanks, and although he received the fugitives into his house, on the following morning he and his two sons took the only boat, and went for officers to arrest them. This man's wife, however, was in sympathy with the Union cause, and, after the departure of her husband and sons, concealed the men in a smoke house, and locked it on the outside. On their return the rebels searched the whole island but did not think of looking in the smoke house, as it was locked from the outside. After dark the woman let them out, and they took the boat and started for New Orleans, which was occupied by the Union army. Traveling by night and hiding during the day, it took eight days to reach their destination. Here they enlisted in the 12th regiment, Maine Volunteers. After the term for which he enlisted had expired, he re-enlisted in a Michigan regiment.

(180), John VI, John V, Thomas IV, Jabez III, Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born in "The Chazy," New York, July 27, 1798; died in White Earth, Apr. 20, 1880.

He was a useful scout for the American army during the war of 1812. Was in the battle on Lake Champlain, and rendered efficient service during that engagement, for which he received the thanks of his commanding officer.

In 1822 he was employed by the American Fur Co., under the late John Jacob Astor. He filled all the positions of trust as chief trader, with profit to his employers and great credit to himself, until the dissolution of the company in 1835. He then entered the service of the Northwest Fur Co., successors to the American Fur Co., and remained in their service until their dissolution in 1848.

He was known to every Chippewa Indian in Minnesota, and was master of the Indian languages. He was a man of high moral worth, strictly temperate in his habits, charitable to a fault, and noted for his tender affection for his children. He was the soul of honor, and it has often been said that he had not an enemy in the world.

Married, in Mackinaw, Mich., Mary Sayer, whose mother was the daughter of an Indian chief.

CHILDREN :

1. Maria, born in Vermillion Lake, Minnesota, Feb. 21, 1821 ; married, Oct. 15, 1841, Paul Hudon Beaulieu, of White Earth. He was born in Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., May 10, 1817. He is a son of Bazile Hudon de Beaulieu and Ogemahgeshigoquay, daughter of White Raven, Chief of the Wisconsin Chippewas. She was baptized as Margaret Racine. He resides in White Earth Indian Agency, and has been an interpreter since 1843, assisting in concluding many treaties with the Chippewa tribe of Indians. He accompanied Gen. Fremont on his first trip to the "Rockies," joining that expedition in Fort Bent, Arkansas. In 1838, he went to Los Angeles, Cal., with Jean Tete and others, as employees of Bent and St. Vrain. In 1853, he was detailed as interpreter and guide to Gov. I. I. Stevens, in his tour of exploration in the West.

His father, who was employed by the American Fur Co., was descended from the Beaulieu family, who came to America from France, twelve years before the revolutionary war. "Hudon" was the original family name; they were royalists in the old country, and, for meritorious services rendered to their sovereign, De Beaulieu was added to their name.

He was the first Station Agent at Saugus Centre, on the completion of the Saugus Branch of the "Eastern R. R." in 1856, and kept the Office, until he enlisted in 1862; when by consent of the R. R. Officials the office was held open for him on his return; the duties meanwhile being attended to by his son John, under the oversight of his patriotic wife, who, notwithstanding her family cares, and the fact that her husband was past enlistment age, said, "Your Country needs you, Our Heavenly Father will watch over us." He was a man of sterling integrity, appointed Justice of the Peace by Gov. John A. Andrew, and was a personal friend of Massachusetts' great War Governor, as well as of Phillips, Prescott, Train and others. On his return from the War, he presented Gov. Andrews with a penholder made by himself from the "ribs" of one of the great wooden War Ships destroyed by the Rebel "Merrimac."

He early became a member of the "Orthodox" church in Saugus, and was a trusted official in it until he moved West; he was also a Deacon for several years. He enlisted in the Civil War in his 49th year, in the 25th Mass. Reg., and served through the war with honor, being detailed in charge of the Ordnance Stores, at New Berne, N. C.

Born in West Boylston, Mass., Dec. 25, 1815. Died in Lancaster, Nov. 27, 1891.

He lived on the farm where he and his father were born until eight years of age, when his father died, and he went to live with his uncle, William Davis, in Dublin, N. H., remaining there until he reached the age of twenty-one. Becoming tired of farming, he went to Stow, and connected himself with Marshall Davis, in the Hotel and livery business. In 1846, he married, and went back to the farm where he was born, having acquired money enough to purchase the interests of the other heirs. In 1852 he removed to Sterling and carried on a livery establishment there, successfully for nine years. Having disposed of this property, he purchased the hotel in North Lancaster. This was a widely known and popular resort, and had a large patronage. Thirty years of hotel life made the genial proprietor many friends, and his bountiful table was always a sure attraction for guests.

He married, Jan. 18, 1846, Rhoda Houghton, who was born in Harvard, Mass.

469. REV. CALVIN FAIRBANK, Angelica, N. Y.
(207), Chester VI, Calvin V, Joshua IV, Jabez III, Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born, in Pike, N. Y., Nov. 3, 1816. He is still living (Apr. 1897) in Angelica, hale and vigorous, in his 81st year. He has rendered much valuable assistance in the preparation of the genealogies of the families in the line of his grandfather, Calvin, for this book.

He began his academical studies at the seminary in Lima, N. Y., but about the same time was attracted to the "new and growing institution" in Oberlin, O., from which he was graduated in 1844. While pursuing his course in college, he was licensed to preach, and, in 1842, was ordained an elder, in the M. E. Church.

The active and radical part which he took in the movement for the abolition of human slavery in this country, and the imprisonments and stripes which he suffered, made him a most prominent figure in the early history of the anti-slavery crusade.

In 1890 he published a most interesting story of his labors in the cause which he had espoused, entitled "Rev. Calvin Fairbank during Slavery Times. How he Fought the Good Fight to Prepare the way." He says:

"Forty-seven slaves I guided toward the North Star, in violation of the state codes of Kentucky and Virginia. I piloted them through the forests, mostly by night, girls, — fair and white, dressed as ladies; men and boys, as gentlemen or servants — men in women's clothes, and women in men's clothes; on horseback, in buggies, in carriages, common wagons, in and under loads of hay, straw, old furniture, boxes and bags; crossed the Jordan of the slave, swimming, or wading chin deep, or in boats, or skiffs, on rafts, and often on a pine log. And I never allowed one to be recaptured. None of them so far as I have learned, have ever come to poverty or disgrace. For aiding these slaves to escape, I was twice imprisoned,— in all, seventeen years and four months." The punishments which he received, while in prison, were almost beyond the power of even a man of his strength to withstand.

He was first arrested in 1844, for aiding slaves to escape from bondage, together with Miss Delia A. Webster, of Vergennes, Vt., then a school teacher in Lexington, Ky., who was charged with complicity in his offences. She was tried, convicted, and sentenced to two years imprisonment. He, seeing the uselessness of standing a trial, and to aid Miss Webster to procure a pardon, pleaded "Guilty by Kentucky Statutes," and argued his own case. He was sentenced to the Kentucky Penitentiary for a term of fifteen years, and was committed Feb. 15, 1845. He was pardoned, Aug. 23, 1840, through the persistent efforts of his friends, particularly his father, who, while awaiting the action of Gov. Crittenden, in the matter of the pardon, fell a victim of the cholera, and died in Lexington, July 7, 1840.

After his liberation from prison he had a great desire to remove the body of his father, which "lay among strangers, far from any one who cared for him or revered and loved his memory," and he went south for that purpose, in the fall of 1851. On arriving in Cincinnati he found the weather too warm for such an undertaking, and was forced to wait for a cooler season. While waiting, he took the field, with others in the river tier of counties, in Indiana, in opposition to the proposed amendment to the constitution of that state, which prohibited persons of African descent from settling in Indiana. While engaged in that work he was induced to undertake the rescue of Tamar, a young mulatto woman, who was doomed to be sold on the block. He crossed the Ohio river, on that mission, by night, at Louisville, and, conducted her to a place of safety, in Indiana. On the 9th of November, while planning to go the next day, to Lexington, to disinter the body of his father, he was kidnapped in Jeffersonville, Ind., and carried into Kentucky, and, in the following March, was tried, convicted, and sentenced to fifteen years imprisonment at hard labor, and was taken from jail to the penitentiary in Frankfort, in irons, March 9, 1852. He remained in prison until April 15, 1864, when he was pardoned by Lieut.-Gov. Richard T. Jacob.

Among those whom Mr. Fairbank and Miss Webster assisted to escape were Lewis Hayden and his wife and son. Mr. Hayden became prosperous, and for some time held an official position in the state house, in Boston. He died some years ago, and the property which he had accumulated, amounting to four or five thousand dollars, was bequeathed by his widow, who died Dec. 24, 1893, to Harvard University, to found a scholarship for the benefit of poor and deserving colored students.

He married I, in Oxford, Ohio, June 9, 1864, Mandana, daughter of Cornelius and Elvira (Williams) Tileston, who was born in Williamsburg, Mass., Oct. 9, 1826; she died in Williamsburg, Sept. 29, 1876. He says in his book, page 138 et seq: "Miss Mandana Tileston, to whom I was engaged in 1851, had left her New England home and repaired to Ohio, where she could watch over my condition, and if possible render me service, and established a temporary residence in Oxford, as a teacher, so that she could watch events, through friends in Cincinnati and Frankfort. Through her and others I was constantly supplied with money and articles of comfort during that whole period, from 1852 to April 15, 1864. As often as her vacations would allow she visited me, in prison, strengthening my heart, and by her open, brave, frank and simple fidelity, made many friends, among even the most inflexible pro-slavery citizens."

Married II, June 5, 1879, Adeline Winegar.

Born in Barnard, Vt., May 4, 1824; resides in Springfield, Ohio. He was reared on a farm, and received a common school education; when a mere lad he went to Ware, Massachusetts, and found employment in a woolen factory. In 1837 he journeyed by stage and canal from the Bay State to Ohio. Later he returned to Ware, Massachusetts, and learned the wagon making trade, and then returned to Homer, Union County, Ohio, where he worked at his trade several years. In 1848 he purchased land near Unionville Centre, Union County, Ohio, and turned his attention to farming. About 1870, he took up his residence in Delaware, in order that his children might enjoy better educational privileges, and there carried on the city foundry for three years. He continued his active interest in agriculture, and served, eight years, as a member of the Agricultural Board of Union County.

He was much interested in politics, and took an active part in the local work, serving as a delegate on several occasions, but acting only as one of the rank and file, and not as an office seeker. The only public offices he ever held were those of Township and School trustee. His first vote was cast with the Free Soil Party.

Heintzleman's staff, where he served till after the battle of Bull Run.

He was mustered out Aug. 7, 1861, and a few days afterward, Aug. 21, re-enlisted as Major of the Fifth Mich. Infantry, usually designated the "Fighting Fifth," which left Detroit for Virginia.

This regiment first engaged in battle at Williamsburg, May 5, 1862, while serving in Berry's Brigade in Kearney's Division, and behaved with great gallantry and unusual efficiency, but sustained a loss, in a force of 500, of 39 killed and 119 wounded, including among the killed, Lieut. James Gunning, and among the wounded, Lieut. Col. S. E. Beach, leaving Maj. Fairbanks in command. It next went into action at Fair Oaks, May 31, with a force of about 300, losing 30 killed, 116 wounded, and 5 missing. It was again engaged on Chickhominy, June 25th, at Peach Orchard, June 29th, and at Charles City Cross Roads on the 30th, where it lost 51 in killed and wounded, and among the wounded was Maj. Fairbanks, commanding the regiment, who died of his wounds in Washington on the 25th of July following, regarded as a brave and exemplary officer. Abstract from the Report of the Adjutant General of Michigan.

Prior to his entering the military service he was an enthusiastic member of the old Volunteer Fire Department of the city of Detroit, and very much beloved, not only by his associates, but by all who knew him, and many of his friends in that Department followed him into the service in the same regiment. Fairbanks Post, G. A. R. of Detroit, was named in honor of his memory.

He married, in Sylvania, O., Adelaide Talbot, Aug. 29, 1852. She was born Dec. 11, 1830, in East Barton, Dorsetshire, Eng., and is a daughter of James and Amelia (Snook) Talbot. They had no children. 502. DAVID FAIRBANKS, Rockingham, Vt.
(220), Lewis VI, Oliver V, Benoni IV, Jonathan III, Jonathan II, Jonathan I.

Born in Springfield, Vt., Feb. 26, 1826. Resides in Rockingham; is a farmer.

He was slender as a child, and in early manhood. His education was obtained in the common school, supplemented by a few terms at an academy. He taught school winters, and worked at farming when able. He studied chemistry while lying upon a couch, being unable to sit up but a small part of the time. He says the study of chemistry opened a new world to him,—a world in which he learned the processes of nature and became conscious of his own ignorance.

Having recovered his health, he started in the summer of 1855, to go to Kansas, but stopped in Illinois, and worked in a harvest field till again prostrated by sickness. When able he went to Wisconsin, taught school in the winter of 1856, and then engaged in selling maps and books in central and southern Illinois, where he witnessed the stirring events of the Lincoln and Douglas political campaign. He had the pleasure of loaning his shawl to Lincoln, after he had made a speech at a barbecue.

In the spring of 1857, he went to Kansas, and preempted land near Olathe, remaining in that state and Missouri until 1860, engaged in teaching. He returned to Vermont on the occasion of the death of his father, in 1860. Though intending to go back to Kansas, he was detained by business, and remained in Vermont until 1862; then he enlisted in the 16th Vt. Infantry. Soon after going to the front, he was detailed to act as hospital steward for the regiment, in which capacity he served till he was mustered out. He was at the battle of Gettysburg. In March, 1865, he reenlisted in the 17th Vt. Infantry, as hospital steward, but on presenting himself for service, he learned of orders against the mustering in of any more men for this regiment. The delay in getting a special order prevented his muster, the end of the war being in sight.

Since 1865 he has been engaged in farming and stock raising on Connecticut River farms, in Springfield and Rockingham, with fair success.

His first Presidential vote was cast for General Scott, and he has voted for every Republican nominee for President since that time. He belongs to the church, and is a firm believer in Christianity.

He married, June 1, 1885, Merriel N. (Bates) Aldrich, daughter of James and Mary (Grimes) Bates, of Springfield, who was born Feb. 22, 1838. They have had no children.

508. CAPT. WOODBURY FAIRBANK, of Antrim, N. H.
(226), Zaccheus VI, Samuel V, Samuel IV, Jonathan III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Antrim, Oct. 31, 1800. He was named Peter Woodbury Fairbank, but subsequently had the name changed to Woodbury Fairbank, by an act of the legislature of New Hampshire. He was educated in the public schools of that day. Later he learned the trade of carpenter, mason and decorative painter. Engaged in contracting and building in Antrim and the neighboring towns. At about the age of twenty-three he went on a tour of investigation as far west as Rochester, N. Y., before there was any railroad, or even a stage coach. Returning he went through the state of Vermont and stopped at Highgate, where he met Meriam Wilcox, whom he married in Aug., 1825.

Mr. Fairbank soon returned to Antrim, and built a pleasant and comfortable house in a picturesque spot among the hills. He was of an amiable and hospitable disposition, and cared for his own as well as his wife's parents in their old age. He was commissioned, by Gov. Benjamin Pierce, Capt. of the 6th Co., 26th Reg. of N. H. militia, March 13, 1830. After the death of his father he moved to Lowell, Mass., in 1844, where his children were educated. He became engaged in manufacturing. In all the relations of life he was respected for his kindness and integrity. He died in Lowell, Aug. 23, 1869, that being the 44th anniversary of his marriage.

He married, Aug. 23, 1825, Meriam Wilcox. She was of Scotch origin, being on her mother's side, a McDougall. The McDougall family came to Argyle, N. Y., and settled on the land grant given to the colony by the King of England. She died in 1887, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Godown, in Indianapolis, Ind., aged 77.

511. HIRAM TOLBERT FAIRBANKS, Petaluma, Cal.
 (229), Sheldon VII, Nathan VI, Nathan V, John IV, John III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born Dec. 29, 1827, in Manchester, Indiana.

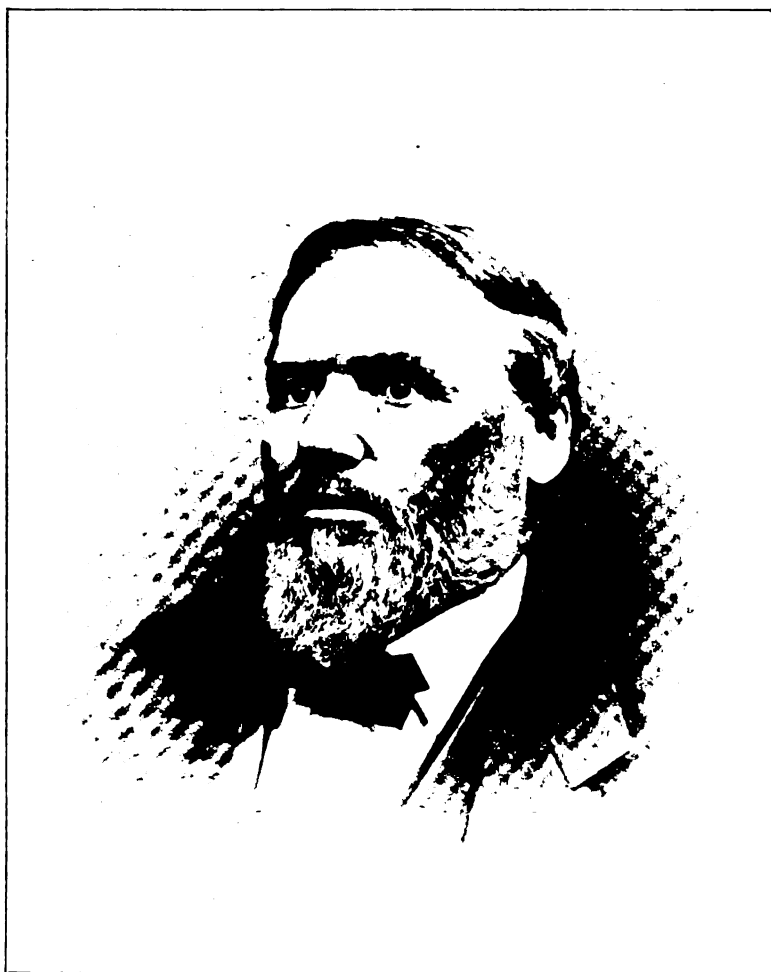

When 19 years old he emigrated to Iowa, settling in Augusta, Des Moines county, where he made his home with the Hon. Levi Moffett. In 1849 he returned to Indiana, and the following year he crossed the plains to California, where he engaged in mining with his brother, Augustus D. Fairbank, at Mormon Island, on the south fork of the American river. Success attended him in his mining operations, and he returned to Indiana in 1851, going from there to Iowa, where he followed merchandising. In addition to his mercantile pursuits, he engaged in milling, which he followed with success until 1859, when he again crossed the plains to the Golden State, taking with him his wife and four children, and arriving at Petaluma in the fall. He engaged in farming, in connection with the lumber trade, until 1861, when he abandoned agriculture, and established himself as one of Petaluma's merchants in 1862, and also opened a commission house in San Francisco. Seven years later he disposed of his business in Petaluma. In 1870 he retired from the commission business in San Francisco, and embarked in the mercantile trade, with the Hon. A. P. Whitney, in Petaluma. He was one of the founders of the Petaluma Savings bank, which was organized in 1870, and has been its manager and president ever since. Besides his interest in the bank, of which his eldest son, Col. D. B. Fairbanks, is cashier, he and his sons own the extensive plant known as the Golden Eagle flour mill, in Petaluma, conducted by J. F. and W. H. Fairbanks, and a fine large ranch in Humboldt county, managed by Augustus Fairbanks. He owns an elegant house on D street, which is in striking contrast with the old Fairbanks home in which he first lived. The name of Fairbanks is indissolubly connected with the growth and prosperity of Petaluma. Hiram T. and his sons stand in the front rank of its leading citizens, and are widely known for their financial ability, unblemished records and rigid integrity.

He married, July 14, 1852, Lucinda, daughter of Hon. Levi and Elizabeth (Keek) Moffett, of Augusta, Iowa, who was born in Orangeville, Iowa, March 2, 1833.

Born in Franklin, Mass., July 24, 1795; died suddenly, in Providence, in the summer of 1876, aged 81 years.

He was a prominent merchant in Providence,—first, in the hat and cap business, then in the grocery trade, and later was a cotton merchant. He was very much interested in the anti-slavery cause; lectured upon the subject, and saved many a colored man from going back to bondage. He and his family lived for a time with his brother-in-law, William E. Richmond, and their house was always open to the anti-slavery people.

A daughter writes:

“Many a time I have seen a long table set in our dining room filled with only colored people, and my sister, Mrs. Peckham, and myself waiting on them. One or two winters, father gave anti-slavery lectures, I might say, several winters, and I well remember the first one, when I was a very young child, given in a small hall by Abby Kelly Foster, and, on her return home with my mother there was quite a large mob followed them with rotten eggs.

Charles Sumner, Wendell Phillips, and William Lloyd Garrison always staid at my uncle's, and we used to enjoy seeing them; and I could name many others.”

Married, Oct. 3, 1825, Anna Talbot, daughter of William and Hannah (Mason) Richmond, of Providence, where she was born in 1797. She died March 23, 1870, aged 73 years.

Born in Winthrop, Me., Nov. 16, 1821.

Joseph W. Fairbanks.

He received his early education in the district school, and learned lessons of industry, self-control, and honesty in the home circle. In the month of September 1844, he went to Farmington, and entered the store of his brother Franklin, as a clerk. Two years later, having acquired a thorough knowledge of the boot and shoe business, he became his brother's successor, and after a long and prosperous career, retired from mercantile life in 1878.

Since that time he has been identified with the banking interests of the town. He has been a trustee of the Franklin County Savings Bank from its organization in 1868, President of the Sandy River National Bank, and now fills the position of vice president of its successor, the First National Bank. During the Rebellion he was a strong supporter of the Union. He has been active in giving to the place the best railroad facilities, and is at present superintending the erection of a new Normal School Building.

Among the offices held by Mr. Fairbanks have been those of Representative and Senator to the Legislature of Maine, 1864-68, and of Valuation Commissioner, 1880-81. He is now President of the Franklin County Savings Bank, Chairman of the Republican County Committee, Trustee of the State Normal School, and is serving his eighth consecutive term as Selectman and Assessor of the town.

He married (I), Oct. 14, 1852, Susan Evelina, daughter of Hon. Hiram and Evelina (Cony) Belcher, of Farmington. She was born Mar. 29, 1825, and died Nov. 8, 1875.

560. LORENZO SAYLES FAIRBANKS, Boston, Mass.
(263), Joel VII, Abner VI, John V, Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Pepperell, Mass., Mar. 16, 1825. His parents removed the same year to New Boston, N. H., where he was reared and received his early education. In youth he "enjoyed" his share of farm work, and some "recreation" assisting his father in his business.

At a very early age, influenced by a favorable environment, he became ambitious to go to college. The town had always taken a great interest in the cause of education. No less than six of his schoolmates in the old red school house on the hill, were destined for college. Home influences were good, but his parents had never dreamed of giving any of their sons a liberal education. They thought that good trades would be their best equipment for the battle of life. His father, with a large family to support, could not be expected to offer encouragement, in the way of promising assistance. The son, trained from childhood to habits of industry and self reliance, preferred to fight his own way, and did, till he reached the goal of his ambition. He was graduated from Dartmouth College, in the class of 1852, having paid all his expenses from the beginning of his preparatory course.

After leaving the district school, he embraced every opportunity to continue his studies. He attended two private schools, at different periods, and later, for two "Fall Terms," enjoyed the advantages of special schools of academical grade, conducted in the village by college students or graduates. Afterwards he was employed for three years in a general country store, gaining there an experience which, unexpectedly, proved to be the stepping stone to further advancement. Having acquired some knowledge of single entry bookkeeping, he made a thorough study of double entry, and taught that and other commercial branches, as a means of defraying the expenses of his education.

He began his preparation for college at Hancock Academy; followed his excellent teacher, Prof. Bunnell, after one year, to Townshend (Vt.) Academy, and finally to Black River Academy, Ludlow, Vt., where his preparatory course was completed. Then, to replenish a "sinking fund," he taught a grammar school in Canton, Mass., for one year, after which, in ten weeks of hard study, at home, he qualified himself, without the aid of a teacher, to pass an examination in the entire curriculum of the freshman year, and was admitted, without conditions, to the sophomore class in Dartmouth, at the opening of the fall term, 1849.

During his college course he was chosen a member of the Alpha Delta Phi Society, and, at graduation, was elected to the Phi Beta Kappa Society. Was president of the former, and of the "Social Friends," a public literary society. In the program of the Commencement Exercises, he was assigned to deliver the closing oration, which was regarded, nominally, as the only honorary part. There was no valedictory address, the honor system, strictly speaking, having been abolished a few years before, and being then in abeyance, though later readopted.

He studied law in New York City, and was admitted to the bar in 1853. Commenced the practice of his profession there, but after three years, "catching the western fever," he removed to Iowa, settling in Davenport. This step was unfortunate. The times were unpropitious. The crisis of 1857 was approaching, and, above all, the legal profession was overcrowded, and there was but a poor show for new-comers, who had no foothold. Very reluctantly he resolved to leave his profession, for the time being, and go into a business with which he was familiar. Receiving a favorable offer, he went to Philadelphia, to take charge of an established Commercial School. Employed at first on a salary, he became a partner at the expiration of a year, the partnership continuing for two years longer, when, not fully satisfied with his associations, he "seceded," and set up an establishment of his own, with some marked improvements.

The success of the new institution was phenomenal. Over five hundred students were received the first year, and about seven hundred and fifty the second year. The patronage was steadily maintained till he retired from the business in 1868. During this period he prepared and published an elaborate Treatise on Bookkeeping, an octavo volume of 444 pages. Subsequently he published, in New York, a Business Arithmetic, containing some novel features.

In 1874 he came to Boston and resumed the practice of his profession, in which he has been engaged ever since, occasionally attending to other affairs of more or less importance. In 1877 he published a small book on "The Marriage and Divorce Laws of Massachusetts," which had a large local sale, and a revised edition was issued in 1882.

The compilation of this "Genealogy of the Fairbanks Family," has absorbed all his spare time for nearly five years, a labor of love and sentiment, with a pardonable pride in trying to present to his numerous cousins the records of their honorable ancestry of which, when the work was begun, most of them, as well as their humble servant, were in dense ignorance.

Married in New York City, July 24, 1856, Mrs. Sarah Elisabeth Skelton, daughter of Samuel S. and Rebecca (Pearl) Heath, of Bradford, Mass.

John Pearl, of Boxford, Mass., her grandfather, was a minute-man, and responded to the Lexington Alarm, Apr. 19, 1775.

She was graduated from Bradford Academy, was a proficient scholar, Latin being her favorite study. Even during the latter years of her life, she frequently repeated the Latin fables learned in childhood. She was a rare woman, one on whom the burden of years rested lightly, and whose heart had kept its youth. Her trust in her Heavenly Father never faltered, and His leading was right, even though she could not understand it. She was possessed of a very genial, sympathetic nature, and was the confidant and comforter of the sick, the troubled, and the afflicted. Her long life was one of love and devotion to her husband and children. She died in Boston, June 2, 1894.

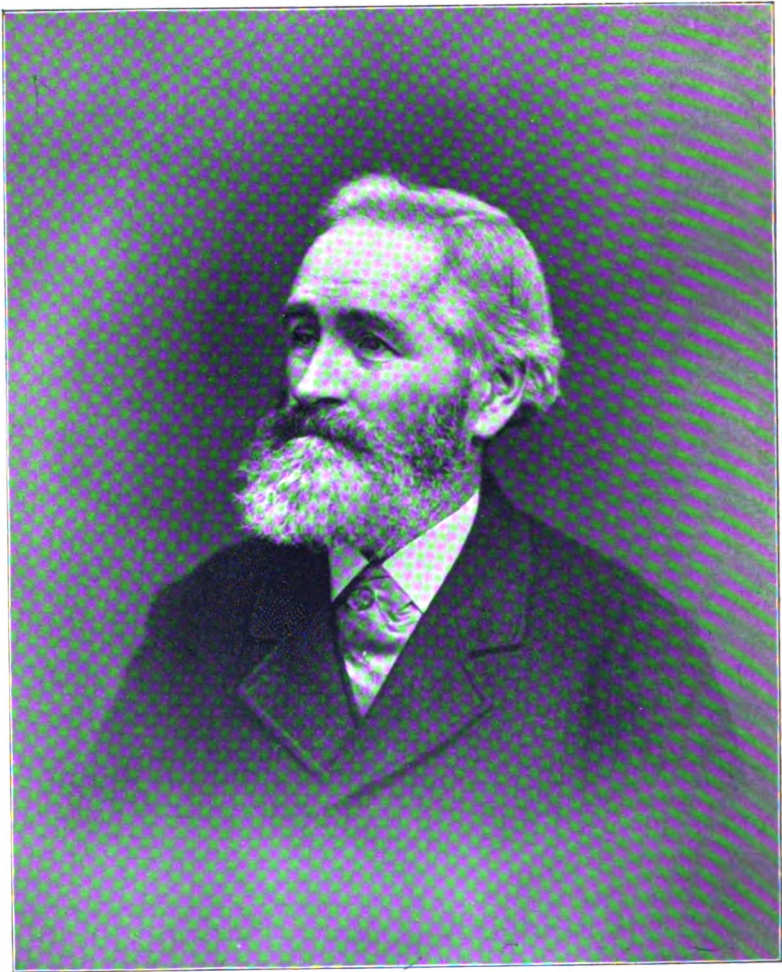

CHILDREN:

1. Annie Barber, born in Davenport, Ia., Jan. 16, 1858; died in Bradford, Mass., Nov. 15, 1863.

supplying all the bread, meat, and provisions, used in the war hospital at the North End of Manchester, where the wounded soldiers at the front were removed by the government. He faithfully carried out this contract, from his two stores, until the hospital was discontinued in 1864.

He was deputy sheriff and jailor of Hillsboro' County, from 1864, until the State became Democratic ten years later, when he retired to private life, but soon became interested in the Undertaking firm of Pearson & Wallace, as a silent partner. Upon the death of Mr. Pearson in 1884, he became an active partner, and was very successful in this line of business, in which he continued until his decease. He always took a lively interest in the politics of the city, and State, being first a Whig, and later an ardent Republican, and filled various official positions with honor to himself, and advantage to the community. Was a member of the Legislature in 1881-82, County Commissioner from 1883 to 1889, and Chairman of the Board three years; was a State Senator in 1892-93, serving on important committees.

In every position Mr. Fairbanks made warm friends, and always held the highest respect and esteem of his fellow townsmen, among whom he had been a prominent factor for advancement.

For fifty-two years he was a member of the Franklin Street Congregational Church, active in advancing its interests and welfare, and was chairman of the Building Committee, when the church was remodelled in 1878.

He was a member of Mechanics' lodge, No. 13, I. O. O. F., and for fifteen years served as quarter master of the Amoskeag Veterans.

He had the entire confidence of the community because he deserved it; was one of the few men that are always depended upon to do things for others, because he knew how and was capable. He succeeded in business, and leaves a reputation, which is worth to his friends vastly more than the property he accumulated.

Married, Sept. 10, 1844, Harriet A., daughter of Joshua B. and Deborah (Merrill) Dodge, of Francestown, where she was born Dec. 23, 1821. She died Aug. 22, 1891.

565. SAMUEL FAIRBANKS, of Watertown, N. Y.
(269), Jason VII, Samuel VI, Samuel V, Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Watertown, Oct. 6, 1818.

He received the best education to be had in the schools of that day, attending the celebrated French school in Montreal, and graduating at Union College in 1838. Engaging in business with his father for a number of years, he went to Florida in 1852, where he became largely interested in the manufacture of lumber; that business, now so great, having just then attracted attention as a source of profit.

During the four years of the civil war Mr. Fairbanks held the commission of Quartermaster in the Confederate service. Upon the evacuation of Jacksonville, by the Confederate forces in 1862, the mills, including that of Fairbanks & Brother, with over a million feet of lumber, were destroyed by order of the Confederate commander. He remained four years in Richmond, and after the war of secession closed, returned to Florida, and was engaged, mainly, in newspaper work, but later was connected with the State Board of Emigration for Florida—coming north with a view of preparing the most efficient data to aid in a publication to encourage emigration to Florida. In that State he was always held in the highest esteem by his fellow citizens. He was a man of extensive culture, and was a writer of force and cogency. His mind had always a political bias, and his writings indicate an intricate knowledge of the many abstruse questions which appear to puzzle the politicians of today. He was greatly respected in the South, as well as in his old home. Returning to Watertown to prepare his book, he was taken suddenly ill, and died before his friends realized that he was in danger. He died Sept. 25, 1881.

Married, Sept. 19, 1842, Juliet, second daughter of William Smith Esq., an honored citizen of Watertown, who was born in New Haven, Conn., Feb. 10, 1777, and his wife, Alice Nash, born May 20, 1788. She was born Oct. 31, 1817, and died in Jacksonville, Oct. 5, 1890; interred in Watertown.

CHILDREN:

1. Mary Elizabeth, born in Watertown, Sept. 10, 1843; died Sept. 17, 1875.

5. Clara Louise, born in Watertown, Sept. 20, 1850; died in Jacksonville, May 17, 1876.
6. Samuel, 2nd., born in Watertown, Dec. 4, 1851; died Aug. 8, 1852.
7. A son, born in Watertown, Oct. 26, 1854; died Oct. 27, 1854.
8. Juliet, born in Jacksonville, June 30, 1856; died Nov. 9, 1856.

566. MAJOR GEORGE R. FAIRBANKS, Fernandina, Fla.
(269), Jasan VII, Samuel VI, Samuel V, Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Watertown, N. Y., July 5, 1820. Removed to St. Augustine, Florida, in 1842.

He early took an interest in public affairs. Was for a number of years Clerk of the United States Court. In 1846 he was elected State Senator. When the war broke out he enlisted in the Confederate Army, and held the rank of Major.

He is a lawyer by profession, but his tastes incline to literature. Was graduated from Union College in 1839, and has received the degree of M. A. from the same institution. He is the author of the History and Antiquities of St. Augustine, and of a General History of Florida. He is editor of the Florida Weekly Mirror, which position he fills more as a pastime than for profit. For several years he has been President of the Florida Press Association. At the close of the war he moved to Sewanee, Tenn., and, with others, endeavored to rebuild the destroyed hopes of the South. He was Professor of History in the University of the South, in Sewanee, and was one of the original members of the Board of Trustees. He remained there until 1880, when he returned to Florida and located in Fernandina, where he now resides. On his return he was once more elected a trustee of the University of the South, which position he has held ever since.

He is a very prominent lay member of the Episcopal Church. He was confirmed in 1844, by Bishop Elliott of Georgia, in Trinity Church, St. Augustine, and shortly afterwards became Vestryman, and was for many years Warden of that Parish. He represented the Parish in the convention of 1850; was deputy to the General Convention in 1853, and has been a deputy almost continuously since, representing at different times the Diocese of Florida and also that of Tennessee. In 1861 he was a deputy to the General Convention of the Confederate States. He is a Vestryman and Warden of St. Peter's Parish, Fernandina. At the Semi-Centennial of the Diocese of Florida, held at Tallahassee, Jan. 18 and 19, 1888, at the request of the Bishop, he delivered an interesting and instructive address on the "Early Churchmen of Florida," his familiarity with the History of the Church in that Diocese for the past fifty years, and his acquaintance with the Churchmen who helped make that history, eminently fitting him for the duty of writing a sketch of those churchmen. He was appointed by the General Convention to represent the National Church at the Synod of the Dominion of Canada, which is one of the highest honors in the gift of the Convention.

Major Fairbanks is the author and promoter of many of the beneficial laws found upon the statute books of Florida and Tennessee. He is essentially a public man, and is frequently called upon to represent the State in National Agricultural and Forestry Conventions. He has also been for a number of years President of the Florida Fruit Exchange.

He married I, Oct. 8, 1842, Sarah C. Wright, born 1819, daughter of Benjamin and Sarah Wright, who died in St. Augustine, Mar. 22, 1858.

Married II, Apr. 25, 1860, Mrs. Susan B. Wright (widow of Rev. Benjamin Wright), daughter of John Beard, of North Carolina, U. S. Marshal of Florida, Register of public Lands, and many years Comptroller of State.

567. ANDREW JACKSON FAIRBANKS, Watertown, N. Y.

(269), Jasan VII, Samuel VI, Samuel V, Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Watertown, N. Y., March 21, 1826, on the old homestead on Arsenal street, the site now occupied by the New York State Armory.

He received the usual advantages of common schools at the Arsenal street district school, and later he attended the old Watertown Academy. Thence he went to the Black River Institute, closing his studies during the years 1843-4 at the famous French College de Montreal (Sulpician), receiving the first three prizes delivered by the Governor General of Canada, Sir Charles Metcalfe, K. C. B. From 1845 to 1849 he was engaged in his father's business in Watertown. During the years 1849-50. he was purser on the steamers of the Ontario and St. Lawrence Steamboat Company, on Lake Ontario. In 1851 he went to Florida, and entered the employ of a large lumber company on the St. Johns River, with headquarters at Jacksonville. Remaining in Jacksonville until the summer of 1853, he returned to Watertown. In 1856 he again went to Florida, and remained until 1862, leaving Jacksonville, after the capture of that city by the combined naval and military forces of the United States, on a sailing vessel for New York.

Since 1862 he has resided in Watertown, employed in the office of the R. W. & O. R. R., and as an accountant for various mercantile establishments. And now, in his 72d year, he is hale and hearty as at 40, and has a reasonable expectation of many more years of useful life.

577. GEORGE ELLIS FAIRBANKS, Worcester, Mass.
 (277), Ellis VII, David VI, David V, Benjamin IV, Benjamin III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Mansfield, Mass., Nov. 12, 1837; resides in Worcester; is a wholesale and retail druggist.

He entered the drug business in Providence, R. I., in 1853; removed three years later to Worcester; was a clerk for Charles Clark, and was afterward employed by George R. Spurr and G. P. Harlow.

In 1867, in company with George M. Piper, the present business was founded in a smaller store at 10 Front street, which forms a part of the present great establishment. The present store is 22x140, with a basement of equal size. There is a finely equipped laboratory which extends under the sidewalk, and the entire premises are filled with the enormous stock, which the demands of the great wholesale trade, reaching all over New England, make necessary. The retail department, which is entered from the street, is one of the handsomest drug stores to be found in New England.

He was the first druggist to build up a wholesale trade in Worcester, and his business has had a remarkable growth, in part due to the successful pushing of certain specialties. He employs fourteen clerks and several travelling salesmen.

Married I, Ellen Ursulu Bacon, Apr. 5, 1860, who died July 27, 1872, aged 29 yrs. 10 mos. She was born in Sutton, Mass., and was a daughter of Rufus and Persis B. Bacon.

608. ABEL WHITMORE FAIRBANKS, of Cleveland, Ohio. (297), Zabab VII, Abel VI, Eleazer V, Eleasur IV, Eliesur III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Cornish, N. H., March 4, 1817.

He inherited from his parents a frame and constitution of very unusual strength, as well as courage, pluck and firmness of character, in keeping with his physical attributes. Like many another strong and peaceable man, these qualities of mind and body were happily blended with great tenderness of heart, and a sense of humor, that tended to lighten the burdens of a life of hard work, incident to great business undertakings and responsibilities.

He was what is called a "self made" man. He achieved success against obstacles and circumstances, which would have discouraged a man of less persistence and industry. At about the age of twelve years he entered a printing office, and served an apprenticeship under the hard conditions that prevailed in those days, acquiring, however, a thorough knowledge of every detail of the craft. At that time there were no power presses outside of the City of New York. Buckskin balls were then in use instead of rollers, to ink the type form, and the impressions were worked off by "pulling the Devil's tail," as the phrase was, in the time of the old Franklin hand press. It was a hard school, but it turned out a good printer.

In 1836 he was in charge of the job department of the "Detroit Advertiser"; he purchased the effects of the old "Toledo Blade," which had suspended publication for want of patronage. He revived it, and started it on the road to the distinguished success it has since achieved.

In 1849 he removed to Cleveland, Ohio, then a promising town, and purchased a half interest in the Cleveland "Herald," which was founded in 1819. Here, as in Toledo, his practical ability, shrewd judgment, and good taste, gave new impulse to the growth and effectiveness of the establishment, of which in the course of years he became sole owner. He took to Cleveland the first modern steam printing press, and he erected for the "Herald" the first stone-front building in Cleveland, and in many ways was identified with the growth and development of the city, that is now the metropolis of the lower lake region. The "Herald" was recognized for many years as the leading newspaper of Northern Ohio. He had many interests outside of the "Herald," some of which unfortunately, resulted disastrously for his purse. He was at the head of the company that built the Euclid Avenue Opera House, since destroyed by fire and rebuilt, and he was largely identified with railroad and manufacturing enterprises of the city, winning for himself a place among the most progressive and public spirited citizens of Cleveland.

He was never active in politics, although an ardent and steadfast Republican always, and an earnest supporter of good government.

He was obliged by the impairment of his strength, due to advancing years, to retire from the "Herald" some years before his death, and thereafter he lived with his youngest daughter, Mrs. Robinson, first in Omaha, Neb., and afterward in Boston, where he died on July 4, 1894. He was buried beside his father and mother, in Cleveland, O.

He was twice married, first in Toledo, Jan. 15, 1840, to Alice Holmes, who died Mar. 22, 1849.

His second wife was Mary J. Mason, to whom he was married, in Cleveland, Aug. 10, 1852. She is a woman of culture and literary taste; was educated at the Troy Female Seminary, and is now engaged in writing the history of the graduates of that institution. While on a trip to California in 1872, she wrote many interesting sketches of her travels for the "Old Round Table," a department of her husband's paper, which were afterward published in book form. She now resides with her daughter, Mrs. Robinson, in Providence, R. I.

Born in Halifax, N. S., in 1821. Became a civil Engineer, and in that capacity designed and carried out several important works in and out of the city. He rose to special prominence in his profession, and was considered one of the highest authorities on engineering. The existing system of water works (planned when a mere lad), is a monument to his skill and perseverance, his plan for their construction having met with opposition, and even ridicule, at the time the project was mooted. He lived, however, to see his theories verified, and to earn the recognition of his merit by his fellow citizens. An old lady used to say, "Every householder in our town should say (at every hydrant), 'God bless Charlie Fairbanks.'"

625. Gov. HORACE FAIRBANKS, of St. Johnsbury, Vt.
(307), Erastus VII, Joseph VI, Ebenezer V, Eleasur IV, Eliesur III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Barnet, Vt., Mar. 21, 1820 ; died in New York, Mar. 17, 1888.

Received an excellent academic education in the County Schools and Phillips Andover Academy ; at the age of 20 became confidential clerk of E. & T. Fairbanks & Co. ; was soon admitted to partnership, and for 48 years held most important responsibilities in that firm, being more than half this period its President. The expansion and solidity of the corporation was largely due to his wise and capable counsels, and to the general confidence which he personally inspired. His high character and administrative ability were recognized by many business corporations which he was called to serve officially—banking, mining, manufacturing, and educational. He was a chief promoter of the Railway line from Portland to Ogdensburg via the White Mountain Notch, and President of the Vermont division. Though disinclined to accept political office, he was necessarily an important actor in all current interests of his native State. In 1876 there came to him by telegraph from a member of the Republican nominating convention, the announcement: "You are to be Governor of Vermont in spite of yourself." So it proved. He was elected by a very decisive majority, and gave the state a vigorous and statesman-like administration, 1876-1878.

He was deeply interested in the welfare of the town, of which he was a life-long honored citizen. To it, in 1871, he presented the noble Institution endowed and incorporated under the name of The St. Johnsbury Athenæum. This included the free public library, opened with 8,000 carefully chosen volumes, and the Art Gallery, in which is shrined a choice selection from representative American and foreign artists, the central feature of the Gallery being Bierstadt's "Domes of the Yosemite."

Gov. Fairbanks was a man of fine and noble nature, of great dignity of presence, and sweetness of character. He was broad in all his views, yet firm in his personal convictions. The resoluteness with which he held his matured opinions was graced with an unflinching courtesy and gentleness. To his native fineness of perception and taste he added the refinements of a generous culture, and familiarity with the world's best thought and art. The mark of superiority was on all that he originated or did. His modest and beautiful home "Pinehurst," with its park-like surroundings, as well as the characteristic features and equipments of the Athenæum, embody and perpetuate much of his ripe thought and sentiment. He was large and noble in his liberality, a most loyal and lovable Christian, a man greatly honored through all his life.

Married in Derry, N. H., Aug. 9, 1849, Mary E., daughter of James and Persis (Hemphill) Taylor, where she was born Mar. 2, 1824.

CHILDREN:

1. Helen Taylor, born Dec. 17, 1854; died Mar. 18, 1864.
2. Agnes, born Aug. 12, 1860; married Ashton R. Willard, Sept. 19, 1888. Resides in Boston.

CHILD:

- a. Isabel Fairbanks Willard, b. Oct. 3, 1893; d. July 20, 1894.
- b. Theodora Willard, b. Mar. 26, 1897.
3. Isabel, born Nov. 6, 1861; married Albert L. Farwell, of St. Johnsbury, Sept., 1889. She died July 2, 1891.

626. CHARLES FAIRBANKS, Nice, France.
(307), Erastus VII, Joseph VI, Ebenezer V, Elcasur IV, Eliesur III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Barnet, Vt., Dec. 8, 1821. Fitted for college at Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass., but owing to ill health did not pursue his school studies further. Entered the firm of E. & T. Fairbanks & Co., of St. Johnsbury, Vt., and went to New York in 1845, and established the branch house of Fairbanks & Co., and remained there till 1860. Then, on account of continued ill health, he retired from active business, and left for Europe, where he has since resided.

Married, in Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Jan. 2, 1850, Laura R. Woodworth, who was born in Bakersfield, Vt., Mar. 4, 1830, daughter of George Washington and Mary Hill (Stevens) Woodworth, of Saratoga Springs.

CHILDREN:

1. George, born Jan. 6, 1851; died July 20, 1851.
2. Walter, born May 13, 1853; died Sept. 2, 1872.
3. Frederick Charles, born July 2, 1868; resides in Dresden, Saxony; is a Musical Composer and Pianist. He married, Aug. 2, 1891, Emy Block, who was born in St. Petersburg, Russia. No children.

627. COL. FRANKLIN FAIRBANKS, of St. Johnsbury, Vt.
(307), Erastus VII, Joseph VI, Ebenezer V, Eleazar IV, Eliasur III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in St. Johnsbury, June 18, 1828; died Apr. 24, 1895.

Received good academic education, and at the age of 17 began his connection with the scale business, which was continued just 50 years. He had a natural turn for mechanics, and not only kept himself familiar with details of construction, but patented various improvements, among them the revolving beam for letter balances adopted by the government for use in the post offices. He was for many years superintendent of the Corporation of E. & T. Fairbanks & Co., and after the death of his brother Horace in 1888, he succeeded to the presidency of this, and of other business organizations at home and elsewhere.

He was a member of the staff of Gov. Hall in 1858, also of Gov. Erastus Fairbanks in 1860; was active in military affairs, superintended the manufacture of artillery and harness irons for the government during the civil war. He represented his town in the State Legislature in 1871-2-3, the last two years being speaker of the house. For 20 years or more he was an active member of the State republican committee. He was a member of the Masonic fraternity: in 1877 he received the honorary degree of A. M., from Dartmouth College.

He was an intelligent lover of nature; from boyhood he was a keen observer and enthusiastic collector of objects of interest of every sort. His collections, which represented more than half a century's accumulation of increasingly rare value and variety, were shrined in a capacious and architecturally elegant building which was incorporated and presented to the town of St. Johnsbury in 1891, under the designation of the Museum of Natural Science. This was designed to be one of the educational features of the town, affiliated with the Athenæum, Academy, and Union Schools.

Col. Fairbanks was not only always active in business, but in social life; full of geniality and kindly humor; much interested in the welfare of children and young people. He maintained most friendly acquaintance with the factory men, and did much in this way to secure good feeling and prosperity to the business. For more than 30 years he was superintendent of the North Church Sunday School, also for a long time a member of the International S. S. Lesson Committee. In these and other services to the interests of religion and of missions he worked with zeal, and added to the permanent influence of a useful Christian life.

Married, Dec. 8, 1852, Frances A., daughter of Rev. Sumner G. and Pamela (Strong) Clapp, of St. Johnsbury. She was born in Enfield, Mass., Nov. 2, 1831.

CHILDREN:

1. Alfred, born Dec. 8, 1857; died Dec. 9, 1857.
2. Mary Florence, born July 26, 1859; married Sept. 8, 1886, Dr. J. T. Herrick, of Springfield, Mass.

CHILD:

- a. Paul F. Herrick, b. July 19, 1887.
3. Margaret, born June 29, 1862; died Aug. 26, 1863.
4. Ellen Henrietta, born Aug. 18, 1872; married, Jan. 29, 1896, Frank H. Brooks, of St. Johnsbury.

628. REV. HENRY FAIRBANKS, Ph. D., St. Johnsbury, Vt. (308), Thaddeus VII, Joseph VI, Ebenezer V, Eleazar IV, Eliesur III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in St. Johnsbury, May 6, 1830.

In his childhood Henry was never well, and, when nine years old, was put in the saddle, and sent daily to Lyndon Academy, seven miles from home, for three terms. His eleventh year he spent as a student in Pinkerton Academy, Derry, N. H., where, as the youngest boy in school, he learned to endure hardship. A year later his father and uncles established the St. Johnsbury Academy, and secured that prince of instructors, Jas. K. Colby, as principal. There, Henry, studying as his health would allow, was fitted for college. But the mechanical tastes of the family, indicated by the "Item, 2 vices and one turning-laeth, and other Seuch things," in the inventory of the estate of Jonathan Fayerbancke, were strong in Henry, and he spent more time in the shops than in school, making with his boyish hands a good deal of apparatus for elementary instruction in Physics, which is still in use. In 1848, not being well, he took passage in a sailing vessel for Europe, where he spent nearly a year. Returning to Dartmouth College in the spring of 1850, he was graduated in 1853, ranking high, especially in Mathematics and Physics. From College he went to Andover Theological Seminary. In the spring of 1856, he again laid down his books, and, in company with Principal Samuel H. Taylor, went through Egypt, Palestine, Greece, Italy and Switzerland, where he made the ascent of Mt. Blanc, at a time when it was a rare feat, and the present safer route had not been opened. Returning, he preached during the winter, and re-entering the Seminary, was graduated in the class of 1857. He then took up work under the auspices of the Missionary Society, in behalf of the weakest churches of Vermont, and, visiting them, studied their individual needs, so that, having wide acquaintance with theological students, he was able to arrange summer vacation supplies for nearly forty, during three years, a work that resulted in bringing new life to many churches that were nearly extinct, and in giving a permanent ministry to more than twenty.

Considerations of health induced Mr. Fairbanks to accept an appointment as Professor of Natural Philosophy in Dartmouth College, where he was engaged from 1860 to 1869, when, after his mother's death, he removed to St. Johnsbury with his family, joining his father. There he was perfecting various inventions, and also preaching wherever there was no other supply, and doing what he could for the general religious work of the denomination. He was the first President, under its new constitution, of the Convention of Congregational Ministers and Churches of Vt. and more recently and until now President of the Vt. Domestic Missionary Society, to the work of which he devotes a good deal of time. For some years after 1875 the State Convention of the Y. M. C. A. carried on an effective evangelistic work in a large number of towns in Vermont, witnessing most marked religious revivals, with large additions to the churches, and Mr. Fairbanks was prominent in this work, after the first year having charge, and directing it as Secretary. He has for twenty years been a corporate member of the American Board (Foreign Missions), has been a member of four of the National Councils of Congregational Churches, and was a delegate to the International Council in London in 1891, in which year he spent some months with his family in Europe.

He has been since 1870 a Trustee of Dartmouth College, and for many years President of the Trustees of St. Johnsbury Academy, which institutions have claimed much attention and service from him. He was ordained when in the missionary service in 1858, and twenty years later received the honorary degree of Doctor of Philosophy.

Of late years, recognizing the fact that he had not sufficient health to allow continuous labor as a minister, Mr. Fairbanks has devoted himself more to business, developing some of his inventions, for which he has received a score and a half of patents, and has given more and more attention to the business of E. & T. Fairbanks & Co., of which corporation he is Vice-President.

Married I, in Hanover, N. H., in 1862, Annie S., daughter of Rev. Daniel J. Noyes, D. D., Prof. in Dartmouth College, Hanover, N. H., and Jane M. (Aiken) Noyes. She was born in Concord, N. H., June 14, 1845, and died in St. Johnsbury, Sept. 11, 1872.

Married II, Ruthy, daughter of Phineas and Jacintha (Barker) Page, in St. Johnsbury, May 5, 1874. She was born in Newport, Vt., July 14, 1852.

(309), Joseph Paddock VII, Joseph VI, Ebenezer V, Eleasur IV, Eliesur III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in St. Johnsbury, Vt., July 27, 1840.

Entered Dartmouth College in 1858, but left, before finishing the course, to engage in business. He was for several years in the office of E. & T. Fairbanks, and a member of that firm. On its incorporation in 1874, he was appointed Secretary and Treasurer. He held the same position in the St. Johnsbury and Lake Champlain R. R. Co. and offices of trust in other corporations. He was a member of Gov. Pingree's staff, and ably represented his native town in the Legislature of 1884-1886. In 1888 he went to New York as Secretary of "The Fairbanks Company" of that city, where he remained till his death, which occurred suddenly Dec. 15, 1895.

He was a man of force and of strong personality,—sagacious, facile and exact in business; of quiet tastes and generous disposition; one who had the faculty of compelling success.

Married in St. Johnsbury, Apr. 18, 1861, Rebecca, daughter of Luther and Huldah Pike, of Waterford, Vt., where she was born Nov. 8, 1841. He died in Mount Vernon, N. Y., Dec. 15, 1895.

In 1853, he entered the Union Store as clerk, and remained there three years; then went to Boston as clerk in the wholesale house of Farley, Bliss & Co. On July 1, 1861, he commenced business in Warren, associating himself with Mr.

Stoddard under the firm name of Stoddard & Fairbanks, their store being known as the Union Store, on account of the protection afforded members, who by joining the union, were enabled to purchase their goods at a discount. This copartnership continued three years, when Mr. Stoddard retired, and Mr. Newton became a partner with Mr. Fairbanks, the firm name being Fairbanks & Newton. Mr. Newton died in 1881, and since that time Mr. Fairbanks has continued the business alone. He erected the building now occupied by him in 1878. He stands in the foremost ranks of business men in Warren, for his excellent business qualifications, purity of character and sterling integrity.

He is Vice-President of the Palmer National Bank, also trustee of the Warren Savings Bank, and life trustee of the Warren Public Library. He was a member of the Massachusetts Legislature in 1892, and was appointed one of the delegates to attend the Columbian Exposition in Chicago.

636. CRAWFORD FAIRBANKS, Terre Haute, Ind.
(312), Henry VII, Henry VI, Ebenezer V, Eleasur IV, Eliesur III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Terre Haute, Apr. 25, 1843, and resides there. He is a business man of wealth and high standing. As a citizen he sustains the highest character. He carries on the mercantile business in partnership with his brother, Edward Page. He is President of the Standard Wheel Company, the President of the Diamond Paper Company, the President of the Terre Haute Brewing Company, the head of the American Strawboard Works in the management of its mills in Indiana, and is a director or executive officer in a number of other enterprises, where his shrewdness and intelligence are appreciated.

"In his natural make up, the selfish, and the small, are absolutely left out, while all flash and loud extravagance, which constitute the other extreme, are as far removed from his nature and conduct as it is possible to have them."

Starting in life a poor boy, he has successfully carved out his pathway, and, in winning fortune, he has done much by his liberal public spirit to promote the growth and prosperity of his native city. Many of the institutions in which the people take pride, have felt his strong, helping hand, in the hour of greatest need.

He was a soldier in the Civil War, serving with credit to himself the full term of three years.

 (339), David VII, Jonathan VI, Moses V, Jonathan IV, Jonathan III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Antwerp, N. Y., July 3, 1836. He died suddenly, of heart disease, in Petersburg, Aug. 28, 1877.

Left at the age of sixteen, by the death of his father, to care for himself, his early life was a hard struggle for maintenance and an education, working on a farm, going to school as opportunity offered, and teaching school afterward. He took a course of instruction in a commercial school in Rochester, and after graduating was offered $1,000 salary to keep books in a wholesale liquor store; but it was against his principles to engage in that traffic, and he refused the offer, and accepted a smaller salary in another business. For many years after removing to Michigan, where he went for his health, he was employed as an agent for the Wheeler & Wilson Sewing Machine Co., and as a dealer in pianos and organs. While poor health followed him, and prevented his ever becoming a wealthy man, he left a priceless legacy to his family in an honorable and stainless name wherever he was known. During "The Whiskey War" in Adrian, Mich., in 1873 or 1874, he was a noted figure against the whiskey ring, even at the risk of his life. Of more than common intellectual endowments, and of genial and social powers, he was revered by all.

690. PROF. JONATHAN FAIRBANKS, Springfield, Mo.
 (350), Joseph B. Varnum VII, Jonathan VI, Daniel V, Jonathan IV, Jonathan III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Andover, Mass., Jan. 7, 1828; lived in Sudbury, Mass., Wilmington, Del., St. Mary's, and Piqua, O., and, Nov. 10, 1866, removed to Springfield, Mo. He is now the efficient and energetic superintendent of the schools of that city, a position which he has held for twenty-two years.

He is widely known and honored for the great work he has done in building up there the present admirable school system. His labors have resulted in giving to Springfield one of the best equipped organizations for the education of the young, in this or any other state.

He was left fatherless at the age of five years, and went to live with his aunt Zana, wife of James Quinn, a farmer in Sudbury, Mass. He worked on the farm till he was nineteen years of age. The district schools furnished him his primary education, and later he attended the academy in New Ipswich, N. H. When twenty-one years old he began teaching; taught one winter in Ashby, Mass., and four years in Wilmington, Del., going then, in the early fifties, to St. Mary's, O., where he was engaged eight years. From the first he made a success of this calling, and his reputation was established.

His life in St. Mary's was interrupted by one year's teaching in Piqua, O., and, after the completion of his labors in St. Mary's, he was for nearly five years superintendent of the schools in Piqua, resigning to engage in the real estate and lumber business in Springfield, Mo., which he carried on for ten years. During this time he was a member of the City Council, and Mayor one year; also a member of the school board three years, during which time he was President two years. When he went to Springfield, in 1866, there were no public schools in the city, though before the war there were excellent private schools. The public schools were opened in 1867, and Mr. Fairbanks was elected Superintendent in the fall of 1875. The high school was organized in 1870, while he was a member of the school board. On assuming charge of the schools as superintendent, he at once turned his attention to firmly establishing the high school, and improving its curriculum, and for a number of years not only attended to his duties as superintendent, but heard many classes in the high school, really acting as teacher of the senior class. His duties were very arduous, and his time was fully occupied many hours daily.

Socially, Prof. Fairbanks is a member of the Knights of Honor, and Scotch Clan, and politically he is a staunch Republican. He has the esteem and respect of the people of the county; has held the office of county commissioner for eighteen consecutive years; and has recently been elected for two years more. He is a man of great executive ability, broad and liberal views, a logical reasoner, an impressive speaker, and his methods regarding educational work, are unique, orderly, and systematic.

Married, Sept. 3, 1856, in Sudbury, Mass., Angie Bowker, who was born there, June 13, 1832. She was the daughter of Samuel N. and Mary (Earl) Bowker, who were of Scotch-Welsh origin, their ancestors being among the early Puritan settlers. She received the best instruction obtainable in New England schools, attending the New Ipswich academy, as well as a select school in Boston.

695. DAVID FAIRBANKS, of Leon, N. Y.

(353), Artemas VII, Amos VI, Joshua V, Jonathan IV, Jonathan III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Readsborough, Vt., Oct., 1802.

His parents both died in his early childhood, and he was cared for by his grandmother Whiting, and by his uncles, Caleb, Danforth and Daniel Whiting. They were poor, like all others of that time, and he had poor advantages. About 1816 the Whitings left Vermont, and went to Onondaga and Cayuga Counties, N. Y. About 1823 David Fairbanks was taken to Cattaraugus Co., N. Y., by his uncle, Caleb Whiting, a preacher, and he lived a year or two with Capt. John Fairbanks. Few men in that county ever did more hard work than he, especially in clearing land, but his calculations failed. He took jobs, and was generally unfortunate. The mantle of his staunch integrity, however, fell upon his children and grandchildren, and some of them have achieved marked success in the world.

Married, about 1824, Almira Johnson, of Livonia, N. Y., who was born in 1804.

720. HENRY CARLTON FAIRBANK, M. D., Flint, Mich.
 (372), Zenas VII, Jonas VI, Samuel V, Samuel IV, Jonathan III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Rose, N. Y., Dec. 20, 1824. Went with his parents to Michigan, when 12 years of age, and, with his father and younger brother, built a log house in the woods, which was located on a forty acre piece of Government land which was bought for $50, and was their home for many years. He worked at home, attending school in the log school house, near by, during the winter months, studying evenings by the aid of light furnished by burning hickory bark and pine knots. At the age of 20 he taught a district school for $7 per month.

He spent two or three years in teaching, and preparing himself to enter upon the study of medicine. In the autumn of 1845, he entered the office of John C. Gallup, M. D., of Fenton, and in March, 1848, he received his Diploma from the Medical Department of the Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio. He then settled in Grand Blanc, Genesee Co., Mich., where he soon secured a large, practice. After nearly seventeen years of close confinement to professional duties he removed to the City of Flint, Mich., where he has resided and practiced his profession up to the present time. In June, 1864, he responded to a call from the Governor for volunteer surgeons, to assist in caring for the sick and wounded soldiers near Petersburg, Va., without pay, and at a sacrifice of professional business.

A. C. Fairbank M. D.

He is a member of the Flint Academy of Medicine, of the State Medical Society, and of the National Medical Association, and has served as City and County Physician for several terms.

He is a man of strong physical qualities, and of marked intellectual ability. He has rendered valuable aid in tracing the "foot prints in the sands of time" of his ancestors, devoting a good deal of time to the subject, and freely contributing to the expense of investigating one very difficult case.

He married I, Harriet Jane Waterman, of Fenton, Mich., Sept. 21, 1849. She died May 29, 1882.

He married II, Mary A. Rice, of Grand Blanc, Oct. 15, 1883, daughter of the late Judge Rice, of that place, and for many years teacher of History and English Literature in the Michigan State Normal School. She was Chairman of the Woman's Committee at the Columbian Fair, Chicago, for Genesee County, Michigan.

740. DAVID FAIRBANKS, of Payson, Utah.

(384), Joseph VII, Joseph VI, Joseph V, Joseph IV, Jabez III, Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born in Peru, Vt., Mar. 14, 1810; died in Payson, Dec. 14, 1895.

He moved with his parents to Sandy Hill, N. Y., and thence to Bergen County, N. J. He joined the Church of Latter Day Saints, (whose doctrine is commonly called Mormonism) in 1842. In the Summer of 1844, with his family he moved to Nauvoo, Ill., accompanied by his father and mother, also three brothers and a sister, these four latter, also, having embraced Mormonism. Two of the brothers, however, never went to Utah, but on to California, and one to the Mexican War. This journey was made by team.

After Joseph Smith, prophet and president of the Church, was assassinated, in 1844, the Mormons made preparations to journey westward, and in 1840, David and family, his father and mother, with others of their faith, traveled west as far as the Missouri River, and called their first permanent camp, Winter Quarters. The place is located six miles north of Omaha, on the west bank of the River, and it now bears the name of Florence. Crops were raised that year at Winter Quarters, to provide food for their perilous journey to the Rocky Mountains. Their camp was divided into wards, and David Fairbanks was appointed a bishop to preside over one of them. The people were then in the depths of poverty, being driven from their homes by mobs; 500 of their able-bodied men had enlisted in their country's service, and their wives and children were left behind to be cared for by others. David's labor during the winter of 1846-47, was to provide log cabins for soldiers' families, widows and orphans, and to help and succor the sick and destitute. At Winter Quarters, in the month of February, 1847, his father Joseph died.

In the spring of 1847, six hundred families were chosen to follow the pioneers to the Rocky Mountains, and his was one of them. They arrived on the site where Salt Lake City now stands, October 6, 1847; after a march of over 1,000 miles—over long stretches of plain, beset by savages and wild beasts,—over barren wastes,—through mountain defile, and at last a spot was found where to rest their weary feet, not a paradise, however, but one of the most desolate regions in the heart of the "Great American Desert."

David Fairbanks was one of the first Justices of the Peace elected in Utah. He took an active part in many of the stirring events in the early settlement of Utah—was an explorer and pioneer in all that the term implies. He moved South from Salt Lake, and was one of the founders of Salem, and later, one of the early settlers of Payson, at which place he lived for many years. He followed the occupation of farmer, and held a number of offices of trust, both ecclesiastical and municipal.

Born Sept. 7, 1825, in Ashburnham, Mass.

Educated in the common schools, and graduated at Westfield, (Mass.) Normal School. He worked on his Father's farm, and taught school winters until he was 25 years of age. Afterwards he was engaged in mining and trading in California, for two years. Returning in 1852, he settled in Fitchburg, Mass., and engaged in the iron, steel, hardware and coal trade, as an importer, wholesale and retail dealer, and was successful in his undertakings. His accumulated property is mostly invested in real estate, and he carries on a large farm, which is well supplied with all the modern improvements.

He has remembered his native town by various gifts to her institutions. He presented a fine telescope to the Ashburnham Academy, and, when it was burned, with the school building, in 1893, replaced it with another. He has also been a generous contributor to the public Library; and he placed in the Congregational Church a beautiful memorial window, in memory of his father and mother, who had been members of that church during all their mature years.

Married, June 2, 1858, Margaret Emma Ferson. Resides in Fitchburg; is engaged in the Flour and Grain trade; also in farming.

755. JOHN HENRY FAIRBANK, Winchendon, Mass.
(394), Artemas VII, Jonathan VI, Joseph V, Joseph IV, Jabez III, Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born in Harvard, Mass., Jan. 21, 1817.

He was educated in the common schools of his native town. When he was nineteen years old he went to Winchendon and drove an eight horse team between Winchendon and Boston for the late E. Murdock, Jr., until the railroad was built in 1844. For the next twenty-four years (from 1844 to 1868) he was in the livery business in Winchendon in partnership with Henry Whitcomb, under the firm name of Whitcomb & Fairbank. In 1852 he bought the American House, and was its landlord from that time to 1865. The year previous he organized the First National Bank of Winchendon, and was elected its first president, which position he has held continuously ever since.

He has long been prominent in town affairs, holding positions of responsibility, a selectman for twenty-five years, most of the time chairman of the board, an assessor for fifteen years, most of the time also chairman, and cemetery commissioner for thirty-four years in succession, save one year; and as road commissioner, or highway surveyor, he has had partial or full charge of highways in Winchendon for more than thirty years. In politics he is a Republican.

He married, June 4, 1847, Mary E. Lees, of Winchendon, daughter of Joseph and Rebecka (Taylor) Lees. She was born in England, in 1828.

757. ANDREW FAIRBANK, Harvard, Mass.
(394), Artemas VII, Jonathan VI, Joseph V, Joseph IV, Jabez III, Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born in Harvard, Aug. 13, 1823.

He remained with his father on the "Fairbank Farm," which was originally cleared of the forest by his ancestor Jabez, and had for six generations been handed down from father to son. The farm was selected with excellent judgment by the pioneer settler, and has ever since been cultivated with great care and industry by the successive owners. It is one of the largest and most productive farms in the town, especially in fruits, yielding annually, in favorable years, more than two thousand barrels of apples. It is also one of the largest milk farms in this great milk producing town.

Mr. Fairbank, by his skillful management, has become one of the most prominent, as well as one of the wealthiest, farmers in his native town in whose prosperity he feels a deep interest. He has held the office of Town Treasurer, and served on the Board of Selectmen for fifteen years, being chairman during the whole of the War Period, giving his personal attention to the filling of every quota when the number of volunteers was insufficient.

He married I, in Boxborough, Mass., Dec. 12, 1850, Anne Augusta Houghton, daughter of Obed and Nancy (Butterick) Houghton, who was born in Boxborough, Mass., Oct. 24, 1830; and died Jan. 31, 1890.

789. NATHANIEL KELLOGG FAIRBANK, Chicago, Ill.
 (423), Stephen Taylor VII, Manasseh VI, Josiah V, Jonas IV, Jabez III, Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born in Sodus, Wayne Co., N. Y., Oct. 20, 1829.

He received a common school education, applying himself also to study at home. At the age of fifteen he was apprenticed to a brick-layer. The year following he went to Rochester, in his native state, where he completed his apprenticeship. His extraordinary ability and energy at this early period was well illustrated in the fact that from the position of bricklayer's apprentice he stepped immediately into the position of book-keeper in a flouring mill, where he was admitted to a partnership inside of a year. In 1855, he went to Chicago, entered into a grain commission business with David Dows & Co., of New York, as their Western representative. His connection with this firm extended over a period of ten years, when he finally became financially interested in a lard and oil refining enterprise, furnishing the capital for the erection of the refinery, and becoming a member of the newly organized firm of Smedley, Peck & Co., subsequently N. K. Fairbank & Co.

The force of character and ability that Mr. Fairbank has displayed in his business life, which have brought him wealth and commercial standing, have also been potent factors in advancing the prosperity of Chicago. His career as a public spirited citizen, is well known throughout the West, and is marked by a breadth of spirit, and an absence of selfishness, not always characteristic of owners of private fortunes.

The enterprises for building up Chicago and for beautifying the city, and for adding to the comfort, pleasure and happiness of its citizens are so numerous and diversified it is possible to mention only a few of them in this brief sketch. Conspicuous among them is Central Music Hall building, at the corner of Randolph and State streets.

But his good hearted efforts have not been limited to providing for the pleasures of the upper classes of society. The poor and the neglected have had abundant reason to appreciate his large benevolence and his practical sympathy. The Newsboys' Home of Chicago, an institution of great value to the community and a charity which many a homeless boy prizes, was some years ago heavily mortgaged, but he engaged in the work of raising the money to release the Home from its burden of indebtedness, and it goes without saying that he succeeded, and this useful institution is therefore today free from incumbrance.

The St. Luke's Hospital was another institution which enlisted his most earnest and active philanthropy. When the effort was made to replace the old, inconvenient, and insufficient building with a commodious structure, he came forward and gave twenty-five thousand dollars, and thus inspired a liberality among his immediate associates that soon secured the needed sum to complete the work. He took an active part in soliciting subscriptions for this object, raised the money to build the new hospital, and from that time to the present has been a strong friend, liberal patron, and faithful officer of the institution.

The Chicago Club, Professor Swing's Church, the Illinois Fish Commission, the Theodore Thomas Concerts, and the Festival Association are a few among the many public institutions and enterprises that owe a large share of their success, if not in some cases their existence, to his public spirit and broad-minded citizenship.

He married, Apr. 23, 1866, Helen Livingston Graham, daughter of John Andrew and Helen Smith (Beeckman) Graham, of New York

City. She was born Apr. 13, 1840, and died July 15, 1895. On her father's side, she was descended from Andrew Graham, of Woodberry, Conn., born 1728; died 1785, — on her mother's side, from Robert Livingston, born 1654; came to America 1675; died 1728.

790. REV. STEPHEN TAYLOR FAIRBANK, Weston O., and Saline, Mich.

(424), Josiah VII, Manasseh VI, Josiah V, Jonas IV, Jabez III, Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born in Tyringham, Mass., Aug. 20, 1817. Removed with his parents to Coventry, Ohio, in 1826. His father died before he was eleven years old, and about a year afterward he had the misfortune to lose the use of his lower limbs, so that since that time he has been unable to walk a step. But he says of himself that if he had "no more get and push than some men have who are blessed with full physical powers it would have been an act of mercy for some one to have shot him long ago."

He says, "I was born poor, but have held my own pretty well. I have, however, a nice little place of 28 acres with good buildings on it, but it is not home since my wife died, and I am living with my children."

After the death of his father, his mother being quite an expert in weaving, supported herself and her four children in part by that occupation. He used to do her spooling and quilling and assisted her in knitting and sewing. Before he was twenty he learned the tailoring business and became very skillful in that line.

In 1836 he made a public profession of religion, and united with the Disciples of Christian Church. On account of the scarcity of preachers he was pushed forward and soon entered the public Ministry of the Gospel, and has gained considerable reputation as a preacher, and is now, even in his advanced age, called upon to speak almost every Sunday.

He married Catherine Bowman, Sept. 21, 1844, in Medina, O. She was born Oct. 12, 1824, in Brookfield, O., and died July 21, 1893. She was a daughter of Christopher and Sovina (Shafer) Bowman.

792. REV. SAMUEL BACON FAIRBANK, D. D., of Ahmed-nagar, India.

(425), John Barnard VII, Ephraim VI, Josiah V, Jonas IV, Jabez III, Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born in Stamford, Conn., Dec. 14, 1822. B. A., M. A., and D. D. from Illinois College, Jacksonville, Ill.; graduate of Andover Theological Seminary. Missionary in India since 1846; permanent address, Ahmednagar, Bombay Presidency, India.

He went to the American Marathi Mission in Bombay in the fall of 1846. His work has been at Ahmednagar, Bombay, Wadale, and since 1889 most of the time at Kodaikanal, in South India. During all these years he has been only three times on furloughs to the United States, and he hopes to end his days in India. During his first years there he did much literary work in connection with the management of the Mission Press in Bombay. He has established mission stations in various country districts at a distance from the large cities, preaching and superintending Sunday-schools, where now have developed churches and large Christian communities. Dr. Fairbank has gained much influence and helped the people in the country districts in which he has lived by his study of agriculture and introduction of implements and methods adapted to make their labor more efficient and productive. He has given the people an object-lesson in his experimental farm, which bore larger crops than those of his neighbors. This he did not only to help the people financially, but to promote self-support in the village churches by producing a thrifty farming community. Dr. Fairbank also has done much for music in India. He translated, composed, taught, and encouraged it. He also has had a strong liking for natural science, and studied and wrote much along that line. His studies have helped him to retain a freshness and alertness of mind which makes him even at the age of seventy-four a very acceptable preacher, both in English and Marathi. In the community where he has lived he is looked up to with reverence and affection by all classes. We have condensed the above from a letter to a Bombay paper signed "R. A. H.," which we presume to be the Rev. Robert A. Hume. He says: "The secret of Dr. Fairbank's usefulness lies, of course, in his character, of which the first trait is transparent truthfulness, and the second is sympathy. These traits have been connected with versatile gifts. His truthfulness makes men trust and honor him. His sympathy has led him to appreciate all good traits in the Indian character, and to like the Indian people more and more." Dr. Fairbank is father of a family of missionaries; his two sons are working in India; his eldest daughter, Mrs. T. S. Smith, is in Ceylon; his third daughter, Mrs. R. A. Hume, is at Ahmednagar; and other daughters are pursuing their education in America, hoping to return to India as missionaries.

793. DEA. JAMES CHANDLER FAIRBANK, of Jacksonville, Ill.

(425), John Barnard VII, Ephraim VI, Josiah V, Jonas IV, Jabez III, Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born in Oakham, Jan. 13, 1825; removed with his parents in 1837 to Illinois. Lived in Diamond Grove and Joy Prairie, and then removed to Jacksonville, where he died, Feb. 7, 1893.

He entered Illinois College when quite young and was a promising student; completed his junior year, when the call of duty led him to leave college and go home to take up life's burdens.

Was for many years in partnership with his brother, Daniel W. of Jacksonville, as merchant and trader. They did quite a large business in the village of Concord; they purchased many thousand hogs for the packing house in Beardstown and elsewhere, and did considerable packing on their own account, and they were agents for McCormick reapers and mowers. In the later years of his life he lived in retirement in his beautiful home one mile south of Concord.

"He was a man very generally confided in by the people of his neighborhood, and he was always faithful to the confidence reposed in him. He was god father and administrator for the whole vicinity, and hundreds of thousands of dollars passed through his hands as such, and the estates of which he was administrator were always successfully managed and no taint of the slightest unfairness ever clung to him."

For some years previous to his death he was a director of the First National Bank and had considerable voice in the management of its affairs.

"He was a man of fine abilities and acquired quite a fortune during his active years in life, yet he was never too much occupied with his affairs to do good, but was always ready to bestow a favor and give of his means whenever proper objects presented themselves. His whole life was peculiarly unselfish." "In business circles, in the neighborhood and in the church, wherever he went, he was useful and beloved."

He married I, Oct. 4, 1847, in Jacksonville, Hannah B. Carter, daughter of Ebenezer Carter. She died Mar. 28, 1863.

He married II, Mary Lucy, daughter of Samuel and Mary (Safford) Daniels, Jan. 1, 1865.

CHILDREN, first marriage:

1. SAMUEL ALLEN (1,093), born June 13, 1850.

794. DEA. DANIEL WILDER FAIRBANK, of Jacksonville, Ill.
 (425), John Barnard VII, Ephraim VI, Josiah V, Jonas IV, Jabez III, Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born in Oakham, Jan. 13, 1825; removed in 1837, with his parents to Illinois; died Feb. 19, 1893. Brother of James C. These two brothers were almost inseparable; they lived in the same places, worked together, were associated for some years as partners in business, and died the same month.

He studied for some time at Illinois College with the intention of entering the ministry, but poor health compelled him to give up the idea. He followed teaching for some years and then carried on a store in Concord with his brother. About 23 years ago their partnership was dissolved and he removed to Jacksonville, and embarked in business as a dealer in agricultural implements, which he relinquished but a short time before his death. He was a deacon in the Joy Prairie Congregational church, and after his removal to Jacksonville he held the same office in the Congregational Church there, and was Superintendent of the Sunday School. For many years he was a trustee of Illinois College, and was one of the staunchest and strongest supporters of the Institution. He was a member of the City Council of Jacksonville; chairman of the committee which had charge of the construction of the city water works.

"The very name (says a correspondent) of D. W. Fairbank carried with it the confidence and esteem of his fellow men." On his death appropriate and highly commendatory resolutions were adopted by the Trustees and Faculty of Illinois College.

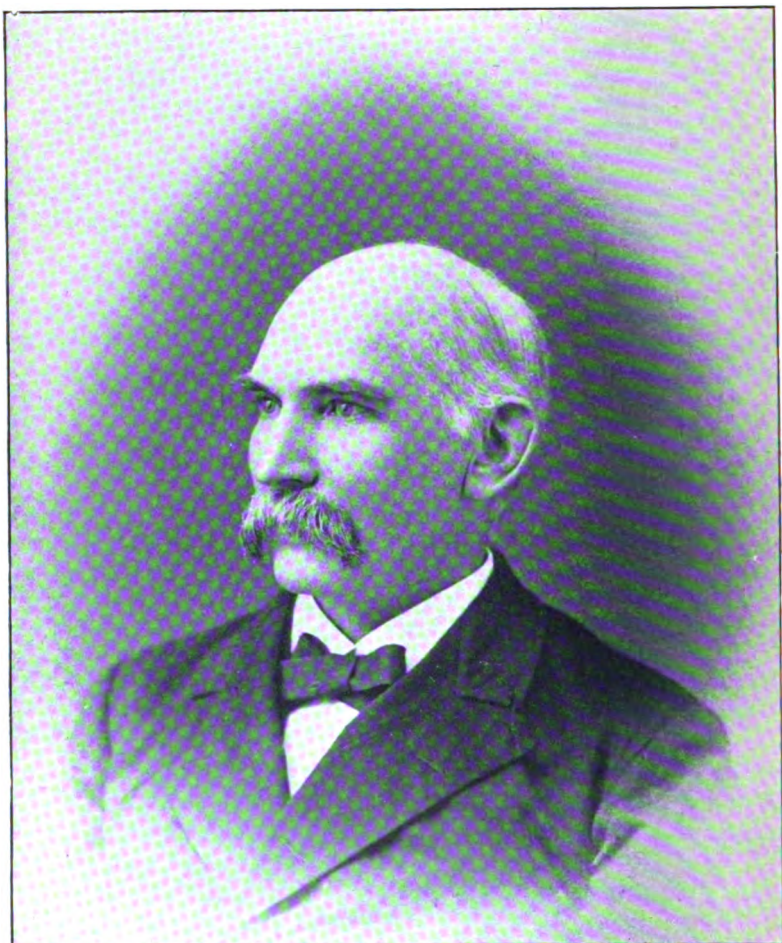

He married, Aug. 21, 1850, Sarah Epler, daughter of John Epler, and sister of Judge Cyrus Epler.

812. HON. JOHN HENRY FAIRBANK, Petrolia, Ont., Canada.
(433), Asa VII, John VI, John V, Thomas IV, Jabez III, Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born in Champlain, N. Y., July 21, 1831. Resides in Petrolia, and is a banker, merchant, oil producer and refiner, and a farmer. He has been a member of the Canadian Parliament.

The following sketch of his career was written by himself in an off-hand letter, perhaps without a thought that it would be published.

The liberty is taken to print it verbatim, on account of its vivacity and vigor, and because it affords a pleasing contrast with more solemn biographies and obituaries.

"I was good enough to be born very early on the morning of July 21, 1831, near Rouse's Point, N. Y. I received some education at the Champlain Academy N. Y., and more, hoeing corn and driving oxen. I seemed adapted to oxen. My boyhood pride was in a yoke of white steers which I had trained from the time when, as weaned calves, they snorted milk up my shirt sleeves, until they could make the fastest time on the steer record.

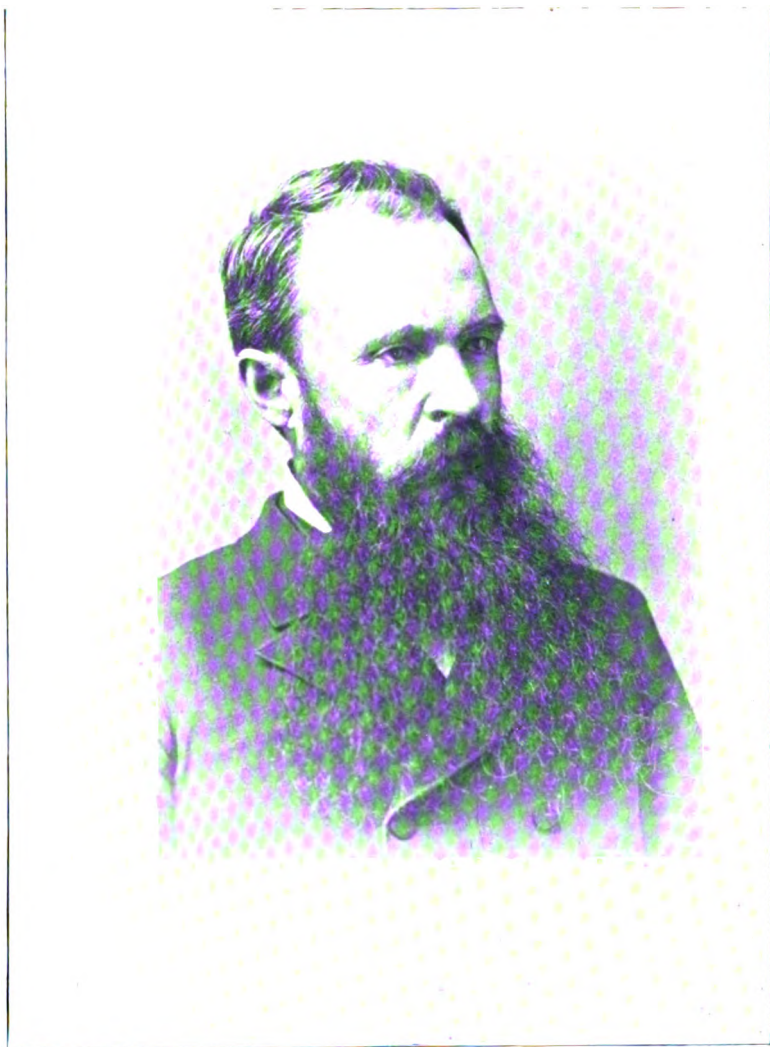

"At school I got on fairly well with geometry and chemistry, but I had no use for grammar or it for me; I considered "I loved, he loved, she loved, they loved" a waste of time, told that way.

"I lost my beloved father at eleven, and my most excellent mother usually did as I wished her to. There are few mistakes open to boys or men that I have failed to discover. If I had any brother or sister I think we would have found them all. At the age of twenty-one I came to Canada and followed surveying. I admired Niagara Falls, also one of its daughters, which annexed me to Canada. In 1861 I came into the Canadian oil fields and remained in them as a producer and refiner of Petroleum. I have given much "light to the world," and lubricated many journals of manufactures and commerce. I also became engaged in banking, merchandise, and farming. I always liked farming, provided I could make enough some other way to make farming a success. My taste was always military, but I never commanded anything larger than a brigade of three companies of firemen. I spent four winters in Canadian Parliament, and consequently know when a constituency is hard pressed, and how little material a legislator can be made out of. At the end of this time, my constituents seemed to need me at home, as they did not send me again, though I was willing to go."

He married, Sept. 1, 1855, Edna Cryslar, daughter of Hermanus and Edna (Cook) Cryslar, of Niagara Falls, Ont., who was born May 11, 1829. She died in Pasadena, Cal., Mar. 7, 1896.

816. ALBERT FAIRBANKS, White Earth, Minn.
(434), John H. VII, John VI, John V, Thomas IV, Jabez III, Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born Sept. 23, 1840, in Red Lake, Minn.; removed to White Earth in 1874. He enlisted in the 9th Minn. Infantry, at the age of 22, as corporal, serving through the entire war, and was promoted to the rank of Sergeant. His brother William and two nephews were also in the same company, all of them served with distinction and credit to their State.

The following extracts from Minnesota's History of the Civil and Indian wars attest the valuable service rendered by their company. On one retreat particularly, being pursued by a rebel force of cavalry, "the history" records as follows :

"Col. Wilkin sending out Company G, as rear guard and flankers. They performed this duty admirably during the afternoon, and by their cunning and proficiency with their guns kept the enemy at a safe distance ; towards night they had a sharp skirmish with a squad of rebels, near a house on a hillside. The Indians and half breeds, crept up and opened fire, yelling and sending forth war-hoops, as if upon their native heath, much to the astonishment of the Confederates."

A general mention of the company appears in Minnesota's History as follows :

"Company G was recruited at St. Cloud (Minn.) from Aug. 16 to Aug. 22, 1862. A considerable number of the men were Chippewa Indians and half-breeds. On or about Sept. 3, 1862, the company proceeded to Fort Abercrombie (Dacota), then besieged by Sioux Indians. The day succeeding their arrival, they attacked the Sioux, and drove them away from the position they had occupied for weeks, the Sioux Indians retreating towards Big Stone Lake. The Indians of this company did valuable service as vedettes scouting over the country, traveling at night, and lying concealed and on watch during the day time. While in the South, Company G gained a high reputation as skirmishers and flankers, in which service they were never equalled."

The principal battles the company was engaged in, are Guntown, or Brices Cross Roads, where it lost fourteen men and one officer; battle of Nashville in 1864, the company there capturing seventy confederates and four officers, a rebel flag, and arms; the siege and capture of Spanish Fort, in Mobile Bay, Ala., 1865, and Battle of Tupelo in Mississippi in 1864. No mention is made of minor engagements in which this company was engaged.

The "efficiency" of the company was in a great measure due to the vigilance and loyalty of the above members of the Fairbanks family.

819. ALEXANDER WARREN FAIRBANK, M. D., Chazy,
New York.

(435), Warren Calvin VII, John VI, John V, Thomas IV, Jabez III, Jonas II,
Jonathan I.

Born in Rouse's Point, N. Y., Dec. 19, 1852. At an early age, he decided to devote himself to the medical profession, and after obtaining a common school education, he attended the Academy in Champlain, and afterwards Franklin Academy in Malone. He then taught school for a time, and thus earned money that materially assisted him in pursuing his medical studies.

He began the study of medicine in the office of Drs. G. G. and L. C. Dodge, of Rouse's Point, and in the spring of 1871, attended medical lectures in the Albany Medical College. The sickness and death of his father in the fall of 1872, prevented his attendance at college that year, and during the winter his time was taken up teaching, reading, rolling bandages, and dressing minor wounds, in the office of his Preceptor. He returned to college in 1873 and 1874; was graduated in the latter year, Dec. 22, three days after he was twenty-two years old. His "shingle" went to the breeze, May 5, 1875, in Chazy, ten miles from his birthplace, where he has remained since, enjoying a good degree of success. He is a member of the county Medical organization; also of the Northern New York Medical Society. He is a Republican; was a delegate to the convention which nominated Gov. Morton; is a Knight Templar, and Loan Commissioner of Clinton County.

823. WILSON HENRY FAIRBANK, Warren, Mass.
 (439), Asahel VII, Asahel VI, Jonathan V, Thomas IV, Jabez III, Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born in Warren, Apr. 3, 1836, and has always lived there.

The history of his life is given in J. D. Reed's book of the "Telegraph Men of America," from which the following abstracts are taken :

"When seventeen years old he left school to assist his father in the lumber business. In 1856 he took his first telegraph contract to furnish poles for the American Telegraph Company, delivering to the company over nine thousand poles in forty-five days, five days ahead of his contract time, and from that time made telegraph line-building his business and ambition. His next telegraph work was for the Independent Telegraph Co., furnishing poles, by contract, then joined the United States Telegraph Co. as Supt. of Construction. In 1864, with A. J. Baldwin as partner, he took the contracts to build "Insulated Lines Telegraph" from New York to Washington, and throughout the West. After building a first-class line to Washington, the Western contract was annulled, when with others, Baldwin & Fairbank organized the Monongahela Valley Telegraph Co., in March 1865, and built the line from Brownsville, Pa., to Pittsburg, Pa.; on reaching Pittsburg, in 1866, they organized the Pacific and Atlantic Telegraph Co. W. H. Fairbank & Co. took the contract to build all the lines of this company, to establish all offices and furnish the same, thus delivering a complete working plant to the stockholders. They built two lines to the East over the Alleghany Mountains, one on the National road to Baltimore and Washington, the other over the Pennsylvania Railroad to Philadelphia. They also extended the lines South and West to Cincinnati and Chicago.

Mr. Fairbank again entered the telegraph field in 1876, when Messrs. Jay Gould, Gen. Eckert, D. H. Bates and others commenced the extension of the lines of the Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Co. He was employed to locate the lines and buy the poles from Louisville, Ky., to New Orleans. This line, of 963 miles, was completed in 93 days, the fastest construction work which had ever been done. In 1877 the Continental Telegraph Co. was organized. E. Middleton & Co. took the contract to build the lines from New York to Philadelphia, Fairbank having full charge of all construction and disbursements. This was one of the best constructed lines in the country up to that time. When the American Union Telegraph Company was organized, he was one of the first in the field, and at one time was running successfully twenty-one different gangs of men, and built thousands of miles of first-class lines. He also built sixty miles of what is known as Gen. Eckert's line, Jersey City to Philadelphia, considered the best ninety miles of telegraph line in the world. When the work was completed, he received a valuable souvenir as an acknowledgment of his services. On the consolidation of the Companies, in 1881, he became Supt. of Construction for the Mutual Union Telegraph Co., and after building some two thousand miles he was appointed Gen. Supt. of Repairs and Construction.

In July 1882, he resigned his position to take charge of the Postal Telegraph lines, and built for that company a very superior structure, from New York to Chicago and St. Louis, from Buffalo to Pittsburg, through the Oil Regions, and from New York to Washington. After completing the Postal Telegraph Company's lines, Mr. Fairbank was appointed by the United Telegraph lines Gen. Supt. of Construction and Repairs. He went South in August 1884, for the Baltimore & Ohio Telegraph Co. While there, he built a line from Cairo, Ill., to Galveston, Texas, and from Houston to New Orleans, La., some 1,100 miles, completing the work in about five months. In June 1885, he was engaged by the American Telegraph and Telephone Company, as Gen. Supt. of Construction, to build the long distance telephone lines, using 45 to 90 foot poles, and twenty to one hundred copper wires. He remained with the Long Distance Telephone Company over six years with full and entire charge of all construction of this section of the great plant of the American Bell Telephone Company, which is the best constructed Telephone line in the world. Ill health compelled him to leave the Construction business, and he retired to his old home in Warren, Mass.

"With a curious, quiet native force, power, order, ability to handle masses of men, he has made his work known in almost every State. He had the tact and intelligence, by which rights of way were secured, by which formidable obstructions were overcome, the sturdy, dogged, sleepless fight that finally wins, which enabled him to take a contract for a thousand miles of line of a dozen wires, and hand it over, a clean, unincumbered plant into the company's hands. The accuracy of his accounts were never questioned. In Nov. 1895, he was elected as republican representative to the Legislature, from the Fifth Worcester District. He was re-elected in Nov. 1896; and served on important committees.

He is a member of the Town Board of Selectmen, a Mason, Odd Fellow and Granger. He is President and life trustee of the Warren Public Library which stands on the site presented by him to the association — and takes an active interest in anything pertaining to the good of his native town, or state.

He married, Sept. 27, 1865, Mary Elizabeth, daughter of Simon H. and Mary (Eaton) Sibley, of Warren, who was born Jan. 16, 1846. They have no children.

824. ANDREW CORNELIUS FAIRBANKS, of Brookline, Vt.

(441), Silas VII, Elisha VI, Silas V, Thomas IV, Jabez III, Jonas II, Jonathan I.

 Jonathan I.

Born in Ashland, Mass., Nov. 17, 1848 ; moved, with his parents to Saugus, in 1850, was fitted for college when fourteen years of age, and would have entered Williams, had not the breaking out of the Civil War completely altered his plans. During the absence of his father, who enlisted in 1862, he had charge of the Eastern R. R. station at Saugus Centre.

He entered a Cornhill bookstore, in Boston, in May 1865, and remained there until May 1869, when he removed to Chicago, Ill., and became western agent for an eastern publishing house. In 1882 he was elected from the First Senatorial district, at the head of the ticket, as a Representative to the "General Assembly of Illinois," in which he served for two years, occupying places on important committees. In 1884-5 he was one of the Commissioners for the state to the "Cotton Centennial," in New Orleans, his special work being in the educational department. In 1890 he moved to Seattle, and for three years was superintendent of the "Puget Sound Chautauqua Assembly." He is a lecturer, and has had marked success with his historical illustrated lectures. During the summer and fall of 1896, and through the winter and spring of 1897, he assisted the author of this genealogy, between his lecture engagements, in the collating and editing of part of the Mss. for this book.

863. HON. CHARLES WARREN FAIRBANKS, Indianapolis, Ind.

(474), Loriston Monroe VII, Luther VI, Luther V, Joshua IV, Jabez III, Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born near Unionville Centre, Union Co., Ohio, May 11, 1852, and lived on the paternal farm until he entered the Ohio Wesleyan University in 1867, from which institution he was graduated in 1872. During his senior year he was editor of the college paper. After leaving the University he was agent of the Associated Press in Pittsburgh and Cleveland, and during this time, he continued his legal studies, and was admitted to the bar of Ohio by the Supreme Court of that State, in Columbus.

In June 1874, he removed to Indianapolis, Ind., where he has since resided in the active practice of his profession. He has taken always a very active interest in the public welfare of Indianapolis and has ever preserved great regard for the success of his Alma Mater, in which he is heartily encouraged and aided by his wife, who shares the same feeling. Since 1884, he has been a trustee of the Ohio Wesleyan University, and some years since, built largely at his own expense, a gymnasium for the university. Politically he is a Republican, and has taken an active and influential part in the councils and campaigns of his party. In June 1892, he was elected chairman of the Republican State Convention held in Fort Wayne (Indiana), shortly after the nomination of General Harrison for President, in Minneapolis. He discussed the Republican platform made in Minneapolis, in a clear and comprehensive address, in which "protection, reciprocity, honest money and an honest ballot" were declared to be the essence of Republican faith; he denounced in eloquent language the gerrymander of the State of Indiana, and declared "there could be no rest for Republicans, until the thousands of electors thus disfranchised, were re-invested with the rights of citizenship." The effect of this speech upon those who heard it was electrical, and brought him into still greater prominence as the leader of Indiana Republicans. In 1893 the Republican members of the Indiana Legislature held a caucus, and though in a hopeless minority, owing to the gerrymander of the state, their action could only be a form, they nominated Mr. Fairbanks for the office of U. S. Senator by acclamation. The Indianapolis Journal said, "Mr. Fairbanks has served his party well and faithfully. In the sense that the nomination tendered him last night is a tacit recognition of his leadership, it is an honor well bestowed and richly merited." The tone of all the speakers, who presented his name to the Indiana legislature as the Republican nominee, shows plainly the hold he has gained upon the confidence and esteem of his party.

In 1896 Mr. Fairbanks was sent as delegate-at-large to the National Republican Convention at St. Louis, and was elected Temporary Chairman of the Convention. The speech he delivered on this occasion attracted great attention, and was received with cordial approbation, as announcing the sentiments, and declaring the principles of the party. In January 1897, he was elected to the U. S. Senate from Indiana, for the full term of six years, and on the 4th of March, took his seat in that body.

He married, in Oct. 1874, Cornelia, daughter of the late Judge Philander B. and Dorothy (Witter) Cole, of Marysville, Union Co., Ohio. She was graduated the same year as her husband, from the Ohio Wesleyan University.

CHILDREN:

1. Adelaide, born July 30, 1875.
2. Warren Charles, born Apr. 25, 1878.

 Jonathan I.

Born near Unionville Centre, Union County, O., Jan. 18, 1855.
 He is a banker in Mansfield, Ill.

He left his birthplace in Unionville, Ohio, in 1873, and emigrated to Crawfordsville, Indiana, to embark in the railway business. He entered the employment as a station clerk of the Indianapolis, Bloomington & Western Railway, now the Peoria & Eastern Division of the Big Four system. Here he learned telegraphy, and in 1874 was placed in charge of the station in Beason, Logan Co., Ill., where he served four months as station agent and operator. Then he was given charge of the station in Welden, Ill., and after six months' service was promoted to the office in Mansfield, Ill., and was given the joint agency of the I. B. & W., and the Chicago & Paducah, now the Wabash R. R. After two years' service in Mansfield he was transferred to the office in Farmers City, Ill., and was made the joint agent for the I. B. & W., and the Illinois Central R. R., which position he held five years; then resigned and went into the grain business with his brother, William De F., in Mansfield, Ill. In 1891 he and his brother William De F. organized the Farmers and Merchants' State Bank of Mansfield, Ill., of which he was made cashier, which position he has held ever since.

Married Alpha, daughter of Henry C. and Jennett (Seal) Kroell, Sept. 14, 1885.

Jonathan I.

Born in Jamestown, Mar. 13, 1856; died there Feb. 19, 1888.
Rev. A. C. Ellis, who conducted the funeral services, pronounced a high eulogium upon his life and character.

He said, among other things, "that he was as near a perfect business man as he had ever seen; that his life gave promise of a splendid career; that as a citizen he fulfilled every obligation; that he had a pleasant home which he loved; and was devoted to his church, of which he was one of the most valued members."

At the time of his death he had been in business in Toronto, Canada, but retained his residence in Jamestown. He was Pres. of the Conger Coal Co., of Toronto, Miners and Shippers of Wilkes-Barre, Scranton and Lackawanna An-

(543), Franklin T. VIII, Columbus VII, Nathaniel VI, Joseph V, Joseph IV, Joseph III, John II, Jonathan I.

Born in Farmington, Me., Feb. 25, 1843.

When Fort Sumter was fired upon in 1861, he was in Chicago, and immediately responded to his country's call for men, by enlisting for three years, in Co. E., 13th Reg. Ill. Vols. This regiment saw some hard service beyond the Mississippi and fought its first battle at Chickasaw Bayou, under Gen. Sherman. During the siege of Nashville young Fairbanks learned some intelligence from Rebel soldiers which he considered of great value to the Union General in determining future action, and resolved at all hazards to transmit it. Stealthily crossing the Cumberland River, on a plank at night, he made his way to Nashville, saw Gen. Thomas, and was successful in accomplishing his mission. The following endorsement appears on his discharge: "The said Charles F. Fairbanks was with his command, and bore an active part during the actions of Chickasaw Bayou . . . siege of Vicksburg . . . Lookout Mountain, Missionary Ridge . . . has marched thirty-five hundred miles, and faithfully performed the duties of a soldier."

He married, Feb. 24, 1870, Mary Priscilla, daughter of John H. and Mary E. (Chesson) Mead, of Savannah, Ga.

Born in Leon, N. Y., Nov. 22, 1831. He went to California during the gold excitement in 1854, spending four years in Indian Valley, Plumas Co., in mining and agriculture ; returning to the east in 1858, he was married in 1859, and the following year he removed to Fredonia, N. Y., where he engaged in farming and the nursery business until 1869, being the first to introduce grapes into western New York, when he removed with his family to Kansas. He was there business manager for the Genesee colony, and helped organize the town of Blue Rapids, Marshall Co., Kansas. He was connected in various official capacities with the town, until he went back to Fredonia in 1871. During the next ten years he was engaged in farming, and in laying out the summer resort on lake Erie, known as Van Buren Point. In 1884, he removed to California and settled in San Diego, in the southern part of the state. The following year he returned east, and spent a year in Ann Arbor, Michigan. Returning to California, several years were spent on Point Loma, near San Diego. His present residence is Berkeley, California.

He married, in 1859, Harriet N. Wellman, of Conewango, N. Y.

CHILDREN :

1. HAROLD WELLMAN (1,154), born Aug. 29, 1860.
2. Daniel Ulrich, born in Fredonia, N. Y., Jan. 1, 1862. 3. John Theodore, born in Fredonia, N. Y., May 23, 1872. Went with his parents to California in the summer of 1884, traveling with them through the state for nearly two years; returned east in the summer of 1886. Died at his birthplace, July 16, 1886.

1019. DANFORTH FAIRBANKS, of Blue Rapids, Kan.
 (635), David VIII, Artemas VII, Amos VI, Joshua V, Jonathan IV, Jonathan III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Leon, N. Y., Apr. 3, 1839.

He led the life of a farmer till he enlisted in the army, in August, 1862, Co. A. 154th N. Y. Infantry. This regiment was attached to the Army of the Potomac, and with it took part in the battles of Chancellorsville and Gettysburg. At the latter place he was taken prisoner, July 1, 1863, with almost all of his regiment. He was first taken to Richmond, and spent eight months on Belle Isle. From there he was taken to Andersonville where he was held till the close of the war, except a short time when the prisoners were kept in Savannah and other places to prevent their re-capture by Sherman's army on its march to the sea. The hardships endured in the "Rebel Hells" completely broke down his constitution, and when on Apr. 28, 1865, the prisoners were turned loose in a swamp twenty miles from Jacksonville, Fla., he was in a truly bad plight. They reached the Union lines in Jacksonville, after a painful march through swamps and forests, and were taken on transports to Annapolis, Md. Thence he was sent to New York City, and from there to Elmira, where he received his discharge, June 20, 1865.

Although broken in health, he was determined to win for himself a home, and with characteristic pluck and ambition, he started out bravely in the battle of life, taking unto himself a wife, and again becoming a farmer. Removed with his family to Blue Rapids, Mar. 13, 1872, and resumed farming. He soon, however, became convinced that Andersonville and Belle Isle had spoiled him for a farmer, and securing a good home, he spent the remainder of his days as easily as possible. He died Mar. 17, 1895.

He married Elizabeth Myers, of Conewango, N. Y., Dec. 17, 1865.

He was born in Leon, N. Y., May 25, 1845.

He is the author of a successful book of travels entitled, "A Visit to Europe and the Holy Land." It has reached its third edition, and has received much praise, not alone from authors and editors in the United States, but also from the press of Great Britain — especially that of London and Dublin.

When eight years of age his parents removed to Wisconsin and in the autumn of 1860 he entered the senior preparatory class of Lawrence University in Appleton, where he remained four years. He stood at the head of his class when he left, although he was its youngest member. After entering the Roman Catholic Church he studied in St. Louis University, and St. Francis Theological Seminary, where he was graduated. His ordination as priest took place Jan. 29, 1868. For the past thirteen years he has been pastor of St. Patrick's Church in the city of Milwaukee, and has just finished "one of the most beautiful — both from an architectural and artistic point of view — gothic churches in the West." The cost was about $60,000.

(720), Henry Carlton VIII, Zenas VII, Jonas VI, Samuel V, Samuel IV, Jonathan III, George II, Jonathan I.

Born in Grand Blanc, Mich., Apr. 16, 1852.

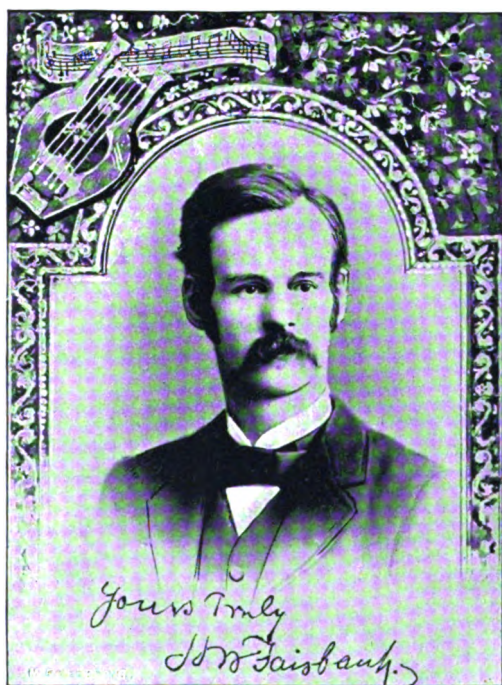

At the age of six years he evinced a taste for music which was cultivated as circumstances favored, and at the age of eight years he played an organ for the Sunday school, and soon for the church he attended, taking lessons from his mother and other teachers. He went to Flint, Mich., when he was twelve years of age, and from that time till he was seventeen years old he was employed by several of the city churches as organist, playing meanwhile in a city band.

At the age of seventeen he entered the Michigan University, and while there played for the chapel services, and for the Episcopal Church.

In 1873, at the age of twenty-one years, he was graduated from that University, and the following year took the degree of A. M.

Subsequently he received instruction from Mason & Thayer in Boston, Mass., and was then engaged as teacher of music in the Flint City public schools. He was there employed till ill health compelled him to resign. Regaining his health sufficiently to warrant it he engaged himself to the music house of Kimball & Co., of Chicago, as their traveling agent. Restored to health in part he was again employed as teacher of music in the city schools of Flint, and while there he was appointed by Governor Begole, of Michigan, to the position of Deputy Commissioner of Immigration and removed to Detroit. After two years' service as Deputy Commissioner and Commissioner, he took charge of the business of the "Lime Island Manufacturing Company," as Secretary, and resided on that island in St. Mary's River. After a residence there of several years he returned to Chicago, where he has been employed by Root & Sons, and by the Bradbury Music House, writing and publishing, in the meantime, church and public school music, and playing a pipe organ for some church. Other interests have at times engaged his attention, but he has made music his principal business most of his life. He has been teaching in the Chicago High School for three years.

He married Hattie Van Riper, Nov. 6, 1874. No children.

 Jonas II, Jonathan I.

Born in Harvard, Jan. 5, 1852, and resides there on the old homestead, which has been for generations occupied by his ancestors.

He is a man of good mental ability, and one of the most prominent citizens of the town. In early life he had a desire for an education, which was not encouraged by his father who, having been successful as a farmer, wished his son to follow in his footsteps. After graduating from the common schools he attended the Winchendon and Lancaster Academies, one term each. He taught school three terms, and then entered the Mass. Institute of Technology, where he remained two years, intending to become a civil engineer. But his father urged him to remain at home and join him in the management of the farm. This he consented to do, and has prospered. The large and commodious mansion is jointly occupied by his own and his father's family.

Both he and his estimable wife are very much respected in social circles, while in civil affairs his character and qualifications have made him a leader. He has been elected as Selectman for three years, Assessor seven years; member of the School Committee fourteen years; trustee of the Public Library eleven years; trustee of the Warner Free Lecture Fund of ten thousand dollars; and Trustee of the Bromfield Academy for ten years; chairman of the Building Committee of the Public Library. He has peculiar gifts as a presiding officer, and has served for many years as Moderator of Town and other public meetings, and is a worthy representative of a line of families always prominent in Harvard.

(1018), Daniel IX, David VIII, Artemas VII, Amos VI, Joshua V, Jonathan IV, Jonathan III, George II, Jonathan I.

He was born in Conewango, Cattaraugus County, N. Y., Aug. 29, 1860. His parents removed to Fredonia, Chautauqua County, New York, when he was one year old. There they resided until he was nineteen, except for two years spent in Kansas. He attended the Fredonia State Normal School until the fall of 1879, when he entered the Boston Normal Art School. A year and a half was spent there, but the work was finally given up because of the over-taxing of his eyes. Returning to Fredonia, he was graduated from the Normal School in 1881. The following spring he went to California. After a year or two of out-door life, his eyes began to improve so that he taught school during 1884-5 in the mountains of northern California. Returning east in September 1885, he entered the University of Michigan in Ann Arbor, for the purpose of carrying on studies in Geology and Mineralogy. The summer of 1887 was spent on the Geological Survey of Minnesota. At the close of that year he returned to California because of overwork. He was married the following year, and returned in the fall to complete his course at the University, his wife also entering as a student. The summer of 1889 was devoted by him and his wife to studying the geology of the upper Lake Huron region. Three months was thus spent sailing 800 miles in a small, open boat. He was graduated in 1890, after three years and a half of actual study, and immediately obtained a position as geologist in the California State Mining Bureau, located in San Francisco. The most of the time during the following four years was spent in carrying on field geology over the State. About twenty scientific articles have been published in the "State Mining Bureau," and in the Geological Journals of America, including, "The Bulletin of the Geological Society of America"; "Bulletin of the Department of Geology"; "University of California"; "American Journal of Science"; "America Geologist"; "Geological Journal of Chicago"; "Science"; "Mining and Engineering Journal." The most important result of the geological work yet done has been to establish the fact of the much greater age, than had been supposed, of an important and extensive series of rocks in the Coast Ranges of California. He is a fellow of the Geological Society of America. He received the degree of B. S. from the University of Michigan on graduation day. Pursuing a course of study at the University of California, he received the degree of Ph. D., May 11, 1896. His Thesis was, "The Geology of Point Sal."

He married, June 1888, Bertha Helena Kemp, who was born in Wis., Nov. 4, 1867, daughter of John and Mary (McArthur) Kemp, now residents of Los Angeles, Cal.

NAMES OF PERSONS WHOSE LINEAGE HAS NOT BEEN TRACED.

MARYLAND FAMILIES.

About forty names, Fairbank and Fairbanks, appear in the Baltimore Directory, and there are fifteen or more families living in other parts of the state, which are not included in this genealogy. Circulars were sent to all of them, but not one was answered. Then six special letters were addressed to selected individuals in Baltimore, asking for information. Two only replied, and they were ignorant of their ancestry, and expressed their indifference and unwillingness to make any effort to discover it. One repeated the stale tradition that "three brothers came over" and settled in Talbot County. No better success attended the efforts of the compiler to obtain information about those who lived in the country. Therefore, the entire list was abandoned, though they may all be descendants of Jonathan, of Dedham.

WILLIAM FAIRBANKS, of Rhode Island.

Laborious researches and the expenditure of some money, have failed to reveal the antecedents of this man.

He has a large number of descendants, but only those named below have been found; that is, the Gloversville, N. Y. families, consisting of Niles H. Fairbanks, now, if still living, 88 years old, his children and grandchildren. Of these, Miss Minerva Fairbanks, and Minerva F. Fonda, her niece, have done their best to furnish information, but they could not go back of William and his family.

The circumstances lead to the inference that William was a grandson of Jeremiah (15), of Bristol, R. I., but his parentage has not been discovered. According to his old family record in possession of the Gloversville people, he was born on the Island of Prudence, R. I., in 1740 or 1745 (year blotted). The town records, it is said, were destroyed by the British in 1812.

He married (on the Island of Prudence) in Portsmouth, R. I., Sept. 5, 1766 (?), Priscilla Remington, who was born Apr. 23, 1741. Their children were:

1. Mary, born Oct. 24, 1767.
2. Jeremiah, born Dec. 9, 1769; he married I, Ruth ———, married II, Abigail———. He died in 1811, and was the first to be buried in the old farm lot in Perth, five miles from Amsterdam; his wife Abigail is also buried there. He had children as follows: William, John, Alfred, Edwin, Delilah. Alfred lived in Providence, R. I., for many years, married, and had a son Robert.

Note: — the following is from the Briggs genealogy, — "Alfred Fairbanks married Catherine, daughter of Stephen and Ruby (Weeden) Briggs, of Westerly and Phœnix, R. I. She was born about 1820-5; they had four sons and three daughters."

3. Remington, born Apr. 16, 1773; married Dorcas Helms, of R. I. She was the daughter of Niles Helms, a weaver of coverlids and that kind of cloth. After the destruction of the homes on the Island of Prudence, by the British, he with several other families, formed a colony, and removed to New York, taking a boat up the Hudson to Albany, thence to Amsterdam, where they settled. Their children were (a) Sally, who m. Willet Helms; (b) Ruth, who m. Jesse Marsh; (c) Polly or Mary, who m. Conrad Smith; (d) Betsey, who m. Jacob Wagar; (e) Russell; (f) Moses; (g) Niles (see below); (h) Irene; (i) Priscilla.

He died in Friendship, N. Y., where he and his wife are buried.

4. Ruth, born May 10, 1774.
5. Sarah, born April 25, 1776.
6. Jonathan, born May 22, 1778; married and had five children; Jeremiah, William, Louisa, Lidia and Amy.
7. Elizabeth, born Feb. 24, 1781; died Dec. 24, 1784.

NILES H. FAIRBANKS,

Gloversville, N. Y.

7. Mary, b. Jan. 2, 1856; died Sept. 29, 1856.

SAMUEL FAIRBANKS,

of Apalachin, N. Y.

It has been impossible to trace the ancestry of this man, as none of the descendants thus far heard from, know anything of his antecedents. It is possible, and very probable, that he was a son of Samuel, the eldest son of Samuel, of Ridgefield (87), as there was a slight trace of this man having married in New York State.

He was born April 8, 1780; died in Franklin, Pa., July 22, 1845. He married Anna Holdbrooks, who was born Apr. 11, 1784, and died in Franklin, Mar. 16, 1851. Their children as far as known were:—

1. Samuel.
2. Benjamin, born Feb. 17, 1808.
3. Charles.
4. Mary Ann.
5. Elizabeth.
6. Abbie.

A correspondent says: "In an early day, Samuel Fairbanks lived in Ohio, and Charles Fairbanks lived in Penn."

BENJAMIN FAIRBANKS,

THE OLD FAIRBANKS HOUSE.

DESCRIPTION OF ONE OF THE OLDEST HOUSES IN NEW ENGLAND.

A COLONIAL KITCHEN IN PURITAN TIMES.

CUPBOARDS AND CLOSETS. TREASURES FOR THE COLLECTORS.

[From a Boston Newspaper, 1885.]

All too rapidly the landmarks of the old colonial New England are disappearing, and it is only here and there that one finds even a trace of the early days of this country, that are just beginning to be filled with interest for the true American people. It is only until recently that we have begun to feel that we had a history; everything has been so near in time that it was impossible to gain any idea of the true value of events. But, as the years have passed, things have begun to assume something of the correct historical proportion, and a feeling of regard is felt for what represents the time of hardship and trial in the very beginning of the nation's life. As a people, the Americans have been always too impatient with the old, too anxious to get it out of the way, and to replace it with the new. Consequently, it is very rarely that any family is found to have occupied the same house for two hundred and fifty years, as has been done by the sturdy race of Fairbanks, who, through eight generations, have been born, lived and died in the quaint old house on East Street in Dedham. There is one surviving member of the family, to whom the homestead last descended, Miss Rebecca Fairbanks, who has lived there for several years, and she feels now that she can no longer be carekeeper of the old house and its contents, so that, very soon, unless either the town of Dedham, or some person or persons interested in preserving the old place as a historical memento, shall purchase it, the old house will probably follow the footsteps of so many of its contemporaries, and be pulled down to make way for something more modern and pretentious. It would be a great pity if this were to happen, for there is so little left of the old time that everything that does remain should be cherished carefully.

HUNDREDS OF VISITORS

go every summer to see the old house, but there are many more, living, too, within easy distance from it, who know nothing at all of its history, or think that it has any more claim for consideration than any house not half its age. It stands, nestling cosily in a grassy dell, just at the corner of East Street and the short road across the meadows that lie between East Street and Dedham, known as the "Willow Road," because for more than half its way it is fringed on both sides by luxuriant willow growths. This road is a "modern convenience," and its construction was frowned upon by the three old ladies who, twenty years ago, lived together in the family homestead. It made the road to the village shorter by half than the old way, but that had no weight with the inflexible women, who had inherited all the decision and firmness of a long line of Puritan ancestors. They protested against the building of the road, but when it was built, in spite of their protests, it is said that they declared they never would use it, and they kept their word. Constant attendants of the old Congregational Church in Dedham, they went persistently the longest way round, rather than, even for their own convenience, show any toleration for what they so honestly opposed. "Set in their ways," the neighbors called them, and so they were, "for conscience sake." There will be more to tell about them later on. The House is that have for years guarded it and shielded it from the too scorching sun of summer and the too searching winds of winter; the branches of these venerable trees interlace over the mossy roof and make a most perfect shade. It is a sunny corner, and in the winter, when the leaves are off the trees and shrubs, every corner is filled with brightness.

The builder of this house, Jonathan Fairbanks, came from Sowerby, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, England, in 1633. The family was an old one even then, and among the treasures still preserved in the old house are pieces of china and furniture that were old when they crossed the sea with Jonathan Fairbanks, thirteen years after the Mayflower found its way to the New England shores. This founder of the Fairbanks family in America settled first in Boston. He lived in that town for three years, and at the end of that time he went to Dedham and built him a house, the one that, standing still after a lapse of two hundred and fifty years, is the subject of this sketch. The town which the Puritan Fairbanks had chosen for a home was settled in the year 1635, and was called Contentment. The grant of land which it then comprised embraced the present towns of Medfield, Wrentham, Needham, Bellingham, Walpole, Norfolk, Franklin, Dover, Natick, Norwood and parts of Sherborn and Hyde Park. It was incorporated on the 8th. of September, 1636, and named from Dedham in Essex County, England, the name Contentment not suiting the residents. It was in this year, the year that saw the incorporation of the Norfolk County town, that Jonathan Fairbanks built his house. The windows and furnishings came from England, the frame was of solid oak, and the house was built in the thorough fashion that is now almost unknown. The windows had the same lozenge-shaped glass set in lead frames that we see in the old English houses to-day. These windows were long ago replaced by wooden ones, but the original windows are still preserved, although some of them are quite badly broken; still enough remains to give an idea of the quaint look which they gave to the house. Jonathan Fairbanks lived to a ripe old age and died in 1668, leaving six children, of whom the eldest, John, was left in possession of

THE OLD HOMESTEAD.

John Fairbanks is mentioned in the early history of Dedham as being sent by the selectmen in 1663, in company with another Dedham pioneer, whose descendants still live in the town, Daniel Fisher, to examine the land at Deerfield, then called Petumtuck. From him the homestead descended to his son Joseph. The family has always been well-known and highly respected in the town, and the name often occurs in the town annals. There has been little modernizing of the interior of the house; it remains in form and finish very much as it was when it was first built. It has an ancient gambrel roof, and the sides and roof are both moss grown, showing extreme old age. There is the old "lean-to," as it was called, the roof of which, extending from the roof of the house, reaches nearly to the ground. In the "lean-to" was the dairy. It looks toward the west, has low, latticed windows, and across one side are the heavy oaken shelves which used to hold the pans of milk. Here is the old cheese press, which did yeoman service for many years, standing in the same corner in which it has always stood, although it is many a long year since it has been used. The house is filled with old furniture and crockery that would tempt the purse of any lover of the antique. Even the Fairbanks' cats drink their milk out of ancient blue saucers that would drive a collector wild with envy and desire. Oh! the cupboards and chests and boxes in that old house! They are a very El Dorado of delight to the fortunate one who is privileged to look through them, under Miss Rebecca's careful and loving guidance.

EVERY PIECE HAS ITS HISTORY,

every article its story of association. The old kitchen, facing to the south, and looking out over the meadows that, in the summer, are one streak of green, is the room in which most of the interest seems to centre. The ceilings are low — so low that a tall person can hardly stand upright in it. The beams of solid oak, blackened by the smoke of years, give a sombre look to the room. The old fireplace has been closed up, and a modern cook-stove has been introduced, but on hooks across the beams still rests the old flintlock, which was brought from England by Jonathan Fairbanks. Generation after generation, as they passed away, instructed their successors to keep the old family gun in the iron rests put into the beam for it by its original owner. The fact that the gun hung in its place until recently, shows how carefully the injunction has been obeyed. It is a contrast to the rifles used to-day, but it has, no doubt, served its purpose well, and been used as a defence against savages and wild beasts. It is six feet and four inches long, and is too heavy to be lifted easily, or carried comfortably.* The old iron lamp still hangs here. It is a sort of boat, which, when it was used, was filled with lard oil. The wick was coiled about in the oil, the end projecting slightly above a small spout at one side. The light that it emits is about equal to the glimmer of a glow-worm, but it was accounted sufficient in those days, when, in addition to its light, there was the glow from the roaring wood fire in the wide old fireplace, the light from which illuminated every corner of the room, and made dancing shadows on the low walls. People in those days did not use light in the lavish fashion which we do; they kept early hours. For all the needs of that time, the lone dip was quite sufficient. This lamp hangs on a support, which admits of its being raised or lowered at will, and it could be adjusted to any height or position desired. In the daytime, it was raised so as to hang against the beam. There are the hooks where the crooked-necked squashes and the bunches of herbs used to hang. One can fancy the old kitchen festooned with these, and with links of sausage and horns and strings of dried apples. The heavy old oaken chairs still stand in this room, and the oaken tables and settle.

IN THE "KEEPING-ROOM"

or parlor is the closet where the old china is kept. Here is one piece of "old Dutch delft," that is literally worth more than its weight in gold. It has been broken, but was carefully mended, so that not a piece is lost, and it still retains its quaint shape, unmarred by nick. It is in the shape of a nautilus shell, is pure white, with a raised shell-like design about the edge, and it is very delicate in texture. These dishes are very rare. It is believed there are but three in this country. One is in possession of John Quincy Adams; another, it is supposed, has become the property of a collector, and this one at the Fairbanks house, which will probably go, when Miss Rebecca is ready, to the Art Museum in Boston. In this closet are the pewter platters and salvers which were once the delight of the housekeeper's heart. One of them is very old, and bears upon it the crest of King Richard III. There is a set of blue and white plate, queer blue figures on a white ground, supposed to be floral, but looking very fat and funny, quite unlike anything that is found in any botany. There are other pieces of old blue ware, that show less white, and the ground is a deep bright blue with a high glaze. There is a set of hand-painted china that is said to be very old, and some green ware that is older still. Decanters of various sizes are reminders of the time when "spirits" were as commonly seen as tea and coffee are now; and there are quaint little wine glasses with rather abortive attempts at engraving on them, which were accounted "marvellous fine and pretty" in their day, and which are among the earliest specimens of engraved glass in this country. The tall japanned coffee-pot, with the initials of Jonathan Fairbanks on the side, keeps watch over all this closet full of quaint old china, and, by its side, fat and comfortable, nestles the old pewter tea-pot. In vain have collectors tried to purchase even one piece of this precious china; money was no temptation; it could not be bought, but, if the house is sold, the china must go, too, and it will not be long, probably, before it is sold. A great deal of it will go to the Vermont branch of the Fairbanks family, and so will much of the furniture, but there will be then

TREASURE TROVE FOR COLLECTORS.

Next to this closet, the most fascinating places in the house are two chambers upstairs, where a great many queer old things are preserved. In one room, the room in which all the Fairbanks children, for generations, were born, is the little wooden cradle in which they were all rocked. It is by no means the luxurious affair of to-day, but it is strong, and, like everything else, is made of white oak. In this room is the old mahogany writing-desk, and in one of the pigeon-holes is a veritable ink-horn, with the old quill pen and the receptacle for ink underneath, which could be closely covered and carried in the pocket. This is a veritable curiosity to most persons, for they are not often seen nowadays. In the old chest are old laces and embroideries, old dresses made in the queer fashions of one hundred and one hundred and fifty years ago. Here, too, are the samplers wrought in cross-stitch, with all the letters of the alphabet, queer figures of impossible flower pots, with most improbable plants and blossoms growing out of them, and a highly moral verse of four lines in one corner. Rolls of old rewards of merit, printed in quaint letters, with an eagle at the top, announce that Nancy and Sally Fairbanks are commended for "good and amiable scholarship." These bear the dates of eighty years ago, and they were treasured most carefully by the little girls who won them, who afterwards grew up to be the inflexible women who would n't go to meeting over the new Willow Road. But, in spite of this, they kept their reputation for amiability, and were great favorites with the young people, who used to visit them, to hear the stories of the olden time. And they had a fund of them at their command, which they never wearied of telling to their young visitors and friends. There is in this same chest which Nancy exhibited on one of the school public days, as a proof of her penmanship. It has the alphabet in various kinds of letters, in vari-colored inks; there is ornamental work of all kinds, that was taught as a part of penmanship in those days; there are old maxims and chronicled historical events — all these form an elaborate border for the centre, which was a copy of the then celebrated poem of "Edwin and Angelina," written in script that, although quaint and old-fashioned in style, is none the less as clear as print. Miss Rebecca is going to have it framed by and by, as the most treasured relic of the past which she possesses. Nancy Fairbanks was accounted a fine scholar, and very accomplished for the time in which she lived, and, since her death, it has transpired that she would have had "literary aspirations," had such things been the fashion in her day. She did write verses, but the only relative to whom she confided the fact begged her to keep them to herself, else "folks would think she was weakening." The relative told Miss Rebecca of this after her aunt's death, and she looked in vain for the poetry. The dear old lady must have destroyed it after her rebuff by the unappreciative relative. The old bandboxes, which would appall the belle of today, if she was obliged to carry them about with her, are filled with old-fashioned bonnets, queer enough, but of such straw as no one sees the like of nowadays, and thick ribbons that are beautiful even in their age, heavier and richer than any that could be bought nowadays at any price. The other room is a veritable museum. Here is an old covered oaken chest of the time of Elizabeth, that came over with Jonathan Fairbanks, filled with English goods; here are the old four-post mahogany bedsteads with canopied tops, the ox saddle, the funny old fire-irons, the grain shovels, cut by hand out of one solid piece of oak, the brass warming-pans with elaborate engraving on the covers, the foot-stoves, which used to be filled with hot coals and carried to meeting to keep the feet warm during the two hours' service in the barren meeting-house, guiltless of fire. It is a queer mixture, old England and New England together, and it is a real matter of regret that they are all to be separated from the old house and from each other, after so many years of association. It is a genuine museum of curiosities, and every object has an association with a past that is full of interest.

A LAST APPEAL FOR THE FAIRBANKS HOUSE.

To the Editor of the Transcript:

That famous old landmark of the Colonial and Revolutionary days, the old Fairbanks House in Dedham, is doomed to destruction. It is of historic interest as being one of the oldest houses in America. Built in 1636 by Jonathan Fairbanks, the founder of the Fairbanks family in America, ninety-six years before Washington was born and but sixteen years after the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth, its quaint gables and picturesque architecture, as well as the magnificent elms surrounding it, mark it as one of the most delightful of the old landmarks of New England. Thus it stands today in a state of good preservation, with its ancient furniture intact, having withstood the vicissitudes of war and the ravages of time for more than two hundred and sixty-one years. During this whole period it has always been owned and occupied by the same family. It has a most interesting history. The frame was brought from Yorkshire, England, in 1633, at which time Jonathan Fairbanks, with his wife and six children, came to America. There being no roads at that time, there is little doubt that they sailed up the beautiful Charles River, and, attracted by the resemblance of the country to the English parks, chose the site of the house on which to build their home in the New World. The homestead has always been the property of their descendants, one of whom, Ebenezer, Jr., was a member of the Minute Men of 1776, and a man of considerable note. The house was left to his children, and descended finally to Miss Rebecca Fairbanks, who was obliged to sell it two years ago to John Crowley, a real estate dealer in Dedham.

The picturesque old house is too well known to need further description here. Its sloping roof reaching nearly to the ground, the low doorways, and the whole effect of the house set among the trees, is exceedingly picturesque. During the summer throngs of visitors from Maine to California visit this famous dwelling. The adjoining property has been laid out into "Fairbanks Park," and this old house will soon be doomed to destruction, as it stands on a valuable corner lot containing 38,000 square feet of land. Mr. Crowley offers to sell the property for just what he paid for it, $4,500, if an effort can be made to save it from destruction.

The purpose of this appeal is to try to arouse in the members of the patriotic societies here in Massachusetts a sense of the duty which they owe to themselves and to their country to try to preserve for Massachusetts this interesting relic of the Colonial days. There are 5,000 members of the patriotic societies alone in Massachusetts. If each would contribute a little, the preservation of this famous old landmark would be assured. Miss Rebecca Fairbanks leaves the house on May 1. If the house can be preserved she will leave in it the ancient furniture and relics identified with its history. THE FAIRBANKS HOUSE SAVED.

To the Editor of the Transcript:

It is with much satisfaction that I write to say that the preservation of the "old Fairbanks House" in Dedham is assured, thanks to the patriotism and generosity of two ladies, members of the Society of the Daughters of the Revolution. In response to my appeal in the Transcript of Saturday, the mail of Monday morning brought me not only the offer from Mrs. J. Amory Codman and her daughter, Miss Martha C. Codman, of the entire amount of the purchase money, $4,500, but also checks to the amount of nearly $1,000 more.

The latter will be returned to the donors with many thanks. The preservation of the "old Fairbanks House" is now assured, and Miss Fairbanks may be permitted to occupy it if she so desires.

Thanking the ladies and gentlemen who so nobly responded to my appeal to save this famous old landmark, and the Transcript for its cordial indorsement of this patriotic work.

struction was frowned upon by the three old ladies who, twenty years ago, lived together in the family homestead. It made the road to the village shorter by half than the old way, but that had no weight with the inflexible women, who had inherited all the decision and firmness of a long line of Puritan ancestors. They protested against the building of the road, but when it was built, in spite of their protests, it is said that they declared they never would use it, and they kept their word. Constant attendants of the old Congregational Church in Dedham, they went persistently the longest way round, rather than, even for their own convenience, show any toleration for what they so honestly opposed. "Set in their ways," the neighbors called them, and so they were, "for conscience sake." There will be more to tell about them later on. The House is that have for years guarded it and shielded it from the too scorching sun of summer and the too searching winds of winter; the branches of these venerable trees interlace over the mossy roof and make a most perfect shade. It is a sunny corner, and in the winter, when the leaves are off the trees and shrubs, every corner is filled with brightness.

The builder of this house, Jonathan Fairbanks, came from Sowerby, in the West Riding of Yorkshire, England, in 1633. The family was an old one even then, and among the treasures still preserved in the old house are pieces of china and furniture that were old when they crossed the sea with Jonathan Fairbanks, thirteen years after the Mayflower found its way to the New England shores. This founder of the Fairbanks family in America settled first in Boston. He lived in that town for three years, and at the end of that time he went to Dedham and built him a house, the one that, standing still after a lapse of two hundred and fifty years, is the subject of this sketch. The town which the Puritan Fairbanks had chosen for a home was settled in the year 1635, and was called Contentment. The grant of land which it then comprised embraced the present towns of Medfield, Wrentham, Needham, Bellingham, Walpole, Norfolk, Franklin, Dover, Natick, Norwood and parts of Sherborn and Hyde Park. It was incorporated on the 8th. of September, 1636, and named from Dedham in Essex County, England, the name Contentment not suiting the residents. It was in this year, the year that saw the incorporation of the Norfolk County town, that Jonathan Fairbanks built his house. The windows and furnishings came from England, the frame was of solid oak, and the house was built in the thorough fashion that is now almost unknown. The windows had the same lozenge-shaped glass set in lead frames that we see in the old English houses to-day. These windows were long ago replaced by wooden ones, but the original windows are still preserved, although some of them are quite badly broken; still enough remains to give an idea of the quaint look which they gave to the house. Jonathan Fairbanks lived to a ripe old age and died in 1668, leaving six children, of whom the eldest, John, was left in possession of

THE OLD HOMESTEAD.

John Fairbanks is mentioned in the early history of Dedham as being sent by the selectmen in 1663, in company with another Dedham pioneer, whose descendants still live in the town, Daniel Fisher, to examine the land at Deerfield, then called Petumtuck. From him the homestead descended to his son Joseph. The family has always been well-known and highly respected in the town, and the name often occurs in the town annals. There has been little modernizing of the interior of the house; it remains in form and finish very much as it was when it was first built. It has an ancient gambrel roof, and the sides and roof are both moss grown, showing extreme old age. There is the old "lean-to," as it was called, the roof of which, extending from the roof of the house, reaches nearly to the ground. In the "lean-to" was the dairy. It looks toward the west, has low, latticed windows, and across one side are the heavy oaken shelves which used to hold the pans of milk. Here is the old cheese press, which did yeoman service for many years, standing in the same corner in which it has always stood, although it is many a long year since it has been used. The house is filled with old furniture and crockery that would tempt the purse of any lover of the antique. Even the Fairbanks' cats drink their milk out of ancient blue saucers that would drive a collector wild with envy and desire. Oh! the cupboards and chests and boxes in that old house! They are a very El Dorado of delight to the fortunate one who is privileged to look through them, under Miss Rebecca's careful and loving guidance.

EVERY PIECE HAS ITS HISTORY,

every article its story of association. The old kitchen, facing to the south, and looking out over the meadows that, in the summer, are one streak of green, is the room in which most of the interest seems to centre. The ceilings are low—so low that a tall person can hardly stand upright in it. The beams of solid oak, blackened by the smoke of years, give a sombre look to the room. The old fireplace has been closed up, and a modern cook-stove has been introduced, but on hooks across the beams still rests the old flintlock, which was brought from England by Jonathan Fairbanks. Generation after generation, as they passed away, instructed their successors to keep the old family gun in the iron rests put into the beam for it by its original owner. The fact that the gun hung in its place until recently, shows how carefully the injunction has been obeyed. It is a contrast to the rifles used to-day, but it has, no doubt, served its purpose well, and been used as a defence against savages and wild beasts. It is six feet and four inches long, and is too heavy to be lifted easily, or carried comfortably.* The old iron lamp still hangs here. It is a sort of boat, which, when it was used, was filled with lard oil. The wick was coiled about in the oil, the end projecting slightly above a small spout at one side. The light that it emits is about equal to the glimmer of a glow-worm, but it was accounted sufficient in those days, when, in addition to its light, there was the glow from the roaring wood fire in the wide old fireplace, the light from which illuminated every corner of the room, and made dancing shadows on the low walls. People in those days did not use light in the lavish fashion which we do; they kept early hours. For all the needs of that time, the lone dip was quite sufficient. This lamp hangs on a support, which admits of its being raised or lowered at will, and it could be adjusted to any height or position desired. In the daytime, it was raised so as to hang against the beam. There are the hooks where the crooked-necked squashes and the bunches of herbs used to hang. One can fancy the old kitchen festooned with these, and with links of sausage and horns and strings of dried apples. The heavy old oaken chairs still stand in this room, and the oaken tables and settle.

IN THE "KEEPING-ROOM"

or parlor is the closet where the old china is kept. Here is one piece of "old Dutch delft," that is literally worth more than its weight in gold. It has been broken, but was carefully mended, so that not a piece is lost, and it still retains its quaint shape, unmarred by nick. It is in the shape of a nautilus shell, is pure white, with a raised shell-like design about the edge, and it is very delicate in texture. These dishes are very rare. It is believed there are but three in this country. One is in possession of John Quincy Adams; another, it is supposed, has become the property of a collector, and this one at the Fairbanks house, which will probably go, when Miss Rebecca is ready, to the Art Museum in Boston. In this closet are the pewter platters and salvers which were once the delight of the housekeeper's heart. One of them is very old, and bears upon it the crest of King Richard III. There is a set of blue and white plate, queer blue figures on a white ground, supposed to be floral, but looking very fat and funny, quite unlike anything that is found in any botany. There are other pieces of old blue ware, that show less white, and the ground is a deep bright blue with a high glaze. There is a set of hand-painted china that is said to be very old, and some green ware that is older still. Decanters of various sizes are reminders of the time when "spirits" were as commonly seen as tea and coffee are now; and there are quaint little wine glasses with rather abortive attempts at engraving on them, which were accounted "marvellous fine and pretty" in their day, and which are among the earliest specimens of engraved glass in this country. The tall japanned coffee-pot, with the initials of Jonathan Fairbanks on the side, keeps watch over all this closet full of quaint old china, and, by its side, fat and comfortable, nestles the old pewter tea-pot. In vain have collectors tried to purchase even one piece of this precious china; money was no temptation; it could not be bought, but, if the house is sold, the china must go, too, and it will not be long, probably, before it is sold. A great deal of it will go to the Vermont branch of the Fairbanks family, and so will much of the furniture, but there will be then

TREASURE TROVE FOR COLLECTORS.

Next to this closet, the most fascinating places in the house are two chambers upstairs, where a great many queer old things are preserved. In one room, the room in which all the Fairbanks children, for generations, were born, is the little wooden cradle in which they were all rocked. It is by no means the luxurious affair of to-day, but it is strong, and, like everything else, is made of white oak. In this room is the old mahogany writing-desk, and in one of the pigeon-holes is a veritable ink-horn, with the old quill pen and the receptacle for ink underneath, which could be closely covered and carried in the pocket. This is a veritable curiosity to most persons, for they are not often seen nowadays. In the old chest are old laces and embroideries, old dresses made in the queer fashions of one hundred and one hundred and fifty years ago. Here, too, are the samplers wrought in cross-stitch, with all the letters of the alphabet, queer figures of impossible flower pots, with most improbable plants and blossoms growing out of them, and a highly moral verse of four lines in one corner. Rolls of old rewards of merit, printed in quaint letters, with an eagle at the top, announce that Nancy and Sally Fairbanks are commended for "good and amiable scholarship." These bear the dates of eighty years ago, and they were treasured most carefully by the little girls who won them, who afterwards grew up to be the inflexible women who would n't go to meeting over the new Willow Road. But, in spite of this, they kept their reputation for amiability, and were great favorites with the young people, who used to visit them, to hear the stories of the olden time. And they had a fund of them at their command, which they never wearied of telling to their young visitors and friends. There is in this same chest which Nancy exhibited on one of the school public days, as a proof of her penmanship. It has the alphabet in various kinds of letters, in vari-colored inks; there is ornamental work of all kinds, that was taught as a part of penmanship in those days; there are old maxims and chronicled historical events — all these form an elaborate border for the centre, which was a copy of the then celebrated poem of "Edwin and Angelina," written in script that, although quaint and old-fashioned in style, is none the less as clear as print. Miss Rebecca is going to have it framed by and by, as the most treasured relic of the past which she possesses. Nancy Fairbanks was accounted a fine scholar, and very accomplished for the time in which she lived, and, since her death, it has transpired that she would have had "literary aspirations," had such things been the fashion in her day. She did write verses, but the only relative to whom she confided the fact begged her to keep them to herself, else "folks would think she was weakening." The relative told Miss Rebecca of this after her aunt's death, and she looked in vain for the poetry. The dear old lady must have destroyed it after her rebuff by the unappreciative relative. The old bandboxes, which would appall the belle of today, if she was obliged to carry them about with her, are filled with old-fashioned bonnets, queer enough, but of such straw as no one sees the like of nowadays, and thick ribbons that are beautiful even in their age, heavier and richer than any that could be bought nowadays at any price. The other room is a veritable museum. Here is an old covered oaken chest of the time of Elizabeth, that came over with Jonathan Fairbanks, filled with English goods; here are the old four-post mahogany bedsteads with canopied tops, the ox saddle, the funny old fire-irons, the grain shovels, cut by hand out of one solid piece of oak, the brass warming-pans with elaborate engraving on the covers, the foot-stoves, which used to be filled with hot coals and carried to meeting to keep the feet warm during the two hours' service in the barren meeting-house, guiltless of fire. It is a queer mixture, old England and New England together, and it is a real matter of regret that they are all to be separated from the old house and from each other, after so many years of association. It is a genuine museum of curiosities, and every object has an association with a past that is full of interest.

A LAST APPEAL FOR THE FAIRBANKS HOUSE.

To the Editor of the Transcript:

That famous old landmark of the Colonial and Revolutionary days, the old Fairbanks House in Dedham, is doomed to destruction. It is of historic interest as being one of the oldest houses in America. Built in 1636 by Jonathan Fairbanks, the founder of the Fairbanks family in America, ninety-six years before Washington was born and but sixteen years after the landing of the Pilgrims at Plymouth, its quaint gables and picturesque architecture, as well as the magnificent elms surrounding it, mark it as one of the most delightful of the old landmarks of New England. Thus it stands today in a state of good preservation, with its ancient furniture intact, having withstood the vicissitudes of war and the ravages of time for more than two hundred and sixty-one years. During this whole period it has always been owned and occupied by the same family. It has a most interesting history. The frame was brought from Yorkshire, England, in 1633, at which time Jonathan Fairbanks, with his wife and six children, came to America. There being no roads at that time, there is little doubt that they sailed up the beautiful Charles River, and, attracted by the resemblance of the country to the English parks, chose the site of the house on which to build their home in the New World. The homestead has always been the property of their descendants, one of whom, Ebenezer, Jr., was a member of the Minute Men of 1776, and a man of considerable note. The house was left to his children, and descended finally to Miss Rebecca Fairbanks, who was obliged to sell it two years ago to John Crowley, a real estate dealer in Dedham.

The picturesque old house is too well known to need further description here. Its sloping roof reaching nearly to the ground, the low doorways, and the whole effect of the house set among the trees, is exceedingly picturesque. During the summer throngs of visitors from Maine to California visit this famous dwelling. The adjoining property has been laid out into "Fairbanks Park," and this old house will soon be doomed to destruction, as it stands on a valuable corner lot containing 38,000 square feet of land. Mr. Crowley offers to sell the property for just what he paid for it, $4,500, if an effort can be made to save it from destruction.

The purpose of this appeal is to try to arouse in the members of the patriotic societies here in Massachusetts a sense of the duty which they owe to themselves and to their country to try to preserve for Massachusetts this interesting relic of the Colonial days. There are 5,000 members of the patriotic societies alone in Massachusetts. If each would contribute a little, the preservation of this famous old landmark would be assured. Miss Rebecca Fairbanks leaves the house on May 1. If the house can be preserved she will leave in it the ancient furniture and relics identified with its history. Will the "Sons" and "Daughters" of Massachusetts allow this famous old house to be destroyed?

FAIRBANKS CHAPTER,

UNDER "OLD GLORY'S" FOLDS.

On April 12, 1897, the Fairbanks Chapter of Dedham, of the Society of the Daughters of the Revolution was organized in the Old Fairbanks House, by Miss Sarah E. Hunt, Regent of the State Society of Massachusetts, assisted by Mrs. W. H. Emery, Vice-Regent. Mrs. Charles H. Fisher of Hyde Park, Mass., was appointed Regent of the new Chapter. Mrs. J. Amory Codman and her daughter Miss Martha C. Codman, whose patriotism and generosity saved the old house were present, besides other Regents of the different Chapters of the society, throughout the State, and many Dedham ladies with invited guests. The Fairbanks Chapter expects to hold monthly meetings in the old house.

The following is clipped from a Boston paper:—

Fairbanks chapter, Daughters of the Revolution, held a pleasant outing in Dedham yesterday afternoon. Sixty members and guests from other chapters gathered around the historic old Fairbanks house on Eastern avenue, where, under the folds of a large American flag, the chapter held its second meeting since organization.

Mrs. Charles H. Fisher, regent of the chapter, presided, and speeches were made by Mrs. Sarah E. Hunt of Salem, state regent, upon "What Good Comes to Us and What Good Comes to Others from Our Society"; Mrs. Nelson V. Titus of Boston, who was instrumental in saving the old Fairbanks house from demolition, upon "Save the Historic Houses of the Historic Places"; Mrs. Emma O. Perkins of Amesbury, upon "Chapter Work"; Mrs. H. E. Emery of Roxbury, upon "The Objects of the Society"; Mr. Frederick F. Hassam of Hyde Park, upon "The Efforts of the Men to Save the House"; Mrs. M. W. Allen of Walpole, upon "Reminiscences of the Fairbanks Family."

After singing America, a collation was served, and then the ladies visited the old Avery oak, the rooms of the Dedham Historical Society, the old training field, Pitts Head and other places of historic interest in the town.
